A crowd of several thousand persons, many of them from this city, stood in the near vicinity to watch the firemen and in so doing exposed themselves to the danger of explosions. Several did occur, one of them rather severe and in the rush to get out of harm's way several children were knocked down and trampled upon. At one time it was thought the Plainfield department would have to be called upon for help but it was afterward decided it would not be needed.

To Plan for Outings.

There will be a meeting of the outing committee of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. in the association this week to make plans for the Friday and Saturday outings for the department through the month of December. It is the intention of the committee to make a schedule of all trips which will be taken, either in and about the city or out of town. They expect to have a hiking trip every Friday and Saturday, and will include several interesting expeditions.

Boys' Hare and Hound Chase.

In order to get up a good appetite for their Thanksgiving dinner, the members of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department will go on a hare and hound chase Thursday morning, returning to the Y. M. C. A. about noon. They will plunge in the pool on returning, and if their appetites are not good for dinner there will be something the matter with the cook.

FIRE THREATENS VILLAGE

Flames Break Out in Bound Brook Paint Works.

LOSS IS ABOUT $15,000

"Billy" Holbert Turns in Alarm and Chief "Nate" Titsworth Leads Battle Against Flames.

The big plant of the Standard Paint Works was badly damaged and a dozen houses were scorched by a fire which broke out in the storehouse of the former at South Bound Brook at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon. At one time the entire village was threatened and was saved only by heroic work on the part of the Bound Brook firemen in charge of Chief Nathan Titsworth, formerly of this city, and the Standard's own department. They battled with the flames until 8 o'clock last night before the main plant and the neighborhood was declared out of danger. A conservative estimate places the loss at $15,000, partially covered by insurance.

The company's plant is just over the big Raritan bridge and directly on the Delaware and Raritan canal. When the flames were first noticed they were creeping up the side of the store house in which great quantities of inflammable material is stored in barrels. One of the first to notice the blaze and turn in an alarm was "Billy" Holbert, of this city, the well known minstrel man. The Bound Brook department was quickly on the scene and despite the danger of explosions from gasolene plunged into the fight. A gale was sweeping across the river at the time and the flames mounted high in the air and houses five blocks away had the paint blistered off. Luckily they were in an opposite direction to the main buildings and all they suffered was the burning off of a few cornera.

A crowd of several thousand persons, many of them from this city, stood in the near vicinity to watch the firemen and in so doing exposed themselves to the danger of explosions. Several did occur, one of them rather severe and in the rush to get out of harm's way several children were knocked down and trampled upon. At one time it was thought the Plainfield department would have to be called upon for help but it was afterward decided it would not be needed.

TURKEYS A LITTLE HIGHER

This Year's Prices in Advance of Last Season's.

LOTS OF POULTRY

A Few Facts and Figures Worth Studying Before Purchasing the Thanksgiving Supplies.

Though differing slightly in price and in quality from last year's assortment, there will be a fine lot of turkeys, ducks, chickens and game of all kinds in the local butcher shops this season. Nearly all of the butchers are carrying good sized stocks of game, and all are well supplied with ducks and chickens. As to turkeys, they are not as plentiful as in former years, and though in some stores they are bringing a higher price on the average they are about the same as the season of 1903. Most of the fowl are from Virginia, though Scheuer & Co. will have an assortment of fifty especially fine Jersey turkeys.

Reasonable prices prevail for ducks, rabbits and squirrels, especially at Roth & Co's. They are carrying a specially large assortment of the finest ducks. The prices of chickens will range from sixteen to twenty cents in nearly all the shops. As to weight the turkeys range from five to twenty pounds and are young, plump and tender. Endress is advertising the fact that not a single old bird will be in his store this year, as all are sent up direct from farms in the South.

Most of the chickens and turkeys in the local stores have been raised especially for food, and care and knowledge has been used to make them tender, juicy and good in flavor. For the most part they are the same that are sold in the markets in New York, and go for about the same prices, which run from twenty-five to twenty-eight cents, practically the same as last year.

Game is coming in steadily, and there is a brisk demand for rabbits, which are quoted at 50 to 65 cents a pair, the latter price for fresh killed and the former for cold storage rabbits. Quail cost from $4 50 to $5.50 a dozen; partridge, $2 75 and $3 a pair, and Mallard ducks $1.50 a pair.

The supply of fruit is abundant, and reasonable in price. Pine apples can be had for 15 to 30 cents a half peck, cocktail pears 15 to 20 cents a quart, and quinces from 60 cents to $1 per basket. Oranges are listed at from 40 to 50 cents a dozen, and grape fruit 10 to 15 cents each.

Vegetables of every variety are shown in large quantities, and the prices remain about the same as last week.

OBJECT TO ASSESSOR HAND'S REAPPOINTMENT

PETITION IN SECOND WARD TO BE PRESENTED TO MAYOR.

An apparent dissatisfaction with the work of assessment in the Second Ward has resulted in the drafting of a petition which is now being circulated among the residents of that ward requesting the Mayor-elect, James F. F. Buckie, not to re-appoint Charles H. Hand as a member of the Board of Assessors for the coming year.

Dissatisfaction with Mr. Hand's work as assessor, is reported to be the object of the request for dropping him. Mr. Hand has been a member of the Board of Assessors ever since the Board was constituted. He has for years been a contractor and engaged in real estate. For this reason it was understood that he was peculiarly fitted for the work of an assessor, having a general knowledge of the true value of real estate. The petition will be presented to the Mayor when he assumes his office, January 1.

OTHER CITIES FOLLOW

Effect of Common Council Increasing Liquor License.

COMMEND PLAINFIELD

Newark Evening News in Dwelling Upon the Subject Approves Local Council's Action.

The good effect of the Common Council's action in increasing the liquor license fee here is already apparent in other parts of the State where efforts are being made along similar lines. The Newark Evening News, New Jersey's greatest newspaper, in commending the wisdom of the city fathers of Plainfield in this matter said editorially yesterday:

"On January 1 next the retail liquor license fee in Plainfield will be $1,000, the amount fixed by the ordinance just passed unanimously by the Common Council. Only recently an attempt to raise the fee in Plainfield to that amount failed at the last moment, because of pressure brought to bear on certain officials by the representatives of the State Liquor Dealers' Association. So elated was that organization at its success in defeating the high license forces that it could not restrain itself, with the result that when it made public the methods by which it had gained a victory, there was a revelation of feeling in Plainfield, and the Common Council was forced to restore its vote and be guided by public sentiment rather than by the threats of organized saloon-keepers.

"But the success of the high license movement in Plainfield bids fair to extend beyond the bounds of that municipality. Already plans are being made to increase the license fee in the city of New Brunswick from $350 to $500, and at Atlantic City it is proposed to raise the rate from $500 to $1,000. Those who favor the increase in New Brunswick are preparing, it is asserted, to pass the necessary ordinance in January in such a shape that it will not take effect until the following June. It is probable, too, that there will be a clause in the ordinance fixing a limit on the number to be granted with the expectation that a considerable number of disreputable resorts will be compelled to go out of business.

"If these plans are carried out they will be in conformity with the growing public sentiment on the subject throughout the State. Passaic, which has a moderately high license fee of $500, with a limited number of saloons, has no cause to regret the change it made more than one year ago. Camden's license fee is $900, Lambertville's is $400, but there are no other cities in the State at present where the fee is any where near adequate. It is to be hoped, however, that this condition will not be long maintained, and the people may expect to see the example of Plainfield followed, to a degree, at least, in the near future, by a number of other municipalities."

BRYAN SENDS CONDOLENCE TO HIS FRIEND MARTINE

CORONER'S EDITOR BELIEVES PLAINFIELDER'S DEFEAT A SERIOUS LOSS.

That smile so noticeable on James H. Martine's face is puzzling those who do not know the inner nature of the "farmer orator," for to them it seems that a man buried under an avalanche of votes should be heartbroken. But Jim's buoyant spirits were more in evidence than in months for in last Friday's mail came a letter from his patron political saint, former Congressman William Jennings Bryan, the Napoleon of the Democratic Waterloo, made great by Roosevelt's victory.

To a few intimate friends, possibly 1,000, the "farmer orator" showed the priest letter which he will add to his Bryanese collection, consisting of thirteen photographs and copies of 200,000 speeches delivered by the Nebraskan all stored away in Cedar Brook farm. This is the letter:

"THE COMMONER.

"Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 12, 1904.

"Hon. J. H. Martine,

"My dear friend:—

"I much regret your defeat in the late election. I feel it is a real loss to the country.

"Truly your friend,

"W. J. Bryan."

Mr. Martine admitted that while his defeat may be a real loss, he has an idea that the Federal Government will still live.

APPETIZING DISHES SERVED BY YOUNG WOMEN

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH'S MISSION BAND GIVES A SUPPER.

Successful to a degree not attained by many of its predecessors, the annual supper of the Trinity Reformed church's Young Women's Mission Band was given in the lecture room Friday night. The affair was largely attended and the members of the organization had so carefully planned all details that it was enjoyed throughout.

The spacious room was tastefully decorated for the occasion in orange and white, the colors of the organization. Festoons of orange paper hung from the chandelier, while white and flowers were clustered here and there. With the tables scattered about, the room presented not only an attractive but an appetizing appearance. Supper was served from 6 until 9 o'clock. During and following the repast, plantation songs by the choir added to the enjoyment.

In addition to the supper, cake and candy were on sale and a fair sum was realized in this manner. Mrs. O. H. Clark and Mrs. P. B. Hodge presided over the candy table, and Mrs. Elizabeth Zeiss and Miss Cora Laire were at the cake table.

Much credit was accorded over by one of the young women of the society. They were six in number and were as follows: Miss Grace Emmons, Miss Anna Soaring, Miss Minnie Wyman, Mrs. Frank Pearson, Mrs. Leonard Smith, and Miss May VanFleet. Assisting them were the following waitresses: The Misses Anna Bodine, Achsa Holmes, Mabel Gano, Emma Line, Cora Miller, Eva Davenport, Lucie Cortell, Eva Dunavan, Kate Bodine and Ada VanDoren.

The general committee in charge of the affair was composed of the following: Mrs. Fred S. Cutter, chairman, Miss Anna Soaring, Miss Cora Miller, Mrs. Frank Pearson, Mrs. H. F. Crawford, Mrs. W. G. Staring. The subcommittee chairmen were Mrs. Leonard Smith, of the decorating, and Miss Lillian A. Force, of the emergency committee.

Mrs. H. W. Marshall, a member of the band, assisted very materially, by her work and planning, in making the supper the success it was.

Supper was served to 200. A goodly sum was realized for the cause of missions.

Approaching Marriage.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Louise Woodward Cleud, of Baltimore, and Hugh B. Reed, of Newark, brother of Charles A. Reed, of Myrtle avenue. The affair will be celebrated Saturday, November 26, at the home of the bride's parents in Baltimore.

Gave Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Faber, of the New Madison, gave a dinner party Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Isabelle Milne and Allan B. Laing, whose engagement was recently announced.

James Welsh, of the Pond shop, has been confined to his home by illness during the past two weeks.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had

The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less water and richer. For instance, New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

PRETTY LOVE STORY.

WHERE UNCLE JOE CANNON COURTED MOLLY REED.

A Romance of Ohio's Western Reserve Which Is Remembered with Pleasure by Scores of Happy Old Settlers.

Winfield (Kan.) Special.

The story of how "Uncle Joe" Cannon got his wife, as related by Col. S. E. Pink, of Winfield, Kan., is full of interest. Col. Pink was born at Canfield, O., the seat of Mahoning academy, where Molly Reed, who later became the wife of Speaker Cannon, was a school girl. The charms of this young woman, who was the flower of that then western settlement, are interestingly described by Col. Pink in his reminiscences of northeastern Ohio.

"That section produced some strong men and women," says Col. Pink. "Yankeedom, as a certain section of Ohio is called because of the Yankee settlers, was the center and heart of western abolitionism, the route of the underground railroad. In the days of the revolution the British burned the towns, villages and the homes of the people, and when the states ceded to the general government their lands Connecticut reserved this tract to reimburse its people, for their fire losses, and this Connecticut western reserve became the Yankee land of Ohio. The Connecticut Yankees immigrated to these lands and brought their abolitionism with them, and Yankeedom grew in Ohio.

"Yankeedom produced some mighty men—three presidents of the republic, Hayes, Garfield and McKinley, often were Joshua R. Giddings, Ben Wade and Mark Hanna. This was the early home of Gen. Chaffee, the son of a lawyer, and William Dean Howells, the author. Here lived Joe, the Ashtabula Sentinel, and his octogenarian father still does business at the old stand.

"Oberlin college was described as the union depot on the underground railroad, and was the first to receive into its classes male and female black and white, alike. The professors, when the fugitive slave law made hounds of men, refused to 'click,' became the Wellington rescuers and for their pains spent months in the Cleveland jail.

"In the early '30's, while these stirring events were being enacted and these mighty men were on the stage," says Col. Pink, "Molly Reed was a school girl in Mahoning academy at Canfield, on the southern borders of the Reserve, ten miles south of where McKinley first saw the light of life, and seven west of where he spent his boyhood days and put on the blue of a soldier. Canfield was then a beautiful little city set on a hill, with broad streets, thickly set with trees, the home of a cultivated, intelligent people, an ideal school town. Molly Reed was a beautiful, bright, rosy-cheeked, cherry-lipped, and happy girl. She had many admirers. They came and went with Molly's smiles or her frowns. Her beauty and her winsomeness made her the master, and her pathway was strewn with many broken hearts.

"In the summer of the great campaign, when the black clouds of disaster hung over the nation, Molly went to the then far-away prairies to visit her cousins and aunts. 'Uncle Joe,' then a boy lawyer, was fascinated by Molly Reed, and she in turn was won by him. In the face of this Molly returned to her home to await the coming of Joe in the springtime. One by one her companions learned, in confidence, of her betrothal until it became the village story that Molly was going to marry some fellow from the prairies.

"The marriage day had been fixed and the time of the coming of Joe was as widely known as that of her betrothal. But Joe did not come. It was before the days of railroads and the telegraph for Canfield and news from afar came slowly. Some Pennsylvania Dutch were sprinkled among the Yankees, and one of these in sympathy and wonder said: 'Molly, vwat vas dem matter mit dem still?' and she with candor and frankness answered: 'I can entertain a hope.' She spoke after the manner of her church, for Molly was a Methodist.

"Soon it became known that young Cannon was making his first political campaign, and as a candidate for district attorney, and when the battle was over he came to Canfield and carried away Molly Reed. There was sadness in many hearts when Molly left Canfield for their western home.

"On the prairies young Cannon and his pretty wife built their house. Since then over 40 years have come and gone, bringing renown to Joe Cannon, and with other joys he has been blessed. With the love of three daughters, Molly Reed, or Mrs. Cannon, is dead now, but there are scores in 'Yankeedom' who still remember her."

ECONOMY WON BRIDE

HAPPY RESULTS OF MR. YOST'S FIFTEEN-CENT DIET.

It Not Only Gave Him Rude Health and Untroubled Sleep, But Also Centered Upon Him the Love of a Wise Maid.

Many a man has won a bride because of his money. Many a husband has his wife because he made clear to her in advance that time with him would be one long gastronomic feast, spread and maintained regardless of expense.

But Lewis Yost, Jr., is an exception. He won his bride because he knew how to live on 15 cents a day. She was Miss Mary Lallie of Ft. Scott. Yost lives there, too, and is a world's fair contractor. Life would have looked bright to Yost but for the Nemesis of indigestion. Everywhere it pursued him. To counteract its dread ravages Yost began the study of diet.

Starting merely as a medical precaution, he became an enthusiast over the new style of eating, and discovered that not only had it cured his indigestion, but that he had found a means of reducing his table expenses that they nearly ceased to be an item in his bills.

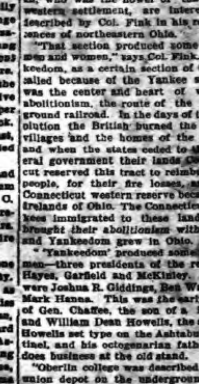
He went to board at the home of Miss Lallie.

She was attracted to the young man, but puzzled at his habits of life. "Why, he doesn't eat anything," she confided to one of her friends. Her own preference in the eating line ran to the solids—meats, vegetables, etc. It puzzled her to figure out how this sturdy young man could keep his vitality on a diet that seemed insufficient to support life for a child.

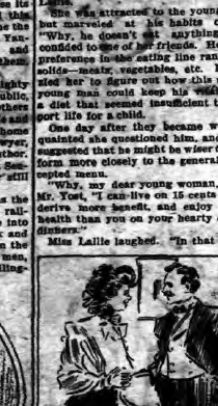
One day after they became well acquainted she questioned him, and even suggested that he might be wiser to conform more closely to the generally accepted menu.

"Why, my dear young woman," said Mr. Yost, "I can live on 15 cents a day, derive health, benefit, and enjoy better health than you on your hearty course dinners."

Miss Lallie laughed. "In that case,"



HON. JOSEPH CANNON.
(As a Youth Speaker of House Was an Ardent Wooer.)



FIFTEEN-CENT DIET WINS.

she said, jokingly, "you would make an interesting husband."

The incident did not end there. Inspired by his zeal to prove the wisdom of his regimen, and perhaps spurred on by some tenderer motive, Mr. Yoststuck to his wheat nuts and waxed fat and healthy. His indigestion was long since a thing of the past, and he slept perfectly.

Miss Lallie looked on amused at first, but gradually gaining in conviction. She kept for a time to her regular food, but eventually found that her health was not nearly so good as that of Yost.

Several months passed. Yost continued to live on his 15 cents a day and gave such convincing proof of his system that she finally capitulated. Then an agreement was reached that if one could live on 15 cents a day, there was no reason why two couldn't survive and be happy on 30 cents.

So they married. His 15 cents reigned over her, and she is glad it did. Indeed not only are they healthy and happy, but the greatest part of their income is left for the purchase of other things than food.

Mr. Yost has this to say for the system by which he won his bride:

"Our breakfast consists of coarse ground wheat, served with cream, dates, raisins, apples, fresh fruit in season, and entire wheat bread. For lunch we have the whole wheat bread, apples, dates, blanched almonds, and other nuts. Apple sauce, wheat muffins and wheat food figure in our supper. We never grow tired of this diet, for it is healthful and satisfying.

"If folks could only be sensible, thousands of dollars that are used in torturing the stomach could be saved to better use. Variety is the spice of life in food. If people would use the whole wheat bread, nothing would be lost in vitality, and they would get a good meal.

"This diet, together with carefully distilled water, costs but 15 cents a day, yet in health giving properties it is worth a hundred times that amount."

Music Reduces Mortality.

A surgeon in the British army noticed that when a wounded soldier was taken to within an easy hearing distance of music, hemorrhage was greatly reduced or stopped. It is believed that the vibrations of the air produced by the music causes the patient to become faint, in which case the action of the heart is so considerably lessened that the overflow of blood is reduced.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of literary news. This will be done by taking the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and the notice. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make them the expression of real service to the reader by advising him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers in the Public Library Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of new books on a given subject.

FIGHTING RECLUSE'S WILL

Second Attempt to Frustrate Her Disposition of Wealth.

SEEK A COMPROMISE

Somerville Woman Bequeathed $65,000 to Charity, Cutting Off Relatives.

Porter Lord, of New York, made a second attempt to break the will of his half sister, Miss Alsiene Lord, who died two months ago in Somerville and left an estate valued at $65,000 to charity after disinheriting her relatives, on Tuesday before Judge Lewis H. Scheuer, in the Somerset County Court. Miss Lord was known in this city. Nelson Y. Dungan, counsel for the plaintiff, informed the court that Mr. Lord was ill and could not appear in court. The case was postponed until November 25.

An effort is now being made to obtain the consent of the beneficiaries to a compromise which will enable the plaintiff to obtain a share of her sister's estate.

Miss Alsiene Lord was the daughter of Halsey Lord, a New York merchant, who, a quarter of a century ago, owned a dry goods store at 170 Duane street, New York. She was a woman of brilliant intellect and many eccentricities, who lived the life of a recluse in a servants cottage in the aristocratic quarter of Somerville. She never allowed anyone to enter her house during her life, and when she became ill she left her abode and died at the home of a neighbor.

After her death it was discovered that she had spent the last twelve years of her life in two scantily furnished rooms secretly guarding one of the largest collections of memorandas and family treasures ever hoarded by a woman.

The former parlor to garret was filled with trunks, barrels and boxes, containing enough merchandise to stock a small department store. These were recently sold at public sale. The sale lasted two weeks, and probably there never was an auction of any kind in any community that furnished a greater sensation or more food for public gossip.

Society women big high in their strife to gain possession of the rare silks, laces and jewelry, china and bric-a-brac that had been stored away for a quarter of a century by the eccentric recluse. Thousands of dollars were realized by the sale, which will be divided among Miss Lord's beneficiaries if the will remains unbroken.

Just how Miss Lord came into the possession of this houseful of old treasures is a great mystery, which Somerville is expecting will be cleared up at the trial.

MARCONNIER AFFAIR

A DECIDED SUCCESS

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT DREW A LARGE CROWD.

An excellent entertainment was given Thursday at Marconnier chapel by talent from this city and Metuchen. There was a large attendance. Twenty-two people went from this city in a stage. Miss Augusta Aken, of Metuchen, a well-known elocutionist, gave several selections which were greatly enjoyed.

Miss Florence Bennett and Edward D. Young sang duets, and Miss Bennett sang soprano solos. There were also vocal solos by Horace J. Martin. Miss Pearl Martin was the accompanist of the evening, and she also gave piano selections. Each number on the programme was well received and a gratifying sum was realized from the entertainment for the benefit of the chapel. The affair was under the direction of Mrs J. W. Sobenck, who is in charge of the chapel work, and she was assisted by Mrs. George W. Leighton, a helper in the chapel.

Pardon Board to Get to Work.

By order of Governor Murphy, Judges J. D. W. Troost, John W. Bogert, George R. Gray, William H. Vredenburgh, Elmer Ewing Green and Peter R. Voorhees, all members of the Court of Pardons, have been appointed a committee to investigate the applications for pardons before the next Court of Pardons. This is the same committee as acted last year. December 1 has been set as the last day for the filing of applications for pardons.

LAST OF GRIGGS' LECTURES

Shakespearian Course Concluded Last Wednesday.

"THE FINAL ATTITUDE"

Professor Spoke of "The Tempest" as the Summary of Shakespeare's Own Life.

Concluding a course of six interesting and instructive lectures on Shakespeare, Professor Edward Howard Griggs delivered a talk Wednesday, Nov. 16, in Vincent chapel on "The Final Attitude," taken from "The Tempest." More of a romance, said the speaker, than a tragedy, "The Tempest" is of calmer action, more peaceful, and on the whole the broadest interpretation of human life which ever came from the pen of Shakespeare. The play of the great writer has shown a deeper insight into morality, and whereas in his other tragedies he has portrayed worldly consequences and results, in "The Tempest" he has looked further into the soul and has risen to the crowning ethical height of his literary genius.

That this drama, calm as it is, should have come near the close of Shakespeare's life, as institutionalist author had struggled always to be mystery of Hamlet, of his fellow-men ethical awakening of Lear, as to realms in a seven-fold octagon in the mystic Venice," and finally arrived at the attitude when forgiveness seems better than revenge, is significant of the author's conception of humanity. The wisdom born from experience had, shown him how insignificant, and yet how infinite, life is.

The character of the whole play, the lecturer presented it, is Prospero. It is the marvelous intellectual power of this man, like the philosophy of Hamlet, yet with additional power of action, that is the background for the entire drama. His unscrupulful love of his daughter, Miranda, his lustful control of Ariel and Caliban, his quick thought and action, and above all his co-operation with destiny, mark him as a broader character than Hamlet. It was this additional breadth of character that led Prospero not to seek for vengeance when his enemies had bowed before him, but to turn to forgiveness, and peace.

If it may be premitted "to identify the master with the creation," the lecturer said, the life of Prospero was necessary summary of Shakespeare's own life, and Prospero's laying aside of his magic and his art, is parallel with Shakespeare's retirement from the literary world.

Floor Marked for Basket Ball.

The gymnasium floor of the Y. M. C. A. has recently been marked out with white lines outlining the basket ball field and showing the center circle and foul lines. A circle twelve feet in diameter has been inscribed around both of the foul lines, outside of which players must stand when a foul is being thrown. Both in respect to size and to light, the local Y. M. C. A. floor is by far the best basket ball field in the city, as there are no posts to interfere with the play, as is the case in the other halls of the city.

REVIEW OF CONFERENCE

Peace Convention Discussed by Society of Friends.

INSTRUCTIVE MEETING

Attendants at the Conference Told of Their Impressions In An Interesting Manner.

As a fitting conclusion to one of the most successful half-yearly meetings in the history of the organization, the semi-annual session of the Society of Friends ended Thursday afternoon with an interesting and profitable discussion of the Peace Conference which took place at Boston some months ago.

The review of the conference, held by various members of the society, who were in attendance, was decidedly instructive, and as each speaker presented his impressions of the event, its history was vividly and completely covered. Edward Borden, of Moorestown, spoke at some length of the work accomplished by the Peace Conference. He said that the affair was in charge of Parliamentary leaders, and that representatives from all countries, with the exception of Spain, were present. The speaker brought out the fact that all the countries agreed that the United States should take the lead in establishing the Hague Tribunal. Mr. Borden referred especially to Secretary Hayes' address, and to the speech by President Roosevelt.

Among others who spoke on the topic of the afternoon were John H. Shotwell, of Asbury Park; Phoebe Wright, of Sea Girt; Frances Barright, of Asbury Park; William H. Riley, of North Plainfield; Henry Haviland, of Brooklyn, and Henry W. Wilbur, of New York.

In the evening a delightful social was given at the [illegible] home, which was well attended, and thoroughly enjoyed. A feature of the evening was a spelling bee, and several recitations by members of the society. Refreshments were served in the latter part of the evening. The social was in charge of Mrs. Mary Shoemaker.

SUPERIOR OFFICERS HOLD ANNUAL SESSION

CHIEF KIELY ELECTED TRUSTEE AND PLACED ON TWO COMMITTEES.

Chief Kiely and Roundsman Flynn, both of whom are members, were in attendance and represented Plainfield at the annual meeting and dinner of the Superior Officers Protective Association at Newark, Thursday. In the election of officers, the chief was made a trustee for three years and was also placed on two committees, organization and legislation. The banquet which followed the business session was a sumptuous affair, surpassing all previous affairs.

The full election of officers resulted as follows: President, Captain Cleary, of Trenton; vice-president, Chief Tenney, of Elizabeth; treasurer, Captain Peters, of Elizabeth; recording secretary, Sergeant Perrine, of Trenton; financial secretary, Inspector Archibald, of Jersey City. The other trustees beside Chief Kiely are Detective-Sergeant Woodruff, of Atlantic City, and Detective Sergeant Prescott, of Jersey City.

Incorporated to Sell Machines.

Articles of incorporation of the Singer Sewing Machine Company have been filed with County Clerk Calvert. The company is capitalized for $1,000,000. The objects, as set forth, for which this corporation is formulated, are to acquire and take over from the Singer Manufacturing Company of New Jersey and to conduct in the State of New Jersey and elsewhere the business of selling and disposing of the sewing machines and other articles manufactured by said company as said business has heretofore been carried on by it.

Nurses' Alumni Meets.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Rev. 37: "An Inspiring Outlook In Realize"—Matt. ix, 36-38; ...s, 1-7.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES.

"As ye go, preach, saying, the kingdom of heaven is at hand." "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give."

Other lands and other centuries have seen marvels of grace and wonderful transformations among men by the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ but no age and no country has ever more rapid, substantial and extensive reformation of life than has taken place in India in the last half-century. Nor has any other church been more signally prospered of God in this work than has our own.

A few years since the Christian world was startled by the news of thousands of natives in the Baptist mission fields in the southern parts of the peninsula forsaking their idols and ancestral faith and seeking the God of the Christians.

These scenes have been more than paralleled in our own work in the past few months. Men and women who would be baptized and gathered into the church is limited only by an ability to provide pastor-teachers who shall instruct these new converts in the Christian faith and practice. We must not forget the example of the great Roman Catholic missionary, Francis Xavier, who in his same India baptized multitudes, but did not succeed in changing their heathenism because of lack of persistent teaching the ways of truth and righteousness.

A baptized heathen is little if any better than an unbaptized heathen either for this world or the next. He must be Christianized, which is much more than merely evangelized. This does not mean the change of costume or architecture or speech to conform to the customs of some foreign nation. But it means the purification of the spiritual nature from lust of carnality and worldliness, and the setting of the indwelling of the nature of purity and love; then the development of this in society according to the genius of each people in its own land and times.

The prospect in India was never before so inspiring as now. The people who come to us now are realizing the true nature of what we seek, as was not the case years ago. Then they are coming from a sincere desire for liberation from idolatry and for the other advantages in trade and society they might receive from becoming Christians.

Again, we are going better equipped, and are pushing the fight more effectively. Formerly [illegible] we have ever been able to do heretofore. We are not beginning the heathen again turning them back into [illegible] channels of life to receive the [illegible] and [illegible] they [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] proving the purity and unity of the gospel through its [illegible] [illegible] in the more modern [illegible] and thinking.

Our schools and hospitals and presses and home visitation are making a new India in which dwell purity and hope and righteousness.

Then the extent of the field as it opens so rapidly to our agencies is inspiriting. In 1856 we planned to work in one small section and among people of but one language. Providentially the work has enlarged beyond all imagination of the pioneers, and now we are working among the Himalayan snows and on the south coast of the peninsula, and beyond the shores of Burma to far Singapore on the Malacean strait we have followed the calls for aid and entered the open doors.

No member of our church, especially no Epworth League, should neglect to obtain a broad knowledge of our progress in India, our present condition and prospects and to pray for the coming of the kingdom.

Sincerity In Religion.

Christian practice as an evidence to a man's own self of the sincerity of his religion is to be preferred to any discoveries or exercises of grace whatever that begin and end in contemplation. Sincerity in religion consists in setting God highest in the heart, in loving Him above all things. But a man's actions are the proper trial what a man's heart prefers. To forsake all for Christ in heart is the very same thing as to have a heart to forsake all for Christ. But certainly the proper trial whether a man has a heart to forsake all for Christ's sake is his being actually put to it, actually doing it when other things come in competition with it or so far as called to by providence not in a heart and to intend to do the will of God, but in a heart to do it.—Jonathan Edwards.

The Right Sort.

A hard head is a great treasure if it is found in the way of righteousness. Religion is a frequent loser from the want of will force in its professors. This sort of energy that pursuits toward the good is like the X rays, which penetrate the deepest and solidest ordinary obstacles cannot arrest.—Central Presbyterian.

Too Little Praying.

We have a little spring face to face with God every day. Looking back at the end, I suspect there will be great grief for our sins of omission—omission to get from God what we might have got by praying.—Andrew A. Bonar.

I Will Give You Rest.

It may be a long day's journey,
And our hearts may feel weak and old.
But start with the Master's blessing
And go back at night to his fold.

Back to the rest and comfort
That come from a talk with Him.
At the sound of His "Well done!" or "Fear not!"
The cares and the worries grow dim.
—Forward.

CAUGHT BY HIS TROUSERS

Iron Limb Holds a Night Prowler Until Officers of the Law Release and Arrest Him.

David Brooks was arrested on the limb of a tree in a yard at 544 Second street, Louisville, Ky., the other night by the police. David had been prowling about William Grom's rear yard, and when it was evident the family was alarmed, had thought it best to retire.

There is a tree in the Grom yard and a powerfully high fence. David thought to reach the one by climbing the other, and this he did just as Sergt. Davis, Corporal Guenther and Patrolmen Werhle and Horn, summoned from con-tral station, entered the front yard. But drink was David's undoing. About one-fourteenth of what had been a quart of whisky was still in the bottle. From his position in the tree David leaped for the fence, but somebody probably fate—had driver a nail, as old rusty nail, in the very tip of the limb, and there David's trousers caught. Straight through the seat of his newly acquired trousers the old rusty nail plunged, and there David hung. Had the limb been firm he might have left only his trousers to be captured by the officers, but David hadn't. Frank him freely, and so the charge of suspected felony was placed against him at the county jail.

"I thought like I was dead when I woke up," said David, who is colored, "but that old second-hand dealer persuaded me to buy 'em."

KITTENS IN CLERK'S COAT

Given North to Family in Official's Garment and Refuses to Be Disturbed.

When business was done and it was time for everybody in the Tribune police court, New York, to go home the other afternoon "Charlie" Anthes, one of the clerks, reached for his coat. He found it all right on the floor and then the office cat had taken it for a bed. The cat seemed indisposed to surrender it. "Charlie" investigated, and found the cat had two reasons for refusing. Each was a kitten.

"Well, I'll be darned!" said the clerk. Just then the telephone bell rang, and

WHAT THE CLERK SAW.

"Charlie" answered it. When he got back and tried to take possession of his much needed garment he found the cat had reenforced with three more reasons, and the kittens were five.

"Keep the old coat," said the clerk, and, borrowing one from a friend, he left the cat in possession.

When he got up to the Seneca club at Twenty-sixth street and Broadway he found that the story of his experience with the cat and kittens had preceded him. Nearly every member of the club had a picture of a cat or a kitten, and handed it to "Charlie."

Lightning Plays Queer Prank.

Lightning played a queer prank in the home of Miss Ethel Spooner, at Harrisville, R. I. It entered her parlor, striking the bird cage, and the hook and chain by which it was suspended were thrown through the open door into the next room; the spring had disappeared, probably being melted by the bolt, and the cage itself was blackened and hurled to the floor. The canary that occupied the cage is still as lively as ever.

Courtship Long Drawn Out.

Bohemia is the country of long courtships. In no other part of the world are they so abnormally drawn out. It is not rare to hear of engagements which have existed from 15 to 20 years. An old man died recently in Prague at the age of 96, who had been courting a sweetheart for 62 years.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting To Be For the Week Beginning Nov. 27.

Topic—How intemperance hinders salvation—Rom. xiv, 19-21.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

In this chapter Paul enjoins the weak and the strong to treat each other considerately. If the strong can do what the weak cannot the weak are not to set themselves up as judges over the strong, for God is our judge. On the other hand, because the strong can rightfully do what the weak cannot they are not to press their rights even to the point where their exercise is injurious to their weaker brethren. Especially is this true when only such an insignificant matter as meat is involved. They were to give up no principle, yet would it pay to sacrifice a soul in order to assert the right to eat all kinds of meat because it was of God? Christ died to save the souls of men. Will we destroy him with meat for whom Christ died? No true Christian could take such a position. For some graces sake we are not to endanger immortal souls.

This truth may be applied to intemperance and missions. Intemperance has always been a foe to religion, and wherever it has gone on mission fields it has been one of the greatest hinderers of missions. Nothing else could result, and therefore it seems incredible that the same nation sends both religion and rum to the heathen peoples of the world. But it is the old story of personal gratification, personal gain. Eliminate the large profit of the liquor business, and where could you find men to own and manage them? If the New York saloon was closed, should one to such a result it would mean a great element of success in the warfare against the saloon. Men will do almost anything for money, and hence the same vessel carries the gospel and rum according to the same people. Had should we for personal gain destroy him for whom Christ died? Infinitely rather let us be poor all the days of our lives than to barter in the traffic of human souls.

That intemperance hinders missions is a self evident fact. The people who receive both rum and religion from another nation lose confidence in the religion when they see the results of the rum. The missionaries are discouraged. Those who come under intemperance's blighting curse are unfitted to be affected by the power of the gospel. In these and other ways missions are hindered by intemperance. Christian nations should stop the liquor traffic with the peoples of our mission fields. It is a burning shame to say nation to permit alcoholic drinks to be sent to the nations of the world when there are in our midst those to whom its Christian citizens are striving to send the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. No nation should bear down and [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BIG CROWD AT THE TRAPS

Gun Club's All-Day Tournament Largely Attended.

ELEVEN EVENTS

Professionals and Amateurs Participate—"Jap" Canvas Of Most of the Honors.

By far the largest crowd that ever witnessed a shooting match in this city, gathered on the Holly farm, opposite the—Driving Park, Saturday, where the tournament of the Plainfield Gun Club took place. Starting at 10:30 in the morning it continued until nightfall, compelled a cessation and during the intervening hours, fully 600 persons watched the professional and amateur marksmen drop the clay birds. The affair was decidedly a success from any point of view and the promoters are entirely satisfied that the sport is by no means unappreciated locally.

There were eleven competitions in the tournament and trap shooters known throughout the country took part, although the professionals were not allowed to take any of the prizes. Honors for the day went to Charles Fulton Oliver known as "Jap," the Winner of the Grand American Handicap. Although in the amateur class he beat the experts and captured first prize in nearly every event. Great interest centered in the special event for local shooters which brought out a lot of contestants. It was last on the list and though the greater part of it was shot by moonlight some good scores were made. Bert Johnson stamed first, breaking thirteen out of the fifteen birds and winning a rifle. "Billy" McCarthy, of the local police force, won second prize, a silk umbrella. Elmer Cutting and Arthur Case tied for third place and Frank Terry, Harry Drulet and Henry Hazrand tied for fourth.

Among the professionals in attendance were Frank Butler, husband of the world-famed Annie Oakley; "Jack" Welles, of Schoverling & Welles; "Sim" Glover, of the J. H. Lee Company; James Elliott, of Kansas City, the national champion, who won the $2.50 gold piece offered for the highest average made by professionals; Neal Agnew, of this city; F. Williams, the western coon; Marshall Herrington, trap editor of "Hunting and Fishing," and W. R. of Newark, eastern correspondent of "American Field."

UNION GAVE ROOSEVELT EXACTLY 5,434 MAJORITY

COUNTY ELECTION BOARD COMPLETED ITS WORK THURSDAY.

The Union County Board of Elections and Registry met at Elizabeth Thursday and completed the count of the electoral vote polled at the last election. It is as follows: Republicans, 13,909; Democratic, 8,475; Prohibition, 1; Socialist, 134; Socialist-Labor, 555; People's Democratic, 130.

The Board has arranged to recount the vote in Rahway, where a contest has been made by two candidates for the Common Council. They have paid the $100 the expense for the recount. The vote will be recounted at Elizabeth before Judge Swayze. It will be remembered that one candidate received two majority over his opponent and this led to the contest. It has also been intimated that there are other discrepancies which will show up when the votes are counted.

The Board met in session yesterday lawyers appeared and asked to see the vote in the 42d First district of Elizabeth. The vote here was quite close and some of the candidates on the defeated tickets do not seem to be satisfied with the result. It is possible that the vote in this district may be recounted.

It is reported that considerable displeasure has been expressed over the condition of some of the returns which apparently have been in the part of election officers. There were also some errors to be corrected.

Have Running Candidates.

James E. Martine, the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, proved to be one of the best running horses that the party had in this State. In almost every section of out down Congressman Fowler's majority and in Union county, where both candidates live, he walloped Mr. Fowler surprisingly. In Elizabeth alone Martine received votes ahead of Parker, and beat Fowler's vote by 158. He was the only Democrat who carried the city. In Plainfield he ran 510 votes ahead of his ticket. Roosevelt's plurality in Union county was 8,280; Fowler's only 2,401. Had there been normal majorities in the districts Fowler would have probably been defeated.—Washington, N. J., Star.

An Obdurate Clergyman.

Rev. E. E. Jackson, as secretary, and Rev. Scott Wallace, as a member of a church council, attended a session held at West Park, near Asbury Park, last week, to inquire into the merits of the claim of the congregation for the resignation of the pastor of the Second Baptist church, Rev. Dr. Boles. The result of the discussion was as to whether Mr. Boles should resign. He refused to get out, claiming that God sent him to the church and he refused to go until so instructed by Him.

W. de la R. Anderson Married.

William de la Roche Anderson, of New York, whose summer residence is near Washington Rock, was married Saturday afternoon to Miss Amy Gordon Olyphant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Olyphant, of East Fifty-second street, New York. The ceremony was performed in the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards officiating.

WHERE IS KUROKI?

Japanese Commander Again Reported Dead.

PORT ARTHUR'S THREE DEFENSES.

Japanese Lost Five Hundred Men in Minor Attacks on Kaulagan and Position—Cruiser Kaluga Leaves Vigo.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Advices from Mukden say that reports of the death of General Kuroki are persistent in spite of denials and are revived by Chinese coming from the Japanese camps.

First Lieutenant Schupikoff, who has just arrived from Port Arthur, reports that the Russians have laid out three lines of defense, which the Japanese must capture before they can reach the city, after which the Russians can retire to the outer forts, which are the strongest. The garrison, which comprises more than 4,000 men, is in good spirits. Lieutenant Schupikoff believes that the fortress can hold out at least until the end of January.

The Japanese lost 500 men in the attacks on Sandagan of Nov. 17 and 18 and were evidently disheartened. When they received the attack Nov. 19 the Japanese sent out several battalions from Double Humped hill, but their movements lacked decision. The Russians opened fire from Pouchiloff (Lone Tree) hill and a neighboring eminence. Several shells burst in the midst of the advancing Japanese column and quickly checked them. The Japanese also tried a turning operation at Chanlihe, but there also they were dispersed.

There was a slight encounter when a force of Russian scouts penetrated a short distance into the Japanese lines, but without much result.

A Vigo (Spain) report says that the Russian auxiliary cruiser Kuban, which arrived there Nov. 19, has sailed southward. It is reported that her condenser is damaged.

WRECK AT SWIFTON, ARK.

Hot Springs Special Has a Freight, One Dead.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 23.—A special from Hoxie says: "Passenger train No. 17, southbound from St. Louis, known as the Hot Springs special, on the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern railway, ran into an extra freight train which was taking the siding at Swifton, a small town twenty miles south of here.

"Harry Wells, dressing on No. 17, was burned to death, and Engineer A. Degler of the same train was badly hurt, his arm being broken. Four persons, whose names were not obtainable, were injured, one of them seriously. Several others were bruised and otherwise slightly injured.

"The passenger engine was demolished, and three coaches and ten freight cars were burned.

"The wreck was caused by the density of the smoke from the forest fires, making it impossible to see twenty feet ahead.

"The estimated loss is $100,000.

Usual Accident to Airship.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23.—After remaining in the air for forty-five minutes only, owing to an accident to the motor, the Montana Meteor, the airship designed and constructed by Thomas Benbow of Columbus, Ohio, was brought safely to the ground three miles southeast of the world's fair aerodome. The airship was navigated by the inventor, who stated after the flight that he considered it very successful in the light of the accident that happened to his machinery.

Governor Asked For Resignations.

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 23.—Governor Bliss sent letters to John T. Hoffman and Dr. Otto Breitmeyer, members of the Wayne county, asking them to resign, and stating that if the resignations were not tendered voluntarily steps would be taken to secure them otherwise. Coroner Hoffman is out on bail on a charge of receiving money from the state under false pretenses, and Coroner Toepel is under a bond to answer to a charge of contempt.

MOB READY TO LYNCH

Military and Police Held Lexington Jail.

THREE NEGROES IN PERIL OF ROPE

Officials Found It Necessary to Remove Prisoners to Louisville That They Might Be Safe From Violence.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 23.—The mob that threatened to lynch the negroes Garfield Smith and John and Edward Taylor, held in jail here for killing a white man last Sunday night and attempting to kill other white people, was dispersed as day dawned. The troops and extra police have retired, and the jail is guarded now only by deputies. It is believed that all danger of lynching is past. The preliminary hearing of the negroes was the cause of much excitement. They were taken to the courthouse in a patrol wagon guarded by twelve policemen. A large crowd had gathered at the jail, and the streets were lined with excited people. The patrol wagon was driven at breakneck speed to the courthouse, where the negroes were held for the grand jury. The same exciting scene attended the return of the negroes to jail.

Smith and the two Taylors were taken under heavy guard to Tarnallton Station, seven miles from the city, and there put aboard a Chesapeake and Ohio train for Louisville, where they will be kept until the authorities believe it safe for them to appear for trial here.

Rev. R. C. Kirkwood has started a fund to buy a home for the widow and ten orphans of the murdered white man, and an effort to raise a large sum will be made. The feeling of the six negroes armed with shotguns on the outskirts of the city shows there is an ugly feeling among a certain element of the negroes, which may lead to clashes with whites. However, good and sober and the better class of colored people are using their utmost to keep down the race feeling, deploring the acts of the miscreants and counseling deference to the courts. The funeral of Morris Prewitt, the murdered policeman, has caused much excitement, and the feeling was against Smith and that the men may be taken back here for trial.

Valley Negroes Ready to Secede.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23.—Fifty thousand negroes, women and children, will march on the second and third floors of a leading Morgan street boarding house, according to the plans of the negroes living from windows to escape fires held by firemen, by creeping their way to the street down smoke and fire filled stairways and by climbing down fire escapes and ladders from the roofs of adjoining buildings, to be taken down by firemen. Four women injured in their efforts to escape, are at the city hospital. One of them is unconscious and will probably die.

Suits Against Consolidated Men.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 23.—In the corporation court yesterday suits amounting to $20,000 were entered against J. Edward McCue, now in prison awaiting execution for wife murder. The largest amounts are for $5,000 in notes held by the Jefferson National bank, and for $4,000 in notes held by the People's National bank. After the arguments of the attorneys Judge Morris decided that as the man sued is a felon he is incompetent to defend the suits.

Pushkat at the Fair.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23.—Another ovation was given Prince Pushkat at the Imperial Japanese gardens, which he visited again in the course of his round of sightseeing at the world's fair. On either side of the avenues along which the prince's carriage passed hundreds of Japanese greeted the imperial party with cries of "Banzai!" The prince and his party were the honored spectators at a drill of the 23d regiment of the United States infantry.

PREACHED "SIMPLE LIFE"

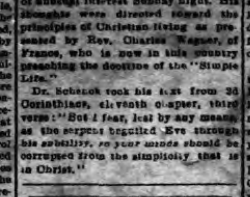
Rev. Dr Schenck's Sermon on Live Topics.

LIFE TODAY TOO FAST

Minister Declared That President Roosevelt Really Lives a Simple Life in His Home.

From the subject "The Simple Life and the Simple Gospel," Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached a sermon of unusual interest Sunday night. His thoughts were directed toward the principles of Christian living as practiced by Rev. Charles Wagner, of France, who is now in this country preaching the doctrine of the "Simple Life."

Dr. Schenck took his text from 30 Corinthians, eleventh chapter, third verse: "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtility, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ."



Rev. Charles Wagner, Author of "The Simple Life."

Mr. Schenck said that contrary to the opinion of many in these parts of the world he does not agree with what he believes, and that is to throw the strength of one's character into faith is shown. He said it was to be believed with Pastor Wagner that one should not live so fast and hasty, that one should live the simple life, devoting time to meditation, prayer and quiet, and that all should strive to follow God and His commandments. Dr. Schenck said that the simple life is the natural outcome of the simple gospel.

He referred to Presidents Roosevelt, saying that outside of his busy life, in the quiet of his own home, he lives that simple life. He thought that the people today are living too fast and that a sufficient amount of time is not given to thoughts of Christian living, and it was this that he urged all to do, to try and live the simple life, which is a direct outcome of more thought and attention to the simple gospel.

During the service, Horace J. Martin sang a solo, very acceptably.

COUNTY COMMITTEE TO SEE INAUGURATION

HAMILTON F. KEAN ARRANGING FOR TRIP TO WASHINGTON MARCH 4.

Arrangements are being made by County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean, of Elizabeth, to have the entire county committee, which numbers sixty-five members, and perhaps three times that number of invited guests, go to Washington on March 4, to attend the inauguration of President Roosevelt. It is probable that a special train will go out from Elizabeth on Friday, March 3, arriving in Washington early Saturday morning, the day of the ceremonies.

Four years ago the committee took out 175 people, and it was said at that time to have been the finest train which ever left Elizabeth for any similar event. Invitations to attend the inauguration exercises at Washington with the County Committee are open, and anyone, by communicating with Mr. Kean, can arrange to go with the party.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement the Union, as Well as Its Limitations as to Its Authorities."—Madison.

CROSS, MODEL LEGISLATOR

Newark Evening News Pays Tribute to Union's Senator.

ADVICE TO VOTERS

More Men of His Calibre Should be Elected by the People, It Declares.

"The papers throughout the State, irrespective of party, are referring to Senator Cross in the highest terms, and declaring that his selection to be the president of the Senate is in every way commendable. There is no doubt that this general praise is sincere, because Senator Cross has deserved it. He is recognized as a man of ability, of irreproachable character, of legislative experience and of those qualities that especially fit him to be president of the Senate. In the event that he should, through the absence, sickness or other incapacity of the Governor, be called to act as the Chief Executive, the popular sentiment is that Senator Cross would be equal to the occasion, and would honor this high office as he has honored all others that he has held.

"In view of this general manifestation of strongly appreciative sentiment and the well-earned compliments that are now being showered on Senator Cross, the question naturally arises, Why are not more men of his stamp and character sent to the Legislature? Why, if the people like him so well, if they admire such sterling integrity, such executive ability, such aptitude for excellent legislative work, do they not seek out men that belong to the same class and make them, term after term, the lawmakers of this State? Why are there so few such men in the House and Senate that exaltation of one, to the most responsible and honorable position next to the Governorship, is received with such general satisfaction?

"There are several members of the incoming Legislature who will probably make excellent records. Their qualifications differ to some respects from those of Senator Cross, but they are of the same thoroughly honest and conscientious stripe and they stand for the best interests of their counties and the State. They are quite certain to make their mark in the House or Senate, even though they never reach the presidency. But why are there not more of them? Why are there so many of the other kind, who, even though they may sit in the highest seats in the Legislature, inspire only larger distrust and provoke unrest from the time they take office until they leave it?

"The reason is because the people, in whose hands is all the power, do not make such selections as they themselves approve. Senator Cross never sought to become an office-holder, resisted for a long time all the efforts to get him to accept a nomination, but was chosen by the people because they wanted him as their representative. In the majority of instances it is just the other way. Either some ambitious young man wants an office and pushes better but more modest men aside, or the 'machine' puts in nomination some man who has gained the place by doing the undesirable work for the party.

"In every county it is possible to find men who are capable of representing the best sentiment and the best interests of the people; men who would honor their respective counties as Senator Cross has honored Union. Yet in some, men of indifferent abilities are chosen, and in others neither personal honesty nor legislative ability is a prerequisite to election. It is easy to recognize both personal and legislative virtue, and if the people do not select and elect men with these qualifications it is their own fault."

Historical Society Meeting.

The Somerset County Historical Society met Monday afternoon in the First Reformed chapel at Somerville. Delegations from all over the county were in attendance. Several valuable relics were received and placed in the society's vaults. The chief feature of the meeting, however, was the paper read by Rev. William H. VanDoren, of Griggstown, on "A Detail of the American Revolution." The story which he wrote of had been handed down to him from his forefathers, who were foremost in entertaining General Washington and his army at Griggstown, after the retreat from Trenton and Princeton. The destitution of the soldiers and their patriotism were vividly described.

TEXT OF MR. TYLER'S BILL

Proposed Measure to Establish Liquor License District.

METES AND BOUNDS

Amendments to Present Ordinance as Advocated by Third Ward Councilman.

That persons interested in Councilman W. S. Tyler's ordinance to amend the ordinance to license inns and taverns, the object of which is to better regulate the sale of malt and spirituous liquors in this city, may become fully acquainted with the provisions of the proposed ordinance, the full text is herewith given:

"Section 1. That said ordinance be amended by adding thereto two new sections, as follows, to wit:

"Sec. 27. That in order to enable the Common Council more effectively to regulate the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors within said city as they deem most conducive to the public good, the place in which any applicant for license to sell spirituous and fermented, vinous, malt or brewed, liquors, under this ordinance or any supplement thereto, proposes to carry on his business under such license, is hereby required to be accurately set forth in the application for such license, and to be within the territory comprised within the following boundary lines, to wit: Beginning at a point in the city line at Green brook distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet northeasterly from the center line of Watchung avenue; thence running southeasterly along said city line to the center line of Washington avenue; thence southeasterly along the center line of Washington avenue to the center line of West Front street; thence southwesterly along the center line of West Front street to a point distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet southwesterly from the center line of Central avenue; thence southeasterly in a course drawn parallel with the center line of Central avenue distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet southwesterly therefrom to the tracks of the main stem of the Central Railroad of New Jersey as the same now lies; thence northeasterly along said tracks to a point of said tracks distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet southwesterly from the center line of Park avenue; thence southeasterly in a course drawn parallel with the center line of Park avenue distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet southwesterly therefrom to a point in said course distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet northeasterly from the center line of West Fourth street; thence northeasterly in a course drawn parallel with the center line of West Fourth street and East Fourth street to a point in said course and the projection thereof, distant one hundred and fifty (150) feet northeasterly from the center line of Watchung avenue; thence northeasterly in a straight line to the point of beginning. Provided, nevertheless, that the foregoing provisions of this section shall not prevent the granting of any renewal of any license lawfully in force at the time this section takes effect to the same person who shall have been the lawful holder of such license continuously from that time to the time of such renewal, to continue the same business in the same place under the same name, without the right to transfer such license to any other person.

"Sec. 28. That no application for a license under this ordinance, or any supplement thereto, other than an application for a renewal to continue in the same place a license already lawfully in force, shall be granted to any person to sell spirituous and fermented, vinous, malt or brewed, liquors, in any place which shall be distant less than two hundred and fifty (250) feet from any public school building, or church, or from any building used mainly as a place of public worship."

Mrs. Elizabeth Martin's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, thirty-six years old, was held in St. Bernard's church at Raritan at 9 o'clock this morning. Father Zimmer officiated. The body was taken to Scotch Plains for interment. The dead woman was the wife of William Martin and is survived by three children. She died in Somerset Hospital, Somerville, from a complication of diseases. She had been ill a week and in the hospital only a day.

OLD FOLKS' CONCERT

Unique Entertainment at Local Y. M. C. A.

Given by Holy Cross Choir Under Direction of J. Edmund Skiff.

Unique in style and highly entertaining, the Old Folks Concert given by the choir of the Holy Cross church, under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, at the Y. M. C. A. last evening, proved to be one of the leading musical events of the season. The selections, both sacred and worldly, of old and recent publication, were well arranged, and were rendered in a manner which does credit to the performers and to the instructor, Mr. Skiff.

The choir was assisted by these soloists, Mrs. F. M. Ward, Mrs. Stephen Tugwell, Miss S. Etta Hayberd, Frederick J. Pope, and Miss Alberta Waterbury, pianist. The entire chorus was assured in the musical sessions, and the programme was arranged and worded in a unique way appropriate to the nature of the concert.

In addition to the solos, which were all well rendered, the singing of the chorus was particularly good, and received much applause. Several antique selections were on the programme, which was a delightful combination of old and modern music. A chorus of women's voices rendered two selections which were very well sung, while Miss Rayberd's solos were a feature of the concert.

The chorus was composed of these singers: Dame Samantha Hopkinson, Mrs. Samuel H. Howe; Celeste Hope Mayflower, Miss Jennie DeMott; Lunetta Starbright, Miss Annette Hoesbing; Marjory Daw Sunflower, Miss Florence Conway; Dame Experience Hegur, (the deacon's wife) Mrs. B. S. Hall; Cynthia Billings, Miss Laura Geeswein; Lavinia Highhoter, Miss Etta Rayberd; Dame Patience Dolling, Mrs. F. M. Ward; Mary Phoebe Ann Tobbs, Miss Agnes Bailey; Prudence Dolling, Miss Viola Llevers; Dame Matilda Mobcap, (She that was Higgins,) Mrs. A. J. Stiglits; Dorothy Orabtree, Miss Ethlyn Davis; Susannah Cradlebow, Miss Edith Cline; Consider Ruth Fisher, Miss May Smith; Abigail Prue, Miss Mabel Smith; Dame Charity Applegate, Mrs. Stephen Tugwell; Prudence McIntosh, Miss Mary Edgerton; Dame Hepzibah Stark, Mrs. J. CRESCENT COMPANY ENTERTAINS FRIENDS

UNIFORMED KNIGHTS GIVE FIRST OF A SERIES OF SOCIALS.

Marked by a large attendance despite adverse weather conditions, the first of a series of monthly receptions and entertainments was conducted by Crescent Company, No. 15, U. R. K. of P., in its rooms, last evening. It was in every way a decided success and a pleasing start to what promises to be a season of activity with the organization.

Captain J. H. Flannery acted as chairman during the evening and the programme was given under his direction. It comprised a welcoming address by City Judge William N. Runyon, vocal selections by Bertram C. Firstbrook, Alexander Muir, Thomas Muir and Judge Runyon; piano and violin duets by the Misses McInnis and graphophone selections by John F. Hall. In addition, a lecture on the friendship of Damon and Pythias, illustrated with slides, was given effectively by David Bowden. Refreshments were served during an intermission and an hour was spent in informal sociability.

The committee which arranged and had charge consisted of David Bowden, chairman; Robert Gow and Charles McGinley. They were ably assisted by members of the company and women friends.

Getting Down to Business.

Councilman-elect Charles C. Randolph will be sworn in today and will attend the adjourned meeting of the Common Council tonight.

JERSEY GAVE 80,598 PLURALITY TO ROOSEVELT

OFFICIAL COUNT FOR THE STATE IS COMPLETED.

Roosevelt's plurality in New Jersey at the last election was 80,598, and Edward Casper Stokes, for Governor, Republican, received the unprecedented plurality of 81,644. These official figures were announced today by the New Jersey State Board of Canvassers, which completed the work of verifying the reports of the election officers last yesterday afternoon.

The total number of votes polled in New Jersey was 426,170. The Presidential candidate's majority over all other candidates was 80,809. The average vote cast for other Presidential electors in the State follows: National Prohibition, 6,338 1-12; Socialist, 9,563; Socialist Labor, 2,676½; People's Democratic, 5,786½.

The average vote cast for the twelve Republican electors was 245,127½ and for the Democratic electors 164,549 5-6.

In the Congress campaign among the successful candidates were: IVth district, Wood, Republican, 8,696; Vth district, Fowler, Republican, 6,364.

PARK CLUB BOWLERS DEFEAT ELIZABETH CLUB

TAKE TWO OUT OF THREE GAMES IN FIRST LEAGUE MATCH.

The Park Club bowlers won their first match in the Central Journal Bowling League last night against the Elizabeth Club, the games being rolled on the local alleys. The match was a close one, the deciding game being won by the narrow margin of three pins.

All the Park bowlers rolled a steady game, and most of the scores were very creditable. Barlow, of the local team, was high man for the evening, while McCutcheon, also of the Plainfield aggregation, had the highest average of 191. Barlow's score was 208. The highest average of the visiting team was made by Keys, the score being 177.

The following is the chart of the match:

Park Club.
Barlow	184	208	165
Townsend	186	153	171
Willis	180	149	180
Ball	168	167	160
McCutcheon	203	181	190
	871	858	866
Elizabeth Club.
Tucker	153	205	195
Meaney	169	183	149
Kiggins	180	143	201
Keys	165	166	201

Judge Runyon in the Cast.

Judge William N. Runyon has joined the Oshkosh Glee Club and his excellent voice will materially add to the success of the concert to be given by the club in the Casino on Friday and Saturday evenings, January 20 and 21. Seats will be put on sale immediately. All will be reserved. The stage at the Casino is now being deepened twenty feet for the purposes of the show, making it very nearly as large as the old Music Hall stage. There are fifty persons in the cast, including practically all who appeared last year, and with the addition of the Misses Hess and E. A. Butler, of this city.

Educational Boards to Meet.

What promises to be one of the most interesting educational meetings held in Somerville in a long time will be in the assembly room of the public school Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, when the Boards of Education of Somerset county will convene. H. Brewster Willis, of New Brunswick, county superintendent of Middlesex, will make the chief address. After a discussion the members will dine at Cawley's Hotel.

Interested in Rescue Work.

At the conference on rescue work, held yesterday and Monday at Trenton under the auspices of the New Jersey Florence Crittenden Association, E. C. Harder, of this city, second vice president of the State society, was recommended to the national executive committee for confirmation.

Reception and Tea.

Mrs. W. A. Garrigues, of Watchung avenue, and her sister, Miss Maxwell, have issued invitations for a reception and tea to be given at the home of Mrs. Garrigues on Thursday afternoon, December 8.

3D ADJOURNED MEETING

Common Council Still Has Business of the Month.

"SPITE HOUSE" QUESTION

Probable That This Matter Will be Considered Through Report of Committee.

The third adjourned meeting of the Common Council will be held tonight, there still being some business of the month to attend to. One matter which brings the members together tonight is that in reference to Collector-elect Robert L. Lee's bond. It was to have been presented for approval on Monday night, but a technical defect necessitated it being laid over until tonight when Mr. Lee will have it ready for approval.

Another matter that may come up this evening is that in reference to the "spite-house" question. The committee having this matter in hand will probably be ready to make some kind of a report and it is believed that it will prevent future troubles such as Former Mayor L. F. Randolph had on East Front street.

It is not at all unlikely that Mr. Tyler may attempt to take from the table his ordinance to restrict the liquor licenses district to the business section of the city. He is quite anxious to have the question settled one way or the other and rather than have it left on the table for an indefinite time, he may force action on it.

Since some of the citizens have had an opportunity to closely examine the ordinance, they are now in favor of it, believing that it will work no hardship on any of the dealers. However, it is known that several members of the Common Council are opposed to the ordinance. Certain members feel that it would be very unwise to define the limits in this way, in fact he is not so sure in his mind but that it might be a good thing to have a well-regulated place at a convenient point outside of the business section instead of compelling persons who care to take a drink to leave it and go two to get the liquor. They do not believe that it is within the province of Common Councils to restrict the liquor traffic to this extent.

There is no doubt in the minds of the Common Council but that John Goff will make another attempt next year to secure a license for his place on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, but judging by the present makeup of the Common Council he has no more reason to expect a license next year than when his original application was refused this year. Many persons feel confident that in face of the strong opposition to a saloon in that section of the city this year, the Common Council would not want to grant such a license.

However, there is reason to believe that pressure will be brought to bear to have the license granted if applied for.

MOVEMENT TO MAKE CHANGES IN COUNCIL

HINTED THAT CERTAIN FORCES WANT NEW PRESIDENT.

While it is the hope of the many friends of the Common Council that Ralph I. Tolles, who is president of that body, will be continued in that position next year, it has been hinted that there are certain forces at work to replace him with another member from the floor and to thus work a general change in some of the important committees. A year ago when the committees were made up, it is known that there was some dissatisfaction as certain members thought that they did not been given due honors. This feeling, it is said, is now showing itself again and that when the members meet to fix up the organization for another year, changes will be asked for.

No mention of a possible successor to Mr. Tolles has been made, although it is known that there are aspirants for the place. Friends of the president claim that he has performed a sufficient amount of hard work on the committees to entitle him to the position he occupies and that it is the least honor that his fellow-members can bestow to continue him as the presiding officer. He has served in a very satisfactory manner, showing fairness and impartiality to every member. No doubt any effort made to elect another president would be met with strong opposition.

Mrs. Edward Baker, of Watchung avenue, who has been seriously ill, is now convalescing.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY FAIR

Meeting Held Yesterday in Interest of Coming Bazaar.

IN BABCOCK BUILDING

Affair to be the Largest and Most Extensive Ever Held in This City —Eleven Booths.

For the purpose of a final discussion of the plans for the fair, a meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., was held yesterday afternoon at which time the chairman of all committees reported, and the work was found to be progressing rapidly. It has been decided to hold the fair in the Babcock building, and these persons will have charge of the different booths: Japanese, Mrs. Roger Murray; aprons, Mrs. F. C. Harder; candy, Mrs. Walter Freeman; dolls, Mrs. Frank Hubbard; fancy work, Miss Lena Bass; brushes and brooms, Mrs. Stephen Cahoone; handkerchiefs, Mrs. A. G. Jenkins; paper booth, Mrs. Wheaton Lowrey; country store, Mrs. S. H. Prusch; lemonade, Miss Edith Cairns; children's table, Mrs. H. A. Edgar.

The affair will be the largest of its kind ever conducted in this city, and will be held for three days. Turkey supper will be served every night, the following committees being in charge: Tuesday evening, Seventh-Day Baptist, Methodist and Congregational churches, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Mrs. George Rittenhouse, and Mrs. Beckman; Wednesday evening, Crescent Avenue, Park Avenue Baptist, and Grace M. E. churches, Mrs. Howard Runyon, Mrs. Most, and Mrs. D. M. Runyon; Thursday evening, First Presbyterian, Trinity, First Baptist and Episcopal churches, Mrs. Howard Pope, Mrs. J. B. Probasco, Mrs. Scofield, and Miss Helen Pfender.

There will be eleven booths on the main floor of the Babcock building, while the basement will be used as a restaurant. Ice cream and cake will be on sale at all hours, the doors being open on Tuesday, and on Wednesday and Thursday.

MISS EMMA VORDERMEIER NOW MRS. HENRY HAURAND

WEDDING AT BRIDE'S HOME ON FAIRVIEW AVENUE LARGELY ATTENDED.

Miss Emma Vordermeier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vordermeier, of Fairview avenue, and Henry Haurand, of East Front street, were married at the home of the bride last night in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Paul Melborn, pastor of the German Lutheran church, officiated. The bridesmaid was Miss Amelia Vordermeier, a sister of the bride and the best man was Eugene Chrystal, of Rochester, N. Y.

The bride was gowned in pearl grey satin, with white lace and pearl trimmings, and she carried a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid wore white silk, trimmed with velvet and white lace. The parlors were tastefully decorated for the occasion in white and green, and the couple was united under a beautiful floral arch.

After the wedding and informal reception the bride and groom left for a short wedding trip after which they will return to this city, where they will reside at the home of the bride's parents until their new house is completed.

Somerset's Petit Jurors.

Sheriff Cooper drew his first jury at Somerville yesterday in the presence of a large crowd. The jury was drawn for the December term of county courts, which opens in Somerville on Tuesday, December 27. The jurors selected from North Plainfield were John S. Schenck, Winfield B. Conover, Henry Nischwitz, Simon Manss and George A. Schmidt. Warren will be represented by Frank Allette, George Nuse and John Gaston.

Pleasant Surprise.

The election of Charles C. Randolph, of Dunellen avenue, to fill the vacancy in the Common Council caused by the resignation of Robert L. Lee, was as much of a surprise to him as any one else. Until informed of the fact on Monday night he had no knowledge of the intended action.

Belated Announcement.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wenzel, of the West End, have announced their marriage which took place in May last. The bride was Miss Bessie Kenyon, who, for some time, was employed at S. C. Peck's store.

COUNCILMEN INDEPENDENT

Members Act With Perfect Freedom on Any Measure.

AN UNPLEDGED BODY

Votes on Recent Measures Show That Members Are Unhampered in Any Way.

That there has not in recent years been so much freedom and independence of thought and action in the Common Council as at present, is the opinion of those who have closely followed this municipal body during the past twelve or fifteen years. For many years, when the Republican organization was more completely in control of the governing body than it is today, it was always safe to count on six votes being cast on any important matter coming before it. During the past two years things have changed and today it is impossible to count on the same number of votes to carry a measure through.

This result is largely due to the fact that men have been elected to the Common Council who exploded and who, as they have felt free to act according to their best judgment. While it has never openly been charged that this or that man was compelled to vote on any question according to the dictate of some leader, there has been an opinion that this has been done more or less. Leaders among those who have taken an independent stand include Mr. Tyler and Mr. Daniel from the Third ward. They have shown time and again that they are free to use their own judgment and have never hesitated to express themselves for or against a measure, whether it pleased the other members or not. Both members are practicing lawyers and they can appreciate the value of being technically right as well as morally so.

President Tolles, from the First ward, as well as his colleague, Mr. Bullock, have also shown their independence by not always voting to please this or that party. This was shown in the question of raising the liquor license fee to $1,000. On the first and second readings of this ordinance there was opposition to it on the part of Mr. Higham, member at *large from the Third ward; Mr. Mur*phy from the Fourth ward, who afterward voted for the ordinance, and the other two members from the Fourth, Mr. Randolph and Mr. Lee, as well as Mr. Glenk, from the First ward. The other members voted for the ordinance.

Another illustration was shown Monday night in the division of the vote on Mr. Tyler's new ordinance to limit the saloon district. The opinions of the various members all varied as to the advisability of passing the ordinance, but on the question to table all voted in the affirmative, until further consideration can be given.

Still another case was that in reference to selecting a successor to Robert L. Lee. That the matter was not "fixed" before hand was evident, for subsequent action showed that scarcely any of the members knew of Mr. Higham's candidate, in fact some were unprepared to vote for Mr. Randolph.

A members of the Common Council in speaking of this question yesterday, intimated that if the same inde*pendence is maintained next year he* thought there would be some lively times and that possibly Mayor-elect James F. Buckle would not have as pleasant a time as otherwise.

Slight Fire in the Borough.

The borough fire department was called out yesterday afternoon for a slight blaze at the residence of I. F. Allen, on Pearl street, near Watchung avenue. A pile of rags left in the basement became ignited and spread to the flooring, afterward creeping up into the beams of the first floor. A line of hose was laid but the flames were put out with extinguishers.

Weeden in "The Sho-Gun."

Many persons who remember W. C. Weeden when he appeared here with Rev. Dr. Henderson, the evangelist, in a series of meetings, a few years ago, will be interested to learn that he now has one of the leading parts in "The Sho-Gun," at Wallack's Theatre, New York. Mr. Weeden has a fine, rich tenor voice, and is making a decided hit.

Dinner for Debutante.

Mrs. H. H. Ladd, Jr., will give a dinner for Miss Virginia Hegeman, who recently made her debut, on Tuesday night, December 13, at her home on Sheile avenue.

There will be one the informal dances at the Park Club on Saturday night under the auspices of the entertainment committee.

ZOOLOGY OF THIBET

SOME QUEER ANIMALS FOUND IN THAT STRANGE LAND.

Each Different Climatic and Physical Division Is Tenanted by Its Distinct Group of Animals.

In the course of a conversation on Thibet a sporting friend once remarked to the writer: "Oh! yes, that is the country where the llamas come from." This, of course, was a confusion between llamas and lamas; but although Thibet is not the home of llamas, it is, nevertheless, the habitat of quite a number of peculiar types of large wild animals, indeed, no other continental area of equal extent, at least in the old world, can lay claim to such a unique and remarkable assemblage. To a considerable degree it would appear that this peculiarity of the fauna is due to the great elevation of the Thibetan plateau, which has involved special adaptations on the part of its animals. It must be borne in mind, however, that Thibet has several different climatic and physical divisions, each tenanted by its own distinct group of animals, which would appear to have originated from types inhabiting the adjacent lowlands.

One of the most typical animals of the arid plateau is the yak, or Thibetan bison, which is one of the finest members of the ox tribe, specially adapted for a cold climate by the mass of long shaggy hair on the tail and under-parts, which protects the vital organs when the creature is reposing on the frozen ground. The same area is the home of the kiang or Thibetan wild ass, a handsome red-and-white animal, with a large head and small ears, which appears to be somewhat intermediate between the horse and the true wild asses. Its nearest relative is the chigetai of Mongolia but whether it is a local race of the latter or a species by itself is still a somewhat moot point.

Side by side with the kiang may be found two very remarkable types of ruminants—namely, the chiru, or Thibetan antelope, and the goa, or Thibetan gazelle. The big-horned Thibetan argali or Hodgson's wild sheep, is likewise a native of the arid plateau, and yields some of the finest and most coveted of sporting trophies. A smaller wild sheep is the shapu, the local forms of which have a wide range in central Asia, one race—the urial—being a native of the Punjab Salt range. On the other hand he blue sheep, or bharal, is confined to Thibet, inhabiting the mountains to the south of the central plateau. It is a beautifully marked animal, with smooth olive-green horns.

Most of the other mammals of the high plateau belong to types relating to common Asiatic mammals. The snow-leopard, for instance, although a well-marked species, ranges westward at least as far as Gilgit and Chitral; while the Thibetan lynx is a race of the European lynx adapted by its pale coloring for a desert existence. The Thibetan marmot and the Thibetan blue hares which are distinct species, belong to widely spread generic types.

Passing on to the mammals of the forest region of the Moupin district of eastern Thibet, and hence into the north-western provinces of China, we may first take the Thibetan snub-nosed monkey, the typical representative of a small group allied to the langurs, or sacred monkeys of India. An even more notable animal is the giant panda, which appears to have the same distribution as the snub-nosed monkey. Although in appearance very like a small black-and-white bear, structurally this animal is allied to the long-tailed black-and-red panda of the western Himalayas, which is a relative of the American raccoons. Both the great and the long-tailed pandas have the same peculiar type of short and somewhat cat-like face. Eastern Thibet is also the home of a small species of true bear, in which the color somewhat resembles that of the great panda, thus suggesting that in both cases it is connected with protection.

From the forests near Lhassa has been obtained a Lhassa and peculiar deer, know neither as the Lhassa stag or Theroid's deer, of the size of a red deer, but with a dark brown coat, a white muzzle, and flattened antlers with fewer tines. A still more interesting deer is the small Thibetan tufted deer, which is of the approximate size of a roebuck, but with rudimentary antlers recalling those of the Indian muntjac, and a plum-colored coat relieved with white. When first described, this deer was the only representative of its kind known, but two other species are now familiar in China. Little space remains to notice the shou, or Siksim deer, which is, however, scarcely a true Thibetan animal, as its habitat appears to be the forest zone of the upper Chumbi valley.

REPENTS PROMISE TO WED

Young Man Who Had Wooed Girl by Mail Flees When He Beholds His Charmer.

Wide-spreading umbrellas were carried about in the lobby of the Auditorium at Chicago the other morning. The first one was noticed by Clerk Shaffer, a large commodious parachute carried by a long and lank young fellow with cadaverous cheeks and earnest eyes. He paraded up and down the lobby from north to south the length of the lobby, and it was just 9:28 o'clock when he began.

"How's this? What's up?" inquired Clerk Shaffer. "Don't you know it ain't raining and that raised umbrellas are against the rule in this hotel?"

The young fellow looked dazed a moment. "Oh, it's her," said he. Evidently that constituted a sufficient explanation according to him, for he resumed his march up and down.

The clerk followed him. "See here, what is it? This won't do. You aren't the king of Siam."

The stranger stopped in his walk. "I'll tell you," he said, confidingly. "My name's Ephraim Hiles, and I live on a farm four miles from Owosso, Mich. I'm here to meet her, the girl I'm going to marry. We agreed to meet in this hotel at 9:30 this morning. Each of us is to carry a raised umbrella so we can recognise each other.

"You see, this is how it is: We corresponded through a matrimonial agency, but we ain't never met, and we had to have some sign."

He looked at the clock. "She ought to be here now—it's two minutes past the time. Now, wait a minute, and I'll put the umbrella down."

Just then, says the Chicago Chronicle, into the lobby from the ladies' entrance floated a creature in pink. Her green and blue parasol was up and from it hung a streamer of ribbons. She minced along and glanced about.

"What's her name?" asked the clerk.

"Minnie Edkins; she's from Iowa," stammered Ephraim. "But," he gasped, "I never thought she looked like that."

He closed the umbrella precipitately and sneaked toward the door. "The Lord keep her from snortin' me," he murmured as he streaked north on Michigan avenue.

HEN BATTLES WITH SNAKE.

Desire of Hungry Reptile for a Supper of Chickens Leads to Extraordinary Fight.

As the blacksnake wanted chicken for dinner and as the mother hen was strongly averse to letting her offspring form the basis of that feast, there could be only one result—the hen and the blacksnake fought. Charles Mundy told all about it when he came into Whitehouse, N. J., the other day from his farm, out Martinsville way. Mr. Mundy, it may be said, has a reputation for unimpeachable veracity.

He said that when he heard a commotion in his barnyard he went to learn the cause, and saw a hen in a desperate battle with a snake. Mundy grabbed a club and went to the hen's rescue, but the snake was not in search of such big game and escaped. The hen lost one eye and many feathers. She turned green around the head from the poison injected by the snake, but proceeded to attend to her brood as if nothing had happened.

THEN THE FIGHT BEGAN.

"She can fight, I tell you," said the admiring Mundy, "and she ain't of any game breed at that."

The Death Plant of Java.

The death plant of Java has flowers which continually give off a perfume so powerful as to overcome, if inhaled for any length of time, a full-grown man, and which kills all forms of insect life that come under its influence.

VAST INDIAN EMPIRE

INTERESTING STATISTICS FROM ITS RECENT CENSUS.

As Large as All Europe with Russia Left Out—Many Races, Languages and Religions—Its Enormous Population.

Americans are very apt to boast in the presence of their British cousins of the millions of square miles in the United States, of the millions of inhabitants therein; and seemingly forget that the members have full cause themselves to speak of broad domains of myriads of subjects.

The lately published census of India tells of 1,766,642 square miles, a population of 294,361,056! Let Brother Jonathan be a little slow in bragging of big numbers.

In addition to the provinces of India, directly under British administration, there are various feudatory states that acknowledge the supremacy of Great Britain. Hindostan alone is equal in extent to all of England and Scotland, Rajputana and central India are larger than the whole of the German empire. British India exceeds in extent the whole of Europe, if Russia is left out, and her peoples are as diversified as are the inhabitants of this great geographic subdivision. Diversified in race, language and religion.

The Hindu religion has by far the largest following in India, three-fourths of the population being of that faith. The Mohammedan comes next, with over 62,000,000 believers; the Buddhists are many, about 9,000,000, and almost equal to them in numbers are the Animistics; the Sikhs have 2,000,000 followers; the Parsees 94,000. There are not many Jews in India, only 18,000. The new census gives the number of Christians as 2,923,241, of whom 2,664,132 are natives.

At last, after four decades of crown rule by the British crown, the Indian government is taking decisive steps toward a comprehensive survey of the races of the Indian empire—some considerable comprehension of the races being necessary in a land so given over to caste and race prejudice. In the important work of famine relief, especially, is there need of knowledge of race customs and peculiarities. In a country where some of the people prefer death to the eating of food cooked or served by an "unfed," it were well if the relief workers had sufficient acquaintance with the patients to avoid giving offence. Cases are known of sufferers having starved rather than enter the relief camps. Other cases have come to attention of a number of Brahmins that lost their status because of eating in relief kitchens, and that were doomed to remain in a lower caste. A grievous sentence, indeed, to the Hindu.

But in spite of famine and pestilence, the population of India is rapidly increasing, the congestion of India is one of the problems of the English statesman of to-day is called upon to consider. A writer in the Spectator says: "The Indians, in fact, are swarming as the Germans once swarmed, and as the "barbarous" races probably swarmed before they burst upon the Roman empire; and the human imagination gives way before the task of feeding them, which may, be it remembered, thrown upon Great Britain." The population, which is thought to have been stationary for centuries preceding British rule, is now increasing with what the British look upon as startling rapidity. It has increased 38,000,000 within the last 20 years. As the mass of the people are almost incredibly ignorant, an infinitesimal percentage being able to read and write, one cannot judge of India's progress by its numbers.

This new phase of the Indian question is truly a most perplexing one. Among suggestions offered towards lessening the impending danger of overcrowding, we quote the following: First, a redistribution of population, encouragement of migration to more thinly settled districts. Second, encouragement of manufactures in the country. Third, a readjustment of taxation, that the burden may fall more heavily upon wealth and less heavily upon the poor; tax the peasant as lightly as possible. But, so the student of the problem goes on to say: "These are palliatives only. They will not assist, or even check, the multiplication of the people; and if that is not checked India must become by 1950 a huge congested district, or rather must resemble a Chinese province, where the people, laboring with incessant industry seven days a week for 14 hours a day, can still only keep alive, must reckon in cents of which there are 1,000 to a dollar, and feel an official demand for a rupee (about 30 cents) like a demand for a piece of skin."

MAX OWEN.

IRRIGATE IS CRY OF WEST

Much Desert Land May Be Reclaimed by Using System of Artificial Watering.

It is estimated that there remain in the dry region of the west about 600,000,000 acres of vacant public land, and that there is sufficient water available, under proper systems of storage, to irrigate about one-sixteenth of the whole amount. The area now occupied and irrigated is only 6,500,000 acres. If during the next 30 years only 20,000,000 acres more should be placed under irrigation, the land so reclaimed would provide homes for at least 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 people, as a very small area is sufficient to support a family where the farm is operated according to irrigation methods. The main drawback which has so far appeared in the development of the dry region is owing to the presence of alkali in the soil in some sections. It is found that after putting water on the soil for a certain length of time the tendency of the alkali is to rise toward the surface, and there is a gradual increase of the hurtful salts near the surface. The waters used in irrigation. It is also found, contain all which helps to increase the deposits of alkali. The "seep away." After the alkali once begins to give serious trouble it has sometimes been necessary to abandon the land. The only remedy appears to be to furnish sufficient water to flood the land and soak out the alkali.

CATS RELISH GREEN PEAS.

Feline Gourmets Regard the Vegetable as Especially Dainty—Carrots Benefit Health.

It is generally supposed that cats are carnivorous animals, yet from investigations recently undertaken by a French cat fancier it would appear that vegetables are to be found among the feline tribe. Green peas, cooked, are among the vegetables most favored by these four-footed gourmets, and asparagus is regarded as an extraordinary dainty, even raw. White, hard stalks, usually rejected by the most fastidious "humans," being eagerly devoured. Haricot beans and sorrel are not much thought of, nor spinach, but cooked chicory and lettuce are more to their taste. Carrots are generally appreciated and are said to be beneficial to cat health. They are also excessively fond of maize, either green or even the hard grains when cooked. Fruit apparently does not appeal to puss, apples, pears, peaches and apricots failing to rouse her appetite. On the other hand, they show a decided taste for melons and bananas, while some were found to be absolutely greedy over cocoanut in any form. There is evidently likely to be an opening in the future for a cat's vegetable man to compete with the peripatetic cat's meat man of the present.

GRIM JEST OF KITCHENER.

Orders Issued Placing Regimental Schoolmaster at Officers' Disposal—Other Bits of Humor.

Lord Kitchener of the British army recently made an army order placing the regimental schoolmaster at the disposal of officers that they might have an opportunity to complete their elementary educations—a good instance of his grim humor. But it has often been demonstrated that the schoolmaster is needed among the British officers. Some queer, quaint efforts at composition have been made in brigade orders.

A certain major ordained not long ago that "reveille will be at 3:30 a. m. The brigade will parade at 4 a. m. The brigade will move at 4:15 a. m. The sun will rise at 5 a. m." It was during the good year of 1915-2, after the building of the block houses, that it became necessary to check the habit of the men of sleeping outside the blockhouses for the sake of coolness and comfort. A certain staff officer thereupon issued the following order: "No one is permitted to sleep outside the blockhouse except the sentries."

Though the intention of this order is clear, its phraseology is not: "Men on outpost duty are forbidden to strike matches on the sky line."

Imprisoned Royalties.

France detains as prisoners of state in Algeria both the emperor of Annam and the queen of Madagascar, while in Martinique she keeps imprisoned the king of Dahomey, King Prempeh of Ashanti, along with his numerous wives, the queen mother and his children, are prisoners of Great Britain on the Seychelles islands. The savage king of Benin has taken the place of the great Napoleon as another of England's royal captives on the island of St. Helena, and in addition to these two African potentates Great Britain has several Indian rulers under detention since the loss of their thrones.

Sultan Has Queer Notions.

The first time the present sultan of Morocco saw a compass he was very inquisitive as to its use. When it was explained that the trembling needle pointed to the north uniformly he seemed interested, but incredulous. Finally he declared flatly that he couldn't believe the story; there must be some kind of trick about it. In a conversation with him an English visitor learned that in the sultan's mind Belgium is the leading country of Europe, because most of the arms used in Morocco are received from Brussels.

Child Marriages Increasing.

The custom of marrying girls when they are mere children of nine or ten years is increasing rather than decreasing in Bengal and other parts of India. The resulting racial degeneration is becoming so obvious that laws have been passed in several regions forbidding the marriage of girls under 14.

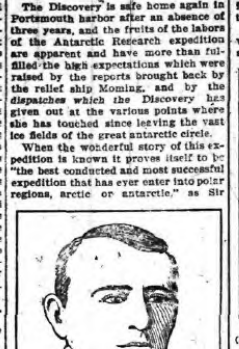
ANTARCTIC SECRETS

MANY OF THEM DISCOVERED BY CAPT. SCOTT AND HIS CREW.

Expedition to the South Pole Returns and the Full Extent of the Work of the Explorers Is Learned.

The Discovery is safe home again in Portsmouth harbor after an absence of three years, and the fruits of the labors of the Antarctic Research expedition are apparent and have more than fulfilled the high expectations which were raised by the reports brought back by the relief ship Morning, and by the dispatches which the Discovery has given out at the various points where she has touched since leaving the vast ice fields of the great antarctic circle.

When the wonderful story of this expedition is known it proves itself to be "the best conducted and most successful expedition that has ever enter into polar regions, arctic or antarctic," as Sir



CAPT. ROBERT FALCON SCOTT, R. N.

Clements Markham has so enthusiastically put it. With a mass of scientific data and many valuable specimens and souvenirs of the trip the Discovery returns to enrich the world's knowledge. The two primary objects of the expedition were magnetic work and geographical discovery. Continuous magnetic observations were taken in the neighborhood of the south magnetic pole, but the chief embodying the results will, of course, take a long time to work out. The chief additions to our knowledge of antarctic geography, made by Capt. Scott and his brave crew, have, however, already been made public. Wilkes Land, which is marked so prominently on all maps of the south polar regions, was found to be nonexistent, the Discovery sailing over the very spot where it had been charted. The great ice barrier proved to be afloat and pushing its way northwards at the rate of a quarter of a mile a year, and a vast continent, with ranges of high mountains, was shown to exist under the ice-cap of South Victoria Land. Mounts Erebus and Terror, near which the Discovery wintered, were discovered to be on an island, and not on the antarctic mainland, as had hitherto been believed, while the land at the east end of the ice barrier was found to be distinct from South Victoria Land, and has been named by Capt. Scott King Edward VII. Land.

During the two years that the Discovery was shut in the Ice Capt. Scott and his men made various expeditions in different directions. The farthermost point reached was that touched by Capt. Scott on his great dash for the pole, when he reached a point 82 degrees and 17 minutes south, thus breaking by 207 miles the record of Borchgrevink, who got as far as 78 degrees and 40 minutes in 1900, and penetrating more than 11 degrees further south than Capt. Cook, the first antarctic navigator.

In the second season Capt. Scott led another expedition inland to the westward. The plucky band reached a point 270 miles from the ship, in the interior of South Victoria Land, a vast continental plateau, which stretched away before them at an elevation of 9,000 feet. During the second season also a third extended journey was made by Lieut. Shackleton to the south, in 80 degrees south. The party was away 68 days and obtained detailed information respecting the exact point of junction between the barrier ice and the land.

In an interview with a press representative Capt. Scott paid a handsome tribute to the crew. "Every member of the expedition," he said, worked well together, "and the behavior of everyone was all that could be desired. I have not one word to say against the conduct of anyone from start to finish."

The king, who sent a telegram to Capt. Scott, congratulating the expedition on its safe return, has directed that a new medal for service in the polar regions shall be struck and granted to the officers and crew of the Discovery, in recognition of the successful accomplishment of their enterprise, while Commander Robert Falcon Scott, M. V. O., has been promoted to the rank of captain in the royal navy.

THIS MAN NEVER SLEEPS.

For Ten Years Albert Herpin Has Not Drifted Into Dreamland and Yet He Is Happy.

Philadelphia (Pa.) Special.

The most wide-awake man in the country is Albert Herpin, of Trenton, N. J.

He never sleeps.

Not for ten years has Herpin wooed tired nature's sweet restorer; not for a decade has he drifted off into dreamland and become oblivious to everything.

Ye Herpin is a healthy, happy man, who enjoys life, and, far from being a sufferer from his protracted siege of insomnia, he says that he really feels that he needs no sleep.

Herpin's case has few parallels in medical annals. It has always been accepted that no human being can survive without some small periods of sleep in which the nerves can be calmed and the tissues restored.

Yet Herpin goes right along, a living defiance of this basic principle of medical science. He is no museum freak nor charlatan. He has refused liberal offers to exhibit himself in public or to yield himself to physicians for scientific experiments.

Mr. Herpin's story of his long period of sleeplessness is more interesting than any account of it that could be unfolded by other observers.

"I think overwork first robbed me of the power to sleep," he says. "Twelve years ago I began a series of experiments in photograph on cobalts and to stipple half tones on steel. In the course of this work my zeal and enthusiasm frequently kept me going night and day without a thought of rest.

"The first thing I knew I had reached the point when I could not sleep at all.

"I became worried and feared that some permanent ill-effect must result. But doctors and medicines failed utterly to put me to sleep. I consulted specialists, still with the same result. Then I began to notice that the loss of sleep was not hurting me a bit. My appetite was good, nerves under control. I could work just as hard, and my weight gradually increased until I tipped the beam at 180 pounds.

"What's the use of sleeping at all?" I said to myself, and so gave up the attempt.

"From that day to this, ten years ago, I have never slept, and I never expect to again. I go to bed nightly at ten o'clock and remain until five, fully conscious all the time, and yet never dropping off for so much as a wink. I enjoy the rest and hate to get up.

"I presume you would have to describe my condition as a disease. And yet it isn't one that makes any difference, so I have resigned myself to being the one man in the country who can get along without slumber."

PREDICTS CHICAGO'S DOOM

Prof. Gilbert Says That in 3,500 Years the Windy City Will Be Destroyed by Water.

Chicago Special.

Prof. Grove K. Gilbert, one of the delegates to the international geographical congress, has attracted wide attention to himself by predicting that eventually the city of Chicago will be submerged in Lake Michigan. He gives the city, however, 3,500 years more of existence, explaining that the lake is only rising

His investigations and writings have embraced a wide range of subjects, but he is best known through his studies in dynamic geology and physical geography. He has been president of the American Society of Naturalists and of the Geographical Society of America, and is now president of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences.

CATCHING A TARTAR

TWO SHARPERS WHO PLAY AT THE SAME GAME.

How an American Got Worsted in His Efforts to Beat an Englishman in a Paris Restaurant.

They met in a train traveling to Paris—an Englishman and a highly-dressed and much-jeweled American. For a while they sat in silence. Then the American made a casual allusion to the scene. From that time the conversation increased until it became quite intimate.

The Englishman said he was going to Paris to see the sights. To this the American replied that he, too, was going there for precisely the same purpose.

"I have 40,000 francs in my bag," the Englishman remarked.

"Well met, indeed," the other returned. "I, too, have much money, in fact, I have made my pile, and now I mean to enjoy myself."

A few hours later they were seated at table d'hote in one of the most expensive of Parisian cafes.

After dessert, the American pulled out a silver cigar case. Opening it he found that he had no cigars left.

"I say," he ejaculated, "can you speak French?" The Englishman nodded. "Well, I can't speak a word. So you might do me a favor and go to that tobacconist we passed as we came here and get me a box of greed cigars. I can't stand the things they sell here. You leave your bag with me. It won't take you a minute!"

The Englishman hesitated, casting an eye on his bag.

"You are suspicious, sir," remarked the American sternly. "Do you imagine that I would fly from Paris for a paltry 40,000 francs?" He drew out his pocket book. "Now, sir, I am not suspicious of you. Here, take this as security for your paltry notes. There is more than ten times their value in that wallet."

Apparently satisfied, the Englishman accepted the pocketbook, and at once set out to fetch the cigars. Ten minutes later he returned. But the American had disappeared, and with him, of course, the bag.

The Englishman waited. Thirty minutes went by—then sixty. Still no American! Then he began to realize that he had been duped.

Taking out the pocketbook, he began to examine its contents. A hasty survey revealed a bundle of French notes. He counted them—250 francs' worth in all.

Did the American imagine that was sufficient security for the bag? Laying the notes on the table before him, the Englishman burst into laughter. For five minutes his frame shook, and the tears ran down his cheeks in the endeavor to suppress his mirth.

"More than ten times the value of what is in your bag," the American had said. Even the Englishman himself could not deny this to be perfectly true. Two Telegraphs, the Times, and an Express are scarcely worth 25 shillings, even in the best of markets.

That was all the hand bag contained. As for the 40,000 francs in notes, they lay snugly folded in the Englishman's pocketbook. (He had met other "millionaires" before, and he knew their little ways.) Alongside also lay the American's 250 francs security, or, rather, what was left of it after deducting the cost of the sumptuous dinner that they had enjoyed together at the cafe.

The "millionaire" had met a tartar!

Women.

There were four women—a pretty woman, a great woman, a wise woman and a good woman. About the pretty woman thousands pressed, asking her how she did her hair. Hundreds gathered about the great woman, asking her how she evolved her ideas. Dozens drew near to the wise woman, asking her how she avoided inking her fingers. But the good woman stood alone except for a blind person, who could not see that she was neither pretty, nor great, nor wise, and was therefore curious to know why she was good.—Baltimore Sun.

The Marriage Question

Some Reasons Why It Is a Thorny One

"THANK you, why get married?" remarked the bachelor. "It only means a double expense, the wedding and the divorce."

Please do not think after this remark that any woman had been so unlady-like as to propose to the bachelor. His remark only meant that he had had a good dinner and wanted to start a gentle argument.

"Oh, I don't know!" said his hostess, who rather had designs on the bachelor herself. "Lots of people are enjoying real old fashioned marriages even in these days."

"Old fashioned marriages!" chuckled the bachelor. "Why, my dear child, they were as torn by internal dissensions then as they are now. The only thing was they had to grin and bear things because divorced people were not in the swim."

"Oh, well, nearly all the trouble arises from the man's wanting to have his way!"

"I like that. Why shouldn't he in his own house?"

"But it isn't his house!"

"Argument No. 1! Well, at least if a man's house is not his own it is not his wife's to such an extent that she can invite her mother there to camp indefinitely. And let me tell you that much worn newspaper joke has a good deal of bitter foundation in it because the old lady very often puts into her daughter's head ideas of her own importance and of how Jim should be managed that prove very hard uprooting after she has gone."

"What about his relations—his mother's calm criticism of her, his sister's nice little sisterly remarks?"

"There's something in that, I must admit, and there's no doubt that when two orphans marry they have a larger chance of happiness than ordinary couples. I vote to pension the old people and that the visiting be done in their own houses."

"Yes, but that isn't all. Nothing makes a wife so miserably jealous as when her husband does things for his own family and thereby curtails her. The husband of a friend of mine is always doing things for his family. Lately he sent his sister's three children to the St. Louis exposition, and then when his wife said she would like to go she found he couldn't afford it."

"There's one man I know who makes his wife miserable. He has to go away on long business trips, and he never lets the lady know when he is about to return. Woe to her, however, if she is not right there sitting at the hearthstone waiting to receive him!"

"I think I know the man you mean, and when he is home he isn't much of a comfort and a joy. All he does is play chess every evening with a crony of his, while she sits and yawns."

"Well, some wives are so stupid that they drive their husbands to chess or drink. My! I'd divorce a woman who couldn't talk intelligently on things I cared about or say something original once in awhile."

"Then perhaps you wouldn't marry a woman for her face."

"Nor would I marry her entirely for her brains. I want a woman who is not so crammed full of knowledge that she cannot place two soft cushions in an alluring position or superintend the making of a mince pie."

"After all, the allowance question has as much to do with married unhappiness as anything else. If before marriage the future husband and wife would decide on a settled arrangement of money matters—so much for the wife, so much for the house and so much for the bank—everything would be well. It humiliates and disgusts a woman quicker than anything else to have to stretch out her hand continually and beg for what after all is hers by right."

"If I could find a woman absolutely devoid of jealousy and one who could be a good chum, I believe I'd risk it," suddenly remarked the bachelor, regarding his hostess speculatively.

"You don't have to!" she remarked indifferently.

"No, but I think I want to!" he replied in quite a different tone.

FANCIES IN PLUMES.

Feathers Dispose Themselves in a Different Fashion This Season.

The fashion in feathers—that is, in the arrangement of ostrich plumes on smart hats—has undergone a change. Instead of trailing over a chapeau, as they were wont to do, the up to date hat has them bunched high up on the crown.

But there are exceptions to all rules, and the new lyre feather is this exception. It is formed by turning an ostrich plume, as it were, inside out and then putting it under a tight curling process. These lyre feathers are then trained around the crown or placed under the brim.

This year a definite stand is extremely difficult to adopt in costumes, owing to the prevailing diversity of styles. Gowns and wraps have such essentially opposite points of interest. It is well to keep in mind that a complete change of style is contemplated in the skirt, which must be either ample and gracefully clinging or plain to a degree of tailor severity. Still, as a compromise, there are the intermediate modes whose skirts have shapely tucks or triple flounces.

For smart evening wraps there are two new materials, champana and silk burlap. Both of these fabrics require the addition of eastern embroideries as trimming accessories.

A favorite length for an evening wrap is ten inches from the ground, although the three-quarter length is still very much seen.

The swagger gown illustrated is of a new shade—gigantine, a gray blue, with the blue tint predominating. This costume is carried out in chiffon cloth. The skirt is trimmed with ruffles of the same, put on with slight fullness. The seventy-two inch long coat is dissipated by a natty little vest of tan suede and a braid trimmed bolero and wide revers. The sleeves are cut up in a novel fashion to disclose ruffles of suede.

LA MODE'S DECREES.

The introduction of the dolman is a revival of the season which possesses a certain interest. The new garment is more artistically constructed than it used to be when it took first rank among the fashionable wraps.

Ostrich feathers will be in great demand this winter, and the large, straight brimmed hats carry a perfect forest of these naturally shaded feathers. These hats are worn at a daring angle.

Panne velvet hats will be very much worn, and this variety of velvet is employed upon shapes where shirring and drapery are most effective. The ordinary velvet is more attractive when drawn plain over crowns and brims.

Anything on the strictly tailored sleeve line will be avoided on evening wraps or more elaborate coats, the omission being supplied by a cape effect. On visiting costumes, however, the sleeve will be large and loose, designed in three puffs to the elbow or a little beyond.

Quite original is the smart waist shown in the cut, with its "off the shoulder" yoke outlined with folds and a braided design. The fullness falls in gathers from this yoke and is organized down the front with a wide band of oriental embroidery.

THE MILLINERY WORLD.

Trimmings Seen on Smart Day and Evening Creations.

Mousseline is utilized in combination with velvet for dressy hats.

The high crowned picture hat, the mushroom shape, the shepherdess, the cowboy and the torpedo turban are found side by side in the most modish shops.

Panne and miroir velvet, moire silk and lightweight furs make smart and pretty headgear.

All kinds of plumage are marvelously popular, as well as long ostrich feathers and Prince of Wales tips. Long, slender cock's feathers, called mephistos, are worn, together with quills innumerable, some of which are made of painted leather.

Chrysanthemums and roses are the preferred floral garniture this winter.

Coq de roche, that bright flaming orange, is a color that is flaunting itself bravely at present, but is too popular to be very long smart, the prophets say.

Wood brown and bronze green are two of the leading shades in millinery. Blue is also conspicuous, and magenta is an old color being revived.

For theater wear capelines of drawn tulle embroidered with gold and bordered with very narrow fur are much worn. The crowns are composed sometimes of a single large rose.

The attractive toque pictured is of hunter's green paon velvet trimmed with a puffing and a quaintly fashioned rosette of shot green taffeta. An aigret of a lighter green, toning delightfully with the color scheme, hangs gracefully at one side.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Simplicity the Trend of Present Styles—The New Coiffure.

In the matter of hairdressing the plait to a great extent is returning to favor. In one of the new coiffure arrangements effected with the plait the front hair is unaltered, being very full and bouffant and combed over a frame. The plait is wreathed around the back of the head, losing itself finally in the soft puffs on each side. In other cases it is brought from a cluster of little rolls on the top of the head nearly to the neck and is caught with a jeweled slide, the end being tucked into the hair.

The tendency of fashion is to free itself from eccentricities. In skirts, for instance, those overloaded with gatherings, puffings and ruchings are put aside for those trimmed only a little above the knee or around the bottom in a very frouffou fashion. In lightweight full, clinging skirts a thick cord of crinolette is sewed at the foot so light and elastic that it is scarcely noticeable. Heavier fabrics are weighted with lead to keep them in place.

In the cut is seen a Parisian costume of chocolate velvet. The blouse bodice is gathered by means of braid at the shoulders and at the waist. Two ruches of the panne velvet border the fronts. The girdle is of satin, on which are set motifs of embroidery. The plastron and deep cuffs are of white lace and have tiny ruchings of panne. The skirt consists of three gathered flounces edged with plaitings of velvet.

A WOMAN PEACE ADVOCATE.

Baroness Bertha von Suttner and Her Visit to America.

One of the most distinguished speakers at the recent international peace conference in Boston was an Austrian lady of noble birth, Baroness Bertha von Suttner of Vienna. After the close of the conference the baroness made a tour through several American cities, speaking with wonderful eloquence on the cause to which she has devoted her life—universal brotherhood among nations and peaceful arbitration instead of war. In the furtherance of this sacred cause Miss von Suttner has visited many of the crowned heads of Europe and pleaded with them to use their influence in doing away with murder by war. She considers one of earth's leading peacemakers to be King Edward the Eighth.

During her brief visit to America she also called by invitation on President Roosevelt. Him she found sincerely and zealously attached to the international arbitration policy. It was about the time of her visit that his invitation to the powers to consider another peace congress at The Hague was issued.

In the movement for the abolishment of war Baroness von Suttner hopes for much from American women. She, who was one of the chief original promoters of this grand movement in Europe, says that there it progresses in spite of the fact that a woman is its apostle. Here it would gain ground because of the advocacy of women. The first thing to do is to convince American womanhood that war is not a necessity; then will be thrown all the powerful influences of the feminine sex in this country on the side of peace among nations. She believes the women of America have opportunity for development and for helping in the progress of the race toward civilization such as their sex has not had before in the historic age.

Baroness von Suttner believes, too, that in the United States a new humanity, a higher race, will arise because of our opportunity. Though a born and bred aristocrat, she is enamored to the social life of the highest courts of Europe, Baroness von Suttner turns from it all to praise enthusiastically democracy in America, to hope fervently that social caste and rank may never during our existence as a nation gain footing in the United States, which she calls a blessed land.

The baroness was born Countess Bertha Minsky in Prague, Bohemia, in 1843. Her father was a field marshal in the Austrian army, in which two of her uncles also held the rank of general. She was trained in the accomplishments thought necessary to adorn an Austrian court lady. She is a brilliant musician and so excellent a linguist that she speaks the English language more musically and correctly than seven out of ten American women themselves do. Of the society woman of Vienna, far famed for their vivacity, grace and exquisite gowning, Countess Minsky was one of the most brilliant. Her intellect from her earliest girlhood, however, was too vigorous and comprehensive to content itself with social nothings. The venerable Emperor William I. of Germany was one of her stanch friends. In a printed sketch of her life appears a letter written to her by the gallant old soldier-emperor, thanking her for a photograph of herself which she had sent him. Her liveliness and intellectual resources made many a pleasant hour for the venerable ruler.

She was the favorite friend of the Empress Elizabeth of Austria, who met so tragic a fate. The young countess' life was as gay and brilliant as any girl's could possibly be, yet her mind was always on more serious work, particularly work for universal peace. This last seemed her mission. In 1876 she was married to Baron Adolf von Suttner, who was seven years younger than herself. Until the baron's death two years ago the pair lived ideally happy lives, dom after their marriage both began to do literary work. Novels, essays and sketches came rapidly from the baroness' vigorous pen, so vigorous that none of the thousands of readers who were fascinated with her work dreamed it was done by a woman. None was more surprised than the editors for whom she wrote were when they found their contributor—"R. Oulot," as she signed herself—was a woman.

In 1889 was published "Die Waffen Nieder" ("Lay Down Your Arms"), and Bertha von Suttner became world famous. The book is a novel, a plea for universal peace.

ABOUT THE HOME.

Commonplace Things the Up to Date Housekeeper Ought to Know.

The old saying that a French family can live on what an American family wastes is not so well deserved as it used to be. Nowadays economy is one of the rules of every well ordered household, not the economy that pinches, but the economy that recognizes the value of little things.

For instance, it is remarkable how much fat accumulates even in small families. Odds and ends taken from chop bones, steaks, etc., make the best kitchen soap obtainable.

Save the fat in a covered dish until you have six pounds, then put it in a large pan with about two quarts of water. Let this simmer on the stove until it is all melted, stir it well and let it get cold. The grease will be cleared and will harden into a cake which can be removed. After cleaning the pan melt the grease again, adding a can of lye dissolved in a quart of cold water. Take the melted fat and mix into it the lye, then add two tablespoonfuls of ammonia. This must be stirred for fifteen or twenty minutes until it hardens. When perfectly hard it can be cut into cakes. This soap is pure and will float.

The best flowering plant for the house is without doubt the geranium. It is long suffering and will grow under almost any conditions. Nasturtiums will also thrive in the house and will blossom after February.

Many a plumber's bill can be saved by pouring a can of lye dissolved into boiling water down the kitchen sink. Dissolve the lye in a china or earthenware dish, as it corrodes tin.

There is a kind of enamel which dries in a few hours and which therefore gives a much more even surface under the unskilled hands of the amateur. In painting remember to use a soft brush; otherwise the marks of the bristles will show.

Candles in colored spring candlesticks with dainty shades make a most attractive light and glorify the plainest rooms.

If you cannot afford silver candelabra for your table there are pretty candlesticks of glass to be obtained for about 40 cents each.

A little sweet oil in a cup, mixed with a drop or two of vinegar, applied to the dining room table with a piece of canton flannel, will keep it highly polished.

The day is past when furniture must be expensive to be in good taste. A glance at the room depicted will convince every one of this. The walls are covered with deep red burlap. long chair is of red wicker with cers and red cretonne cushions. The pictures on the wall are prints neatly framed in black passe partout. The floors are stained a light brown, and the rug is of a subdued shade of red, with a brown and green border. The fireplace, which is not seen in the illustration, is of brown oak and shaded red tiling. The rafters of the room are oak, and the ceiling is tinted a soft ecru.

R. DE LA BAUME.

Marrying Foreign Titles.

Ever and anon comes a rumor of the marital wretchedness of this or that rich American girl who married a dough faced dabbling or princeling with a long line of diseased or dissipated or crazy ancestry behind him and went abroad with him for the purpose of keeping him supplied with spending money. The strange thing about it is that anybody—the girl's parents, her friends or herself—should expect her to be anything else than miserable. How could she be?

FASHION'S FORECAST.

Checked Velvets Very Smart. Changes in Hats and Coats.

Black and red velvet in small checks is being made into ultra smart costumes. Trimmed with black silk in piped panels and with rather wide bands of black lace stitched upon a blouse jacket and sleeves, a gown of this kind is effective with the introduction of white lace and black velvet at the neck.

There is a fear that these new checks will share the fate of the black and white and blue and white cloth checked frocks which were so overdone in the spring. Still, for those who like to wear the very "latest" the costume in red and black checked velvet cannot be dispensed with and may be worn until it becomes common.

The walking skirt is seen in many varieties, mostly box plaited or kilted. It is longer than it was last winter, but still takes the upward tilt at the back.

Fine lace cloths are the favorites this season, and the colors most in evidence are dark greens, bronzes, browns, copper and dull reds for day wear. For evening frocks velvets, brocades and silks of all kinds are made into stately Louis costumes for the matron, while the girls will wear the most fascinating tulles, gauzes, soft silks and painted chiffons and chiffon velvets.

The picture shows a stunning broad brimmed hat of white felt with a high, full crown of mauve velvet. A long buckle, together with two rosettes of shaded mauve and violet velvet, fix the simple trimming. This hat is suitable for the morning promenade.

MODES IN FURS.

Many New Pelts Added to Old Favorites This Season.

There are many startling innovations in fur land at present, and what strikes one in the new fashions are the extraordinary amount of trimming used on fur garments and the mingling of totally different skins with excellent results.

Those who invest in really good furs get their money's worth when purchasing the three-quarter length coats and do not pay more for style than for the skin, as is often the case. The warmth and comfort of the three-quarter coat will be appreciated in the cold days to come.

On many of the coats and wraps other trimmings apart from fur are employed, such as silks, embroideries, incrustations of velvet, beautiful laces and all kinds of buttons and clasps.

Chinchilla threatens to rival even Russian sable, and caracal in black and white will struggle for popularity.

A SEALSKIN BOLERO

Moleskin is at somewhat of a discount, although it will be used as a lining for long coats.

Among the lesser furs is musquash, and this pelt is being dressed in a new way to resemble sealskin. Bear, too, will be very much worn. Pony skin has been brought to perfection by dyeing and dressing. It now comes in lovely tones of brown and gray and is much used for motor coats. There will be a rage for white fox, which is very becoming to young people.

Fur edgings will be a great deal used—ermines, chinchillas and sable edgings on velvet gowns and coats, and mink, caracal and astrakhan on cloth and practical frocks.

The natty little coat illustrated is of sealskin trimmed with chinchilla and has fetching chiffon sleeve frills.

The New Woman

Rivalry of Club Women Surpassingly Silly

IS the intelligent, broad minded club woman a masculine political office seeker that she should get down and struggle like a dog over a bone to get the presidency of any given organization? Is she a shallow minded society woman, making trifles into the important events of life, that she should bankrupt her finances to dress more extravagantly and give more costly entertainments than a sister club woman? Finally, is she an actual fool that she should break her neck, and stir up hatred and quarreling till all the club is set by the ears and the newspapers are making fun of the whole feminine sex just because of her determination to hold on like grim death to the presidency of her club term after term, if not generation after generation? One would like to know. The true club woman represents the highest and best development of the feminine sex—as far as it has got, which, maybe, is not saying much. The true club woman thinks, and she has one original sin, personal following in her club. The personal following idea, even were the leader Martha Washington herself, would be death and destruction to a woman's club. The true club woman especially steers away from the vain and empty headed desire to hold on to an office forever, keeping other women out of it at the cost of justice, politeness and all good will. Rotation in office is the real life of a club. All members thereby get experience in parliamentary usage and the duties that accompany various posts. A woman's club is educational. Most of all, it should be educational in the direction of justice, gentleness and letting other members have a fair chance. Squabbling like cats for the presidency of a woman's club is a disgraceful proceeding.

Employers everywhere want young, comely women to work for them, and who can blame them? So keep young if you have to work for your living.

To be pleased and gratified with just the common, everyday events of life—that is how to be happy.

One observes that the gentle masculine editors of the woman's page are still pegging away telling their readers how to remove blackheads and how to massage for wrinkles.

Dr. von Duncker of the German educational commission that visited the country to study our school methods says that American instructors teach pupils not to depend too much on others, but to help themselves. The doctor considered that the highest praise he could bestow on the system. Yes, it does us women proud, and we accept the whole compliment. Nine-tenths of the teachers of the United States are women.

The lady who thinks too much of her white hands to keep her rooms clean is happily for the human race, not so common as she used to be.

What sight is more impressive than a fragile, delicate, 200 pound man sunken into a heap and sprawled all over a car seat, his knees a yard apart, his arms spread out like wings each side of a big, landscape hiding newspaper, while half a dozen gigantic athletes of women weighing no more than a bicycle, stand, each, a strap train, swing by straps in front of him and look down pityingly on the frail masculine being in the seat?

Hotel Martha Washington, the first one for women in New York city, has been filled to overflowing from the beginning. Its success was so great that a second hotel, the Hatchlife, for women exclusively, has been opened.

Captain Mystrom of the Swedish steamer Heros has opened new occupations for the feminine sex by hiring a woman cook and a woman steward. They have signed with him for a year and give such satisfaction that Captain Mystrom declares he will never have another man steward aboard his ship.

If some people trained their children as carefully as menageric show people train their animals the earth would be full of the little angels of the coming race.

A woman lately applied for divorce on the ground that her husband had hypnotized her. She must have been a willing subject then. No human being can be hypnotized against his or her will. This not uncommon plea of women that they have been hypnotized into doing this or not making one somehow feel ashamed of them.

When you start out to get employment or to canvass for something you wish to sell don't neglect to unfeel and tell everybody that you have been better days, or that you are a widow with five children to support, or have a bedridden mother, or a lame dog in hospital, or your husband has run away and left you. Not on your life! These utterances are not businesslike. Everybody has troubles of his own—quite as many as you have. Only those who keep their troubles to themselves succeed.

To "stand pat" may mean not to move forward.

If you are opposed to spite houses write to your Councilman expressing your condemnation of property wrecking. "Do it now."

It's a hundred to one that about County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean thought on Thanksgiving day of the great victory he engineered for the Republican party on November and incidently that his brother will be returned to the U. S. Senate without opposition.

What Bosh it is to believe that the Government seriously intends to investigate the Standard Oil Company, when that curse of humanity is greater than the party in power and can change the administration whenever it wills. Remember the beef trust investigation? Well, what did it accomplish.

District Attorney Jerome's agitation for a law allowing New York saloons to open after 1 o'clock on Sunday afternoons is typical of the man. If he is half the reformer he would lead people to believe, the great gallery-playing prosecutor would be more active in stamping out the violations of existing excise laws.

Advertising pays, says the Philadelphia Record. President Roosevelt was advertised in the magazines, together with colleges, soaps, household necessities and books, and Governor-elect Douglas, of Massachusetts, put full-page advertisements at regular space rates in all the big newspapers and smaller advertisements in the less important ones, and he kept them running for weeks. Therefore Massachusetts gave Mr. Roosevelt a plurality of 65,000 and Mr. Douglas a plurality of 35,000.

AMUSEMENTS.

Another capital programme has been arranged for Proctor's Newark Theatre next week, the strong number being Jewell's Manikins seen for the first time in Newark. This puppet show is a clever and radical departure from the usual specialties of this sort; not only are the effects attained far more elaborate but the figures move with a naturalness which actually creates the illusion of life. A vaudeville and circus concluding with an elaborate ballet presented with splendid electrical and scenic effects. Mary Dupont assisted by Willard Hutchinson makes presentation of her newest offering, "A Leap Year's Leap," which is said to be the best thing she has ever done in vaudeville and it must be remembered that Miss Dupont has had a long list of successes to her credit. A second importation is found in Harry Roches's dog and pony circus; an act which departs from established training methods with excellent results. The animals work with a cleverness that is really astonishing, and take an actual interest in their work. Barry and Wilson, singing and talking comedians, will contribute a number of new jokes and stories in their amusing specialty, while Harry B. Lester, an impersonator of no mean merit, imparts a strong comedy tinge to his act. Levine and Leonard, the "Automobile Jugglers," also add to the comedy on the bill, while Mildred Hanson, a coon shouter, new motion pictures and other features will contribute to the bill.

"The Wizard of Oz" is breaking all records at the Academy of Music, New York, where so many great successes have been achieved in the past. The extravagance has all the gayety and life of modern musical comedies, and it is free from the suggestiveness in costuming and jokes that debase many musical plays from fastidious people. There is not a line of dialogue, not one word spoken in "The Wizard of Oz" to offend or cause uneasiness to the most captious playgoers. Nor is it at any time slow enough to bore those of rakish tastes in theatrical matters. It abounds in hearty wholesome fun and is a capital entertainment for young and old alike. The management takes pains in calling particular attention to the fact that the curtain rises precisely at 8 o'clock at the evening performances and at 2 sharp at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees. The Kansas cyclone, which opens the play, should not be missed by anyone. It is one of "The Wizard's" most novel features.

John McDonough, of Somerset street, is confined to his home by illness.

John P. Hall, of East Front street, returned to work yesterday after several days' illness from throat trouble.

AMUSEMENTS.

The announcement issued last Saturday from the Belasco Theatre, New York, concerning Mrs. Leslie Carter and her new play, was almost sensational in its surprise. Speculation has been rife as to David Belasco's plans for Mrs. Carter this season. By some it had been reported, though without the authority or wish of Mr. Belasco, that Mrs. Carter was to appear in a half dozen different plays. Others have had it that she was to retire absolutely for the year. It is with considerable satisfaction, therefore, that Mr. Belasco makes the personal statement that not only has Mrs. Carter never had the slightest intention to take a season's rest, but that preparations for the new work have been going on steadily for more than a year, and that rehearsals will begin Monday morning at the Belasco Theatre.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of "Humpty Dumpty" began its second week at the New Amsterdam last Monday evening. The attendance the first week was the largest in the history of this great theatre, with a tremendous advance sale daily. No array of adjectives that could be marshalled by the most enthusiastic writer on theatrical affairs would overpraise this wonderful spectacle. It is not only a bewilderingly beautiful treat to the eye, but it appeals in other ways as well. Its comedy, artistic in its every sense, provides humor; its musical side supplies many brilliant numbers pleasing both to the trained and untrained ear; its ballets present most beautiful dances, groupings and processions and the pantomimic and sensational interest is supplied in the clown, harlequin, pantaloon and columbine and in the marvelous acrobatic feats of the demon and his gnomes. Such a generous measure of entertainment was never before presented in any New York production. That this fact is appreciated is amply shown in the enthusiastic applause that accompanies every feature, and in the expressions of satisfaction heard on every hand as the audiences leave the house. Every patron receives his or her money's worth of solid entertainment. "Humpty Dumpty" is now "the real thing" in New York.

"The best play she has ever had," is the condensus of opinion delivered by the critics on "Mrs. Black Is Back," in which Miss Irwin appears at the Bijou Theatre. The usual coon song bit is looked for and found. "Bible Stories" is a cooney coon warble, and bids fair to succeed the old "Bully" song to the title of "The Best Coon Song ever Written." It is tells of the good old Bible stories in a coon dialect and in the quaintest of coon descriptions. Jonah's voyage of discovery in the whale winds up: "Well, Jonah pressed the button, and the whale he did the rest." Miss Irwin's engagement at the Bijou is limited, but only by the conditions of her bookings.

Fritzi Scheff, a new comedy opera "The Two Roses," gorgeous production, handsome costumes, pretty chorus, splendid company—there's a combination that should fill the Broadway Theatre, New York, to overflowing for many nights to come. With one successful season to the credit of his new star, Charles B. Dillingham deliberated carefully before he selected the vehicle for the frisky Scheff's second tour, realizing that another season of big success meant that the fascinating prima donna would reign quite alone in the world of light opera. Mr. Dillingham seems to have chosen well, for in "The Two Roses" by Stanislaus Stange and Ludwig Englander, he has found a comedy opera that meets every demand of music lovers who wish a fair share of good natured fun along with their melodies. The general atmosphere of Miss Scheff's new offering is pastoral. Even the star effervesces her way through the apple orchards and rose scented gardens of an eighteenth century country estate, although long before the first act is ended, the bubbles of her good nature have overflowed the rustic simplicity and quite inundated the more subermindad characters. Anything too closely associated with repose would not appeal to Miss Scheff, and in the opera one frolics along first as a dashing French girl, next as a vivacious barmaid and finally as a French prison dame arrayed in all the striking finery of the woman of fashion. She sings as she goes, of course, arias, love songs, concert waltzes; she tests the full range of her splendid vocal powers; she coquettes, romps, laughs, makes love; she does the dozen or more things that have endeared her to the public; she—in short, she is Fritzi Scheff at her very best.

Case to be Appealed.

The case of Charles Hand and Frank Smith against Dr. George Herring, on contract, which was decided in favor of the defendant at Justice Hand's court Friday afternoon, has been appealed. The jury, though the suit was for $150, brought in a verdict of no cause of action, and in addition allowed the defendant $10 for expenditures.

IRELAND'S EMANCIPATION

Story of Erin's Liberator Told by Father Clifford.

O'CONNELL'S WORK

Lecture Under the Auspices of St. Mary's Holy Name Society a Success.

The lecture delivered by Father Clifford, of Bloomfield, at the Casino Wednesday evening attracted a large audience. His subject was "The Catholic Emancipation of Ireland."

After thanking Father Egan, the rector of St. Mary's, for his kind words of introduction and expressing to the audience his appreciation of their flattering reception, of him, Father Clifford said: "The subject, ladies and gentlemen, which I have the honor to discuss before you this evening, like most of the questions which have furnished the data for religious and historical controversy in the past, labors under the initial disadvantage of being known in its main outlines, at least, to the least informed among you; that fact alone would seem to rob it of the interest it might well deter a more ambitious lecturer than myself from attempting to reopen it did I not remember that most of you who have come here tonight to listen to me are Irishmen, or the sons and daughters of Irishmen, or that all of you sympathize with Ireland because you share with her misunderstood and much-tried children in the hostage of a venerable and historic Faith. Yet it is no paradox to say that the question of the Catholic emancipation in the descendants in this country one of the familiar of the historical problems, because it is identified in most minds with the splendor of a name which outshines all others in recent Irish history.

"The Catholic portion of the English speaking races of today, not in Ireland only, but in the vast island continents, the southern seas, and most of all here in the United States of America, are so justly proud of the achievements of O'Connell, that their appreciation of the curious and complex movement in the direction of liberty, which began towards the close of the eighteenth century, and which it was the privilege, under Providence to crown in a large degree, bids fair to come dimmed in consequence. As in every other prominent, and far reaching movement for the uplifting of humanity one man reaped where the others had sown—O'Connell entered with the labor of those who had gone before him, and because he brought these labors to so signal and so unselfish a close, the generations that have benefitted by his genius and his sacrifice, have kept his memory active almost to the exclusion of every other name and every other force that conspired with him to the long awaited issue. In this sense, therefore, it is hardly an exaggeration to contend that the greatest movement which began in 1771 and ended only in 1829, is still largely an unknown movement. It is an unknown movement for other and ambler reasons, over than this, if one my find its sources in part in the drift of eighteenth century discussion in the speculations on government and progress of the rights of man with which Whigs and Doctrinaries in England and in France before the days of the French Revolution disturbed the dreams of the slow going and conservative in all ranks of society. One may detect its remote causes at work, too, in less lively quarters.

"The long lethargy, the social, if not the political sleep that penal system had injected for nearly sixty years into English every day life, and especially in the centers where ideas grow, and are fostered, reached at least upon the children of its projectors. Men began to ask themselves why they should be afraid of Catholics, seeing that Catholics had grown to be so poor and despised a portion of the body politics. Then came the inevitable change born of such self questioning Burke, Flord Grattan, Fox, the two Pitts and Channing, filled the air with new and more generous principles of political expediency. The excesses of the French Revolution, which threw an army of 8,000 priests upon English shores, and compelled Protestantism to see at close hand, and in their own homes often, the real character of the religion they had so long endeavored to trample out of existence. The American struggle for independence, the unhappy controversies aroused by the veto question between the Milner and Cisalpine Club, and finally, the real fear that Burke's oft repeated prophecy might, indeed, come true, and that wheatever English Catholics might attempt their Irish co-religionists, in any rate who had been treated for over a century, as something little better than "half slaves' might end in becoming whole 'Jacobines.'

"These men, the forces and movements and personalities, which, acting sometimes in opposition on the waters of a rising flood are wont to not, created at least, the conditions of things that made it possible for O'Connell to succeed where many had failed.

"In a subject so vast in outline, and so many sided in movement, it would be impossible adequately to portray the characters who prepared the highways for O'Connell's mason. Bourke, Fox, Grattan, Canning, and that most inscrutable, yet interesting of all personalities, the younger Pitt—what is the tale of their parliamentary work, to the end story of English-Catholic compromise with schism, Erastianism, on the one hand, and Irish fidelity on the other? It was to the resolute stand taken by the Irish bishops that Emancipation was finally due, when English-Catholic noblemen and nearly the whole body of the English Vicars Apostolic, were ready to batter away the church's prerogatives for the dubious privilege of a franchise that would with neither dignity nor true political believe. What was hardest of all to understand was the attitude of the Holy See during this disturbed period of controversy from 1808 to 1820, when Dr. Milner and the Irish Episcopate stood out against Mr. Charles Butler and the Catholic committee in England on the famous 'fifth clause or the veto question.

"This unhappy chapter in our history could only be understood if we remembered the condition of affairs at Rome, while Pius VII was a prisoner in Napoleon's hands." The speaker also alluded with great candor to the subsequent suspension pronounced at Rome in 1820 against Dr. Milner, who was prohibited from writing in the columns of the orthodox journal, under penalty of being deprived of his See.

"Milner's disgrace, at this moment of his career only served to enhance the man's title to gratitude at the hands of the Catholics when O'Connell's generosity and puterprise finally carried the day on April, 1829."

The speaker reminded his audience that his special treatment of the subject practically ended with the accession of George IV in 1830. "The history of the Emancipation movement, after that date," said the speaker, "was substantially the history of O'Connell's career.

"The event had proved that the great Parliamentary victory which began with the Clans election, was but an episode in a large and a more protracted struggle on which the noise and the tumult and the man's understanding were still with us. The emancipation of a creed, it was felt, howsoever much men might gainsay it, was but a step to the emancipation of a race.

"The Hepell movement of the first half of the nineteenth century was a logical prelude of an agitation of which the end is not yet."

Y. M. C. A.'S GOOD WORK

SUBJECT OF AN ADDRESS

J. S. TICHENOR'S INTERESTING TALK AT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

The address by J. S. Tichenor, International secretary for army and navy work of the Y. M. C. A., made an address at Trinity church Sunday night, encouraging from the point of view of the work which has been accomplished, yet the speaker's words were full of significance of the great work which is still to be done in both the army and the navy, together with consistent other great fields of men.

"The Y. M. C. A.," the speaker said, "bridges the wide chasm, which is undoubtedly growing in width between large organized bodies and the church. The Y. M. C. A. reaches the laboring classes, and brings them into the church; it founds its associations in army posts, where there is the greatest amount of evil, and on board the ships its Christian influence is felt."

It was with vivid exactness, that Mr. Tichenor told of the work which the Y. M. C. A. has accomplished not only in the mentioned districts but all over the world. He quoted statistics showing that whereas it is undeniably true that young men are drifting farther away from the church, it is the Y. M. C. A. that reaches out its hand to assist them back to the church.

In conclusion the speaker said that it was not the aim of the association to take the man, when he is in the depth of evil, but to begin with the boy, and so mold his life that he will be as true in fighting for Christ, as for his country.

LOCAL FOOTBALL RESULTS

Summary of Games Played by Plainfield Teams This Year.

O. F. C. ELEVEN LEADS

Also Makes a Good Showing—Plainfield High School and Leale's Results.

The football season having come to a close, a review of the games played by Plainfield teams is an interesting one. In respect to number of games played, and to points won, the Orange Field Club leads, closely followed by the Alis team. The Dunellen team made a fair showing in its last contest though in the first part of the season it encountered defeat on all sides.

With regard to the scholastic standing, the championship goes to Leal's, though in the matter of games played and the final result, the Plainfield High School leads. The North Plainfield school comes up in the rear. Leal's record received several hard knocks in the State Interscholastic league games.

The record of the Orange Field Club players for the past season is an enviable one. They have not been defeated once, and though they have had many challenges to their boast of the State 150 pound championship, there has been no team able to defeat them this season. The most notable great is that the contest between the Alis and the O. F. C. teams was not finished, as many believe that the older team could defeat the Oranges. It was impossible to make amicable arrangements between the two teams, however, and the dispute will remain undecided.

Among the teams which have fallen under the Orange Field Club's attack during the season are the following: Dunellen, Somerville, Flemington, Edward Clare, of Elizabeth, and the Navajos, of Brooklyn. The total points scored by the O. F. C. is 89 to its opponents' 11.

Though they played fewer games, the Alis record is a good one. The total number of points won with Dunellen, Columbia Field Club and Madison A. C. is 71, while these teams scored only 5 points against them. The five points were made by the Columbia Field Club, of New York.

The Plainfield High School and Leale's team played against each other twice during the season, the first game going to Leal's by the score of 12 to 0, and the second by the score of 4 to 0. Leal's other games were with Carteret, Pingry, Montclair and Westfield High School. They won 46 points to their opponents' 56.

Besides the two contests with Leal's, the P. H. S. team played against Perth Amboy, Cranford, Carlton A. C., Cedarcroft, Rutgers Prep., and North Plainfield High School, winning in all 66 points against 57 scored by their opponents.

SIGNED THE PLEDGE FOR TWELVE YEARS

JEREMIAH GRIFFIN GOES ON THE WATER WAGON FOR LONG DRIVE.

By taking the pledge for twelve years, Jeremiah Griffin escaped with a suspended sentence when arraigned in the city courts on a charge of drunkenness, on Monday. Jerry solemnly vowed that he would never drink another drop of liquor until 1916 rolls around, s'help him, and the kind-hearted cops were so impressed they forgot to tell Judge Runyon he has said the same thing a few other times. Chief Kiely was delegated to see that he remained true to his word and Jerry went out a free man but with the knowledge that the sleuths will be on his trail for the next 144 months.

William Kenney, overcome by Wet End "red eye," went to sleep on a Grant avenue porch, Saturday night. He paid the city $5 for the lodging and for the intervention which saved him from freezing to death.

Thomas Sims, a West Ender, went to New York Saturday, to see his brother off to Scotland. The parting called for numerous toasts and both Sims' were taking a double view of life when the ship sailed. Thomas still had trouble with his eyes and feet when he returned to Plainfield and a warrant had to take him in. He was let go on suspended sentence.

Mrs. Mosher, mother of Mrs. Eggers, snock, bad bruises and cuts and chest severely injured.

John Baird and his daughter, Annie Baird, of Mill street, Paterson, both injured about the head.

Mrs. Kish, of Westfield, badly cut and bruised about the head and face.

Harry Woodland, North Plainfield, hurt about head and body.

Joseph Carlson, of Cranford, hurt about head and body.

Not one of the persons in the car escaped injury of some sort, but the others than those whose names are given were not badly injured, and after giving what assistance they could to those less fortunate, they disappeared without their identity becoming known.

Failure of air and handbrakes and one of two sand boxes to work properly on the First avenue hill is given as the cause of the accident. The car was No. 1709 of the Dunellen and Newark line. It was in charge of Motorman Louis W. Drake and Conductor Charles W. Harrell, both of this city. A few seconds after starting down the hill the car gained a speed greater than Drake had expected. When several blocks away from Locust street, which is a private right of way for the trolley tracks, and where the curve from First avenue is so sharp as to be almost a right angle, he attempted to check it.

The car was then going at a speed subsequently estimated to have been not less than twenty miles an hour, and on a heavy down grade. To his horror he found that the air brake would not work. Then he attempted to apply the hand brake in an effort to at least partially stop the big, heavy car. That, too, failed to work. Drake knew that the sharp curve at the foot of the decline was only a few seconds of time away from him, for he could plainly see a group of red light lanterns, which is the caution sign for all motormen approaching the spot, which has long been recognized as dangerous. He looked into the car at the twenty-five passengers, who had noticed the unusually high speed at which they were traveling, an unmindful of the impending danger, were apparently enjoying the sensation. He dared not alarm them by making them aware of the conditions, so he redoubled his efforts to make the brakes work, and at the same time spread sand on one of the rails, the other sand box failing to operate properly. When the foot of the hill was reached he was still struggling to avert the then inevitable accident, sticking to his post with grim determination, but to no purpose.

As the forward wheels of the car struck the curve in the rails the front end of the car raised into the air half a dozen feet, and as the rear trucks left the track, the car turned completely over and fell in the roadway with a loud crash.

Motorman Drake and Conductor Harrell were thrown from the car, the former from the front platform and the latter through a window from a point near where Tattam, the only person killed outright, was sitting in the car. Both were injured, but neither seriously. All the passengers were thrown the length of the car and piled in one end. Some of them were fastened down and crushed by portions of the wrecked car and others were able to struggle free from the mass of humanity. Help came from the Roselle Club stables, directly in front of which the accident occurred and in a few minutes all the injured were being temporarily cared for.

Motorman Drake and Conductor Harrell were placed under arrest after the accident but the latter was subsequently released on his own recognizance. Drake is still in the county jail and will be held until after an investigation by the authorities. He is the son of Charles Drake, of West Third street, and has been considered one of the best and most careful motormen on the road.

Inquiry at the Elizabeth General Hospital this noon gave word that Mrs. Harris is doing nicely and that her complete recovery is assured. When she was first taken to the institution her condition was critical but she rallied soon after the flow of blood from her wounds was checked.

The other Plainfielder injured, Harry Woodland, of Grandview avenue, is detained at his home under the care of Dr. Adams. He was sitting directly opposite the man who was killed when the crash came and was tossed about from one end of the car to the other. He was bruised about the entire body and may be injured internally.

C. A. REED'S BROTHER WEDDED IN BALTIMORE

H. B. REED, OF NEWARK, MARRIED TO SOUTHERN SOCIETY BELLE.

The marriage of Miss Louise Woodward Cloud, daughter of Daniel Cloud, president of the Maryland Savings Bank, of Baltimore, and sister of Miss Virginia Woodward Cloud, the authoress, to Hugh Bertram Reed, of Newark, took place Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride, 2,517 North Charles street, Baltimore. Rev. Edward Barnes Mier, rector of Christ church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was preceded by her three brothers, William Woodward Cloud, Daniel Cloud, Jr., and Warren Buckler Cloud. Charles Arthur Reed, brother of the groom, was the best man.

The bride belongs to one of the oldest families in Baltimore and she is an accomplished young woman. The groom is a practicing lawyer in Newark. He formerly resided at Somerville and later in this city, where he studied law with his brother, Charles A. Reed.

Among those from here who witnessed the marriage were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed and daughter, Miss Madeline Reed. There were also guests from Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed will be at home, at 83 Ridgewood avenue, Newark, after January 15.

REAL FOX ENLIVENS RIDE OF THE HUNT CLUB

EIGHTEEN MEMBERS PARTICIPATE IN A LIVELY CHASE.

The regular weekly run of the Watchung Hunt Club Saturday was an unusually exciting and successful one from the fact that a real fox made its appearance. A farmer having notified the master that a fox had been seen in a certain neighborhood, the members anticipated good sport as they met at Oak Tree preparatory to starting out.

The hounds drew covert near the Lehigh Valley Railroad at a point about a mile north of Oak Tree. When the huntsmen were beginning to think that it would be drawn blank, the fox broke covert to the south and was "viewed away" by S. A. Cruikshank. Very speedily were the pack on the scent and going away in hot pursuit, followed by the field of eighteen riders.

The fox took a southerly course across Woodland avenue, round the old Holly farm and across the Lehigh Valley Railroad towards Metuchen, affording the riders a delightful gallop over the high ground. Near Metuchen the fox doubled back, cleverly giving its pursuers the slip in the woods near the railroad tracks.

The chase was one of the most enjoyable which has yet been held and the attendance is a proof of the increasing popularity of the club. Applications for membership are constantly being received, and already there are a number of out of town names on the list of members and applications. Among those who have recently joined the club are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hyde. Next week the huntsmen will start from the Martine farm on Watchung avenue.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE WORK

Petitioned to Open Kensington Ave. to Park Ave.

AN OLD CEMETERY

Councilman Daniel Supplies Information Concerning Found Family Plot.

In the routine order of business at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night a petition for electric lights on Field avenue, between Eighth street and Stelle avenue, was referred to the proper committee, and the Public Service Corporation, through W. R. Caussebrock, local manager, informed the members that on and after January 1, 1901, the rate would be charged for all gas consumed in the public buildings, which has heretofore been furnished free of cost.

A petition was received from Stephen A. Ginna and thirty-five other property-owners asking the Common Council to open Kensington avenue from Prospect to Park avenues, giving among other reasons for this improvement the advantage in having a continuous road from Park avenue to the golf grounds, Muhlenberg Hospital, the Plainfield Driving Park and New Brunswick, and that the road would open up, the petitioners understood, into a plaza that is to be laid out in that section of the city. Accompanying the petition was a map. The petition and map were referred to the street committee.

Mr. Daniel reported on the communication received from the State President of the Daughters of the Revolution asking for information regarding an old unused cemetery in the south-eastern end of the city, which the organization desired to fence in and maintain as a Revolutionary landmark. Mr. Daniel stated that he had furnished the petitioner with the necessary information. He said that the plot referred to was known as the Pound family cemetery.

Mr. Daniel said that, just as he anticipated there might be some technical defect in the bond of Tax Collector-elect Robert L. Lee, the bond was not ready for presentation for approval, and he moved that when the Common Council adjourn it be to meet tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, at which time it would be ready.

Mr. Bullock reported back several petitions referred to him, one being a request from Bateman Thatcher for permission to build an addition to his house on East Fourth street. The second petition was for a fire alarm box corner of East Second street and Richmond streets. This had previously been granted, as was also a petition for a fire hydrant at West Third and Richmond streets. The fire box referred to was moved from the corner of East Second and Berckman streets.

M'CARDELL ACCUSES BULLOCK OF BAD FAITH

EXCITING SCENE AT THE CITY CLERK'S OFFICE LAST NIGHT.

Andrew McCardell, of the Fourth ward, and Councilman William Starr Bullock, one of the First ward councilmen, engaged in an altercation in the City Clerk's office last night which caused a mild sensation in Republican political circles. Just before the Common Council met and while a coterie of its members and politicians were gathered at the City Clerk's office, Mr. McCardell, it seems, accused Councilman Bullock of some alleged breach of faith, being incensed because the latter would not support Herbert Buxton as a candidate to succeed Robert L. Lee, who had resigned as a member of the body. Mr. Buxton was the recognized candidate of the Fourth ward leaders, but the majority of the councilmen, it was generally believed, were not favorable to him. The lie was passed time and again between Mr. McCardell and Mr. Bullock and there was an invitation to settle the dispute in a fistic encounter in which Mr. Bullock seemed agreeable. Finally Mr. McCardell assured the Councilman that he would settle the affair at another time and the heated argument ended.

ADVERSE TO SALOON LIMIT

Introduction of the Measure Causes Lively Debate.

LAID ON THE TABLE

Councilman Tyler Consents to Have Action on the Subject Postponed —Provisions of Ordinance.

The introduction by Councilman W. S. Tyler of his proposed amendments to the ordinance to license inns and taverns, which provide for the restriction of the district in which saloons and other drinking places may be established, to the business section of the city, caused a lengthy discussion at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Monday. The matter resulted in such a storm of protest on the part of a majority of the members that on Mr. Daniel's motion, the amendments were laid on the table, after a free and full discussion was allowed. It seemed to be the general opinion that too much haste was being shown; that more time should be allowed for a consideration of so important an ordinance. In the face of the opposition Mr. Tyler gracefully retired and said that if it was the wish of some of the members he was perfectly willing that the amendments should go over another year.

There were two amendments offered by Mr. Tyler for the better regulation of the sale of malt and spirituous liquors and they defined the district in which liquor could be sold. This district included that part of the city lying between Green brook and West Fourth street, Watchung avenue and Central avenue to a point one hundred feet distant beyond these avenues so as to take in both sides of the streets.

The second amendment provided that no saloon shall be located within 250 feet of a school, church or any house of public worship and prevented the transfer of the license to any other person in case of death, removal or for similar causes whereby the license might be forfeited, and it further provided that the amendments would not be applicable to persons who hold license prior to its adoption, that is persons now outside of the prescribed district would not be affected so long as they continued to do business, but if their license should terminate at any time and not be renewed another application could not be granted for this place. Mr. Tyler moved the adoption of the amendments on the first reading, and to allow a discussion Mr. Garrigues seconded the motion.

Mr. Gloak as once wanted to know if the amendments had been discussed at any length by other members, he professing a lack of knowledge concerning the proposed action.

Mr. Tyler replied that he had sent a copy of the amendments to Mr. Randolph, the other member of the license committee, for the purpose of getting his views concerning them.

Mr. Ranodph then stated his position in a most emphatic manner. He did not doubt that it would be a good thing to define the saloon district, but as a member of the Common Council from the Fourth ward he could not conscientiously vote for the amendments. He thought the matter should be left open to further discussion and on these grounds he entered a protest against their adoption. He expressed the belief that the matter was so fixed that the amendments would be carried any way. "If I had my way," said Mr. Randolph, "I would not vote for a single license, provided I was sure that liquor could be kept out of the city, but there are people who have cases of liquor sent to them here, secondly goods which these same people order liquor through their grocers and have it delivered to their homes. This is all right for those who can afford that sort of thing, but there are others who cannot and they have some rights. The people of the other wards seem to think that those in the Fourth ward are a lot of ignoramuses. I think I am voting right in voting against the amendments."

Mr. Gloak said that such an important ordinance should be seen by every member and that duplicate copies of it should be sent to each one so that due consideration could be given to the subject.

Mr. Murphy said that he only understood the amendments in a general way, most of his information having been gained through the newspapers. He, too, considered the matter so important that every member should have a copy of the amendments. He then proposed a recess to consider the changes. A motion to that effect made by Mr. Murphy was subsequently lost by a tie vote of five to five, and the discussion was continued.

Mr. Randolph again spoke on the question, stating that if Mr. Tyler could propose a method to do away with speak-easies he would be glad to know of it. He said that the Common Council had cut out saloons, but that speak-easies were springing up all over and if the city wants that sort of thing the action of the members was all right.

Mr. Daniel explained that there are two motions not debatable, one to adjourn and another to take a recess, and while the motion to take a recess was before the Common Council and he really had no right to discuss the question, he would like to amend the motion offered by Mr. Tyler that the amendments be adopted on first reading, by moving to lay them on the table. This motion finally prevailed.

Mr. Tyler then asked those who strongly objected to his amendments to carefully study them and be prepared to vote at the next meeting, provided there was a disposition to adopt them this year. He explained the necessity of action on some other night besides the one on which the amendments would come up for final adoption.

Mr. Murphy then stated that he would be out of town tomorrow night, when the Common Council will meet again, and as he did not originally favor the amendments, preferring to know more about them he would not be prepared to vote. He could not understand why anyone should object to a recess, it being the only way to quickly reach a decision.

Mr. Tyler replied that he had no desire to press the vote, but if the amendments were to go into effect this year it would be necessary to take action soon.

Once more Mr. Murphy spoke on the question. This time he said that he considered the ordinance one that would restrain future Common Councils in their action on license applications and he thought the principle a wrong one. He then quoted Blackstone to prove that his position was well taken, concluding with the statement that while his views on the license question do not agree with those of other members he did not believe that the present body should dictate the policy of future Common Councils.

President Tolles, after asking Mr. Garrigues to take the chair, entered into the discussion. In the present form he said that he objected to the amendments and would oppose them. He cited the fact in case a liquor dealer should die the money he had paid for a license would be a loss and some provision should be made to see that full value is received. He believed that the Common Council should be careful in passing such ordinances and the one proposed did not seem to be fair to the dealer or the man who wants to take a drink occasionally. He said that it would cost some people almost as much to go back and forth to a saloon as it would for the drink. He also spoke of the Netherwood Hotel adding that without a bar license the place would not pay and the proposed amendments would affect the future of this hotel.

Mr. Daniel on another motion to enter his protest to the amendments, stating that he opposed the ordinance in its present form. He was under the impression that the liquor question in this city was well handled and although a license was granted to a man, in reality it was to the place known as a saloon or hotel where large sums of money are expended in fitting these places up. Such amendments as Mr. Tyler proposed he believed were inclined to affect property rights. He understood that the Netherwood Hotel, which had been licensed, was not likely to resume right away, but with the license question in the hands of the Common Council applications in the residential districts can be refused if thought best. For these and other reasons Mr. Daniel said he would vote against the ordinance.

The other members having expressed their views, Mr. Tyler thought it about time to have his say. He commenced by stating that the saloon question is an abstract one to liquor dealers and that the application of rules in one does not work successfully in the other. Continuing Mr. Tyler said "There are no two members in this body that exactly agree concerning the saloon. It needs to be controlled by a strong hand, although not necessarily abolished. It is the paramount duty of the members to see that these places are well policed and that no more harm than is absolutely possible results therefrom."

Mr. Tyler then explained his amendments where they refer to the area, stating in simple language the definition as to the territory included in it.

"This is not a new matter with me," continued Mr. Tyler. "I have taken pains to discuss it with members of the Common Council during the past six months and I do not care to act hasty. I sent a copy of the amendments to Mr. Randolph. (First I had heard of it, exclaimed Mr. Randolph,) and I sent a copy to President Tolles. The object of these amendments is this. The saloons ought to be where they are now and not allowed to grow. Every year the various license applications are discussed and personality enters into every application. I have not drafted an ordinance to suit the license committee, if I had I would have changed it in many respects, but I have tried to make it suit the majority of the members. The principle in the matter should actuate the decision of the Common Council.

"Let us restrict the district and then prevent saloons being established in the residential sections. We consider the Netherwood Hotel as out of bounds and not a success with or without a bar. However, there is nothing in these amendments to deprive the hotel of a license if the members deem it wise that one should be granted there. As for the possibility of the death of a saloon keeper, I think they are all a hearty and husky-looking lot of men and not likely to die soon. I think there is a fallacy there as already expressed. I do not favor an increase in the number of saloons in the prescribed area. I protest that saloon licenses are property rights. This is not so in any sense of the word." In conclusion Mr. Tyler said that he had no objection to the matter going over another year if the majority of the members felt that way.

In response to Mr. Daniel's request, Mr. Tyler explained that many of his ideas regarding the amendments were obtained, from a similar ordinance now in force in Milwaukee. In that city Mr. Tyler stated that there was strong opposition to the adoption of such a plan, but now it had gained favor to such an extent that any attempt to repeal it would result in the defeat of the official attempting this.

The amendments were then laid on the table and further discussion terminated.

EPISCOPALIANS ELECT VESTRYMEN FOR YEAR

ANNUAL PARISH MEETINGS IN THE LOCAL CHURCHES.

Wardens, vestrymen and delegates to the diocesan convention were elected at the annual parish meeting of the Church of the Holy Cross held in the parish house, Monday. Those chosen as vestrymen were R. U. Dudley, George M. Holstein, Frank S. Browne, William L. Saunders and C. M. Burt. Dr. J. H. Carman was elected senior warden and Charles L. Nichols junior warden. The delegates elected to attend the next diocesan convention were Dr. J. H. Carman, Charles L. Nichols and William L. Saunders.

At Grace church E. H. Booth was elected senior warden and Marion S. Ackerman as junior warden. Those vestrymen chosen were Charles E. Brooks, W. T. Gough, W. T. Pellet-ier, Lewis G. Timpson, Julius E. Erickson, Arthur Masters, O. G. Waring. These delegates were chosen to attend the next diocesan convention: W. E. Lowe, Charles Bull and John B. Dument. The vestry met afterwards and organized by electing Marion S. Ackerman as secretary and O. G. Waring treasurer.

The report of the work of the center, Rev. H. Vicars Stevenson, showed a very satisfactory condition, as did also the report of the treasurer.

BROTHERS HOLD REUNION

Thanksgiving of the Weavers, All Past Three Score Years.

THEIR WAR RECORDS

David, John, George and Peter Weaver Hold a Feast at David's Home in the Borough.

Contrasting the tender turkey and other Thanksgiving edibles before them with the hardtack and salt pork of forty years ago, the Weaver brothers, of this city and Somerville, held a unique re-union Thursday. There are four of them, Peter and David, of Plainfield, and John and George, of Somerset County seat, and each one of them served through the greater part of the Civil War and bears a record that many a veteran might envy. The dinner was held at David's home on Manning avenue and though there were many relatives present, the four brothers were given precedence in conversation and they recounted with great interest the time when they shouldered muskets and fought for the preservation of the Union.

Each one of the brothers has passed the three score milestone in life but to observers it was hard to believe it. They were "boys" again and they joked and played pranks upon one another as they did before they donned the blue. Infirmity is a thing that is foreign to them and the little touch of rheumatism which Peter contracted in service and which bothers him ever and anon, considerately stayed away. Altogether it was a highly enjoyable affair to all present and one of the best the brothers have ever held.

During the progress of the dinner each member of the quartette related his war record which was as follows:

John, aged sixty-nine years; enlisted in Battery B, Second New Jersey Artillery, September 3, 1864, at Newark; was in the battles of City Point, Petersburg, Fort Steadman, Appomattox and was present at the surrender of General Lee in 1865. He was discharged at Trenton.

George, sixty-seven years old; enlisted September 23, 1861, in Company F, Ninth New Jersey Regiment; was in battles of Roanoke Island, Newbern, Fort Macon, Southwest Creek, Kinston, Goldsboro and Tarboro, N. C. He was discharged at Newbern, N. C., December 19, 1864.

David, sixty-five years old and Peter, sixty-two years old, have records identically the same, remaining with each other all the time. They enlisted twice, the first time on September 5, 1862, in Company A, Thirtieth New Jersey Regiment. They were in the battles of City Point, Aquia Creek, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Petersburg, Darbytown and Chapin's Farm. In September, 1864, they enlisted again, this time in Battery E, Third U. S. Artillery. They were at the capture of Fort Fisher, under General Terry, and also Wilmington, Northeast Station, Fason Station, Fayetteville and Raleigh, N. C. They were discharged at Trenton at the close of the war.

MRS. SANDFORD BURIED.

Services Held From Her Late Home Wednesday and Interment at Hillside.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary J. Sandford, widow of Joseph W. Sandford, were held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the late residence on West Seventh street. The attendance of relatives and friends was very large. The floral tributes were exceedingly beautiful comprising cut flowers, wreaths, crosses and other forms of set pieces.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of the Unitarian church, conducted the services, reading Scripture and making a short address. During the services several appropriate selections were rendered by the boy choir from Rev. Dr. Klitredge's church, Fifth street and Madison avenue, New York. The interment took place yesterday in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Marshall, of Duluth, Minn., who some years ago was a resident of Grove street, was a guest at the reception given Wednesday night by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Hageman, on the coming out of their daughter, Miss Virginia Hageman.

FIRE IN WALL PAPER STORE

Blaze at the McIntyre Building in North Avenue.

LOSS IS ABOUT $5,000

Spontaneous Combustion is Said to be the Cause of the Blaze.

Evidently starting from spontaneous combustion, fire broke out in the rear of the Persian Wall Paper Company's store in the McIntyre building on North avenue, Wednesday afternoon, and for a time threatened the entire structure. Fed by inflammable paper and paints, the flames swept in all directions and were creeping into the apartments on the second floor when detected by the firemen. The loss on stock will reach $4,500, while the insurance is but $3,000. The building loss is about $500.

Louis Goldfarb, the proprietor of the place, and his clerk, Miss Lottie Hepner, were seated in the office midway from the street entrance, when the latter noticed a light flickering in a corner in the back part of the store. She directed Goldfarb's attention to it and as he sprang to his feet to investigate, a sheet of flame shot up to the ceiling and was quickly followed by a crackling that showed a good-sized blaze was in progress. Both occupants had barely time to catch up their coats and hats and get outdoors before the fire was upon them. Goldfarb ran through a North avenue store to notify fire headquarters but in the meantime the smoke had been noticed by John P. Hall, who caused a alrm to be rung in from box 13; by Patrolman Overman.

Several lines of hose were stretched in and by attacking the flames from the front and rear parts of the store at the same time, they were soon subdued. The firemen were greatly hampered in their work by thick volumes of black smoke that emanated from roofing paint and Captain Townley was all but suffocated at one time. He was down in an alley way back of the building hauling a line of hose, when the water was turned on and the hydrant and when it ceased to flow, the smoke and flame enveloped him. Because of the construction of the alleyway it was almost impossible for him to get out and he was in a dangerous predicament when the water began flowing again. The smoke filled all the apartments in the McIntyre building and also the Martin building adjoining, frightening the tenants and causing many of them to start removing valuables. John F. McIntyre, the owner of the building, occupies the second floor, the kitchen of which was the only part damaged.

Proprietor Goldfarb said today that as soon as his affairs could be arranged and the building repaired he would resume business.

Common Council's Reorganization.

According to the usual custom the new Common Council will meet on Monday night, January 1, for the purpose of effecting an organization, such as the election of a president, janitor, naming the official newspapers, appointment of committees and other routine business. The Common Council will then adjourn to some future date in the month to transact whatever business there may come up. There is every reason to believe that Ralph L. Tolley will be continued as president for another year and the general opinion seems to be that there will not be many changes in the committees.

Two Weddings in Rectory.

St. Mary's church rectory was the scene of two quiet weddings Wednesday evening. The first was that of Miss Helen O'Keefe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Keefe, to Elmer Tan Eyck, of Easton, Pa., and the other Miss Nettie Goff, daughter of John J. Goff, of West Front street, to John Kelley, of Elizabeth. Father Egan officiated in each instance.

Quietly Married.

With only a few relatives in attendance, Miss Rachel S. Pittinger and John G. Hafner, both of this city, were married Wednesday evening, at the former's home on Madison avenue. Rev. J. W. Masson, of Faith chapel, was the officiating clergyman. Mr. and Mrs. Hafner will make their home at 710 Central street, Netherwood.

LARGEST CUT-GLASS VASE.

Biggest Article of the Kind in Existence Is on Exhibition in St. Louis.

The largest piece of cut glass in the world, a vase as tall as a man, and as brilliant in every part as the finest small piece, has been completed in Philadelphia and shipped to the St. Louis exposition, where it has been placed in the industrial art display. The vase is five feet six and three-fourths inches in height, and every inch of it is perfectly worked in sunbursts, chrysanthemums and beaded and notched effects that shed prismatic rays of brilliance and luster. The sunbursts on the star are too large to be designated by that usual cut glass term, so they have been given a new name, the Louisiana Purchase star. In all there are 100,000 cuts or deep incisions on the vase, which required turning it 200,000 times. The vase weighs 200 pounds. It was produced by nine men, who spent 2,000 working hours on it. The man who made the blank is six feet seven inches tall. A shorter man could not have handled the great piece of glass. Twenty blanks were turned out before a perfect one was produced. The remarkable brilliancy of the vase is caused by the fusing in the glass of not 1 per cent, more lead than is ordinarily used. The vase is several times larger than the previous greatest piece of cut glass, completely dwarfing it.

BASKETBALL GIRLS QUIT.

Outlook for Coming Season Is Very Gloomy According to Captain of Eastern Team.

"Our outlook for basketball isn't very bright this year," remarked the captain of the senior basketball team of a well-known woman's college to a Philadelphia Press reporter.

"Our worst loss is going to be our center, who doesn't return to college this year because she is going to be married. Of course, I can forgive her, but just listen to the excuses the others offer: One girl writes that she can't play this year because the same makes her hands large, and her father objects to that. Another says she can't play because she always loses her temper when the umpire calls a foul on her, and that her mother is afraid she'll become a regular 'cross-patch.' I did expect something better of my goal defender, but here is her resignation along with the others, saying that she met a girl this summer who had played in that position at Bryn Mawr for three years, and she was such an aggressive, assertive person that she's afraid if she plays goal defender any longer she will become like the Bryn Mawr woman."

BROKER'S LUNCH COSTLY.

Sells 5,000 Shares to Pay for Meal and Finds That Stock Soars Three Points.

There is a good story told of a well-known broker, which, though rather expensive to him, serves to illustrate some of the methods which are in vogue during the period when the public is out of the market. In such times, says the Brooklyn Eagle, brokers get practically no commission business and they are simply gambling as much among themselves as if they sat down to a table with a poker layout. The incident mentioned occurred on a day when trading would be called wholly professional. About noontime the broker referred to decided he would go and put in a trade to pay expenses. Consequently he went on the floor of the exchange and sold 5,000 shares of Metropolitan. He then went to lunch, stayed some time, and, on returning found that Metropolitan had soared three points. He looked the situation over and decided to buy back the stock, and found himself not only out his lunch money, but about $16,000 besides. Ofttimes, however, it goes the other way.

MAIL MAN BRINGS LOBSTER

Gloucester, Mass., Fish Dealer Uses Service for the Delivery of His Wares.

According to the Grocery World, the very latest development of the mail order business is the delivery of fish in this manner. A fish dealer and packer doing business in Gloucester, Mass., announces this as a very large end of his trade. He deals only with the consumer and packs fresh lobsters, crab and shrimp in the proper shape for transmission through the mails, and purports to have sea food delivered at the door in almost any part of the country before it has lost the delicate flavors which are to be found alone in the fish fresh from the water. Not only are the fresh fish shipped in this manner, but salted fish, such as salmon, mackerel and codfish. Quite an extensive trade has been worked up by this individual. He has on his books standing orders to send quantities of fish at regular intervals, while others receive a regular weekly supply for an entire season.

Charcoal for Wounds.

At a cost of 25 cents Japanese doctors can dress the wounds of 500 men. They use a finely powdered charcoal obtained by the slow combustion of straw in closed furnaces. Sachets filled with it are applied to the wounds, and its antiseptic and absorbent qualities generally effect a rapid cure.

Do Away with Prison Stripes.

Following the abolition of the lockstep and the cropped head in New York state prisons has come the doing away with the stripes on convicts' clothing, and 2,000 suits minus the stripes are being made.

OLD CORN COB PIPE.

IT SAVED THE LIFE OF A WELL-KNOWN PROSPECTOR.

Unique Incident in the Life of "Diamondfield Davis"—A Western Cowboy Who May Soon Be a Millionaire.

This is a story of how an old cob pipe played an important part in saving the life of a man convicted of murder, and how the saving of the life may bring a large fortune to another man.

Down in the New Goldfield mining district in Nevada is a camp called Diamondfield. It did not receive its name from the fact that diamonds have been discovered there, but from the circumstance that the best claims in the camp were located by "Diamondfield Jack" Davis, who, according to late reports, is likely soon to be a multi-millionaire.

Back in the early and middle '90's "Diamondfield Jack" was a trusted range rider in the employ of the Sparks-Herrold Cattle company in Idaho. In those days there was much friction between the cattle men and the sheep men, and on the range covered by "Diamondfield Jack" it is said that a "dead line" had been established, which the sheep men were forbidden to cross with their flocks.

When, therefore, on February 16, 1896, John C. Wilson, a sheep herder, and his companion, a man named Cummings, were found dead in their camp on disputed ground, evidently murdered, and it was further discovered that "Diamondfield Jack" and his partner, Jack Gleason, had been in that locality about the time the killing took place, they were promptly arrested for the crime.

Jack Davis was placed on trial first and it was one of the most closely contested murder trials in the history of Idaho. Gov. Sparks, who believed implicitly in the innocence of his employes, retained A. L. Perky and Hawley & Puckett, of Boise, to defend Davis, while Judge O. W. Powers, of Salt Lake City, and Judge Borah, of Boise, were employed against him in the prosecution. Every inch of the ground was fought over carefully, the evidence was all circumstantial and the defendant came very near proving an alibi—it having been necessary for Davis and Gleason to have made an almost impossible ride in order to have been at the sheep men's camp at the time it was proved they were killed. But Davis was convicted of murder in the first degree. His case was sent to the supreme court of Idaho and to the federal court of appeals, but he was beaten at every turn and the date of his execution was finally fixed, with only the possible clemency of the governor to intervene.

Then it was that Judge O. W. Powers, who had done at least as much as any other man to convict Davis, became convinced, largely upon the strength of new evidence discovered, that Davis was innocent. Judge Powers thereupon went before the governor of Idaho and pleaded for the commutation of Davis' sentence to life imprisonment, which was granted. Later, he presented to the governor a written argument for an absolute pardon for Davis and this was also granted.

When Judge Powers was recently reminded of the celebrated case he said:

"Do you know the first thing that raised a doubt in my mind as to the guilt of 'Diamondfield Jack' was an old cob pipe, which was found under the wagon in which laid the body of the murdered sheep men? The pipe was introduced in evidence by the prosecution, and at the time this was done I happened to be looking in the face of a witness for the prosecution, a man named Bowers. An expression passed over this man's face which showed that he was peculiarly affected. I said then to one of my colleagues that Bowers knew something about that pipe, but the others thought there was nothing to it and the incident was passed over at the time. But the doubt created in my mind then helped to convince me when further evidence tending to prove Davis' innocence was presented.

"Bowers, who once ran a meat market at Ogden, afterward confessed that it was he and another man who killed the sheep men, and he told them of the old cob pipe having been knocked into his mouth in the struggle which took place. He was also plea of self-defense and was acquitted. Davis' partner, Gleason, was acquitted before this confession was made, a fact which probably helped in securing Davis' commutation of sentence."

Potato King of Kansas.

The potato king in Kansas is Junius G. Groves, of Edwardsville. He is a colored man, is worth at least $100,000, and made the most of his wealth raising potatoes.

LITERARY.

It would be impossible for a lawyer to make a reputation in his profession while constantly thinking about medicine or engineering. He must think about law, and most study and become thoroughly imbued with its principles. It is unscientific to expect to attain excellence or ability enough to gain distinction in any particular line while holding the mind upon and continually contemplating something radically different.—Success.

Some extremely monotyping is to see a bit of a boy fakir, seemingly a very novice in his profession, sit down on the bare ground with only a rag of a cummerbund in which to conceal anything, pick up a twig of a green plant, strip off the leaves and turning them into large scorpions, hurl them among the spectators, clap his hands once or draw a ravelling from his clothes and pulling it by between his palms, suddenly toss a cobra several feet around the neck of one of the spectators.—Broughton Brandenburg in The Metropolitan Magazine for December.

Pearson's Magazine for December presents the unusually numerous collection of six special articles and eight sparkling pieces of fiction. "The American House of Lords," by David S. Barry, is the leading article, and tells of the perquisites and obsequies of United States Senators; as they are to convene on the first Monday of December, this paper is peculiarly timely. A sketch of the philanthropic career of the late Louis Fleischmann relates the history and the details of his world-famed Bread Line, one of the sights of New York. Still another timely article is H. P. Burchell's "International Athletics," copiously illustrated with photographs.

The December Delineator, with its message of good cheer and helpfulness, will be welcomed in every home. The fashion pages are unusually attractive, illustrating and describing the very latest modes in a way to make their construction during the busy festive season a pleasure instead of a task, and the literary and pictorial features are of rare excellence. A selection of love songs from the Wagner Operas, rendered into English by Richard de Gallienne and beautifully illustrated in colors by J. C. Leyendecker, occupies a prominent place, and a chapter in the Composers' Series, relating the romance of Wagner and Cosima, is an interesting supplement to the lyrics. A very clever paper entitled "The Court Circles of Republic," describes some unique phases of Washington social life is from an unnamed contributor, who is said to write from the inner circles of society.

George Madden Martin interprets the real spirit of Christmas in a story in the December McClure's, which she gives the title "God Rest You, Merry Christians." It is a wonderful picture Mrs. Martin gives her readers, of a real home and real people in it on the night before Christmas, when most of the household have arrived at "the tears and tissuepaper stage." The situation is only saved from bedlam by the calm sanity of her heroine, who, realizing the true significance of the day, pours into it enough of good cheer, peace on earth and love to bring joy to all within her circle. Mrs. Martine makes keen though kindly analysis of the true and the false Christmas spirit, which is good reading for all at this season.

J. F. Hubbard to be Re-Elected.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will meet on Tuesday, January 2, at Elizabeth, to organize for the coming year. Considering the overwhelming victory of the Republicans in the last election there is no doubt but that J. Frank Hubbard, the present director, will be continued as such. There is no opposition to him. It is said that Freeholder W. A. Westphal will continue his membership on the committees he is now serving on.

Plainfielder Suffers Loss by Fire.

Kerro Knox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Knox, of North Plainfield, who is a student at college, lost all his personal belongings in a fire on Tuesday, Thursday, which resulted in the destruction of one-half of Morgan Hall, a dormitory. The fire started in room 18, occupied by Knox and his room-mate, William Winslow, of Cold Spring, N. Y.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicines is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healty state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail it.

SPENT THE EVENING WITH THE PRESIDENTS

INSTRUCTIVE ENTERTAINMENT PROVIDED BY A CHURCH SOCIETY.

"An evening with some of our famous Presidents," was a pleasant form of entertainment provided for the members of the Epworth League, of the First M. E. church, Friday, by the social committee, of which Miss Elsie Horne is the chairman. The affair was held in Vincent chapel, which was decorated with pictures of many Presidents and American flags.

The first part of the evening was devoted to the presentation of interesting papers on the lives of some of the Presidents. Miss Yoran read a paper on Jafferson. Hiey Snodgrass presented the life of Lincoln. Miss Ida Angleman told of the life of McKinley, while Louis Wilson read a paper on Roosevelt. Each paper gave principal incidents in the life of a President.

After the reading of the papers there were vocal solos by Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell and Miss Geesewein, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Joseph Dunham. The rest of the evening was spent in a social manner and refreshments were served.

Mrs. Foster on Japan.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, held a social meeting Friday evening at the residence of R. J. Ihrves, on Grove street. Mrs. F. C. Fosters, of Newark, the president of the Farther Lights Societies of New Jersey, gave a talk on the Empire of Japan, using a wall map and a sand map in illustration. Her outline of the kingdom, customs of the people and missionary stations was full of charm and interest.

Former Plainfielder Married.

Friends in this city have received cards announcing the marriage of Theodore Blydenburgh Smith, formerly of Watervals avenue, and Miss Nila Searing Miller, of Morristown. The ceremony was performed at the latter's home Thanksgiving day. Mr. Smith has been living with his parents in Morristown since they removed from Plainfield and he is employed in the New York custom-house.

Volunteer Firemen Will Act.

Because of a recent decision handed down by the Court of Errors and Appeals, declaring that the exemptions heretofore allowed firemen and soldiers is illegal, volunteer fire departments throughout the State are planning a united action to secure proper compensation for services. Failing in this the firemen will refuse to serve. The initiative in the matter has been taken by the State Firemen's Relief Association and is rapidly spreading to all parts of the State.

East End Has Milk Thief.

The local police have received complaints from residents in the East End who are the victims of a milk thief. The morning supply left on the porches has been disappearing regularly and it has caused much annoyance. A patrolman has been assigned to get hold of the thirsty one.

ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had

The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and rich. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

MISS HEGEMAN'S DEBUT

Brilliant Reception in Honor of B. A. Hegeman's Daughter.

FIVE HUNDRED GUESTS

The Affair at the Park Club Opens Social Season in City and Borough.

The reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, of Central avenue, for their daughter, Miss Virginia Hegeman, at the Park Club on Wednesday evening, was a brilliant affair and marked the opening of the local social season. The clubhouse never presented a more attractive appearance, handsomely decorated with a profusion of flowers, while the presence of so many richly gowned women and the unusually good orchestral music by VanBarr, of New York, all combined to make the affair the social function of the early winter season. Seldom has a Plainfield debutante been showered with so much honor.

The clubhouse was decorated with Southern smilax, palms and yellow chrysanthemums, while the lights were shaded with pink. Miss Hegeman received over one hundred floral gifts, mose of which were American Beauty Roses.

Notwithstanding that there were over five hundred guests present, testing the capacity of the clubhouse, there was but little inconvenience during the receiving hours. After 11 o'clock there was dancing by the younger set and this was continued until 3 o'clock yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Hegeman and Miss Hegeman were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Charles Matthews, Mrs. Francis deLacy Hyde, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. James B. Jay, Mrs. Augustus I. Healy, Mrs. Walter Gaston, Miss Edith C. Fisk, Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Georgiana H. Smith, Miss Marjorie Fleming, Miss Dorothy Fleming, Miss Isabel Milne, Miss Nellie Valiant, Miss Margaret McCutchen, Grace Kaufman, of this city; Miss Elizabeth Weeden, of Brooklyn; Miss Helen Keeler, of Elizabeth; Mrs. Lavina Thorne, of Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Judith Longyear, of Boston; Miss Florence Sutton, of Boston; Miss Margaret Wynkoop, of Spring Lake; the Misses Allen and Theodora McCutchen, of Bells Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Hegeman and Miss Hegeman were gowns of lace and the debutante carried a bouquet of bridesmaid roses, the gift of her brother, Harold A. Hegeman. The other women in the receiving party were handsomely gowned.

During the evening supper was served by a Newark caterer, and the arrangement was so perfect as not to interfere in any way with the festivities.

Following this reception will be several dinners given for Miss Hegeman. Those arranged are by Mr. Edward E. Ladd, Mrs. W. T. Kaufman and Mrs. Francis deLacy Hyde.

Both Plainfield and North Plainfield society was largely represented, but a few of the prominent out-of-town guests were as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. DeLano, of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hardy, M. Jackson Crispin, of New York; Mrs. Harry C. Marshall and Bernard Marshall, of Duluth, Minn.; Captain John Bonge, U. S. A., of West Point; Miss E. Agnes Barnes, of Jersey City; Miss Leila, of Elizabeth; James Brewster, of Hartford, Conn.; Miss Murray, of Cleveland, O.

QUIET WEDDING.

Miss Lizzie Trimmer Becomes the Wife of John P. VanHorn, of Summit Avenue.

Miss Lizzie Trimmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Trimmer, of Hunter avenue, and John P. Van Horn, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Van Horn, of Summit avenue, were quietly married Wednesday evening at 7:30 by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at his home on West Front street. The couple was accompanied by the bride's mother and the groom's parents and brother, George VanHorn. The bride wore a gown of brown cloth and a brown beaver hat and she carried carnations. After the ceremony the party returned to the home of the groom's parents, where they will live for the present.

The groom is employed at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, and is a member of Benevolent Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and Greenbrook Council, Royal Arcanum.

A Family Reunion.

A pleasant Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed Thursday at the home of M. B. Ryder, in Central avenue, which was made more attractive by the fact that his father, S. C. Ryder, of Brooklyn, and his two brothers, William and Jacob Ryder, both of Harlem, were present.

UNITED IN THANKSGIVING

The Denominational Churches Joined in a Praise Service.

DR. CHAMBLISS' SERMON

Protestant Ministers Lead a Large Congregation in Thanksgiving Thursday.

The Union Thanksgiving services under the auspices of the Protestant churches of the city were held Thursday morning in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. There was an unusually large attendance and more than ordinary interest manifested. An anthem by the church choir opened the services, after which there was reading of sentences of Scripture by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the church; Rev. Dr. W. C. Bandgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, read the President's proclamation, which was followed by the invocation and Lord's Prayer by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church.

The reading of the Psalter was by Rev. George Mooney, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church. Then the choir sang "The Gloria," after which Rev. Dr. Cornelius Sobenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, read the Scripture lesson. A hymn preceded a prayer by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, with the response by the choir.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, preached the sermon, taking for his text, Psalm 31-8: "Thou Hast Set My Feet in a Large Place." The discourse was exceedingly appropriate and very impressive. In part Rev. Dr. Chambliss said:

"In some respects this day has a clearer voice in its appeal to us than our national Thanksgivings sometimes have. That is not to say that God has been any better or kinder to us than always in the past. It is only to confess the dullness of our souls that sometimes refuse to hear as all the notes of goodness in His Providence, or bear them only in muffled tones. Our hearts too often are like the fabled statue of Memnon, that made melody when the sunbeams fell on it warm and golden, that had only dismal waitings for the night-time. How strange it is that we who are Christians and not pagans, find occasion for Thanksgiving to God only in what is pleasing to our sensibilities, gratifies our wishes, or prospers our efforts.

"But sorrow, misfortune, loss disappointment, struggle, suffering, death—which our religion tells us are often the very best gifts of our Father's love—let such things shroud our path, and at once we sit down under some Jonah's booth in miserable questioning of God's faithfulness and goodness.

"And so of national life. If our country is striding onward in strength and glory, if confidence nerves the sinews of trade, and money is sound, and stocks are strong, and factories are running in full time, and harvests are bountiful, and health and order prevail; if victory has crowned the battle, and the dulcet pipe of peace soothes all the troubled land where late the wild alarm sounded from the tocsin's throat, how ready then we are to sing, 'Oh, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men.'

"But when bleak adversity sweeps over the country, cutting chill and keen to the heart of the people, when the fruits of the field are cut off; when all financial pulse smites the land and the mills are idle, and the shops are closed, and labor groans in misery, or perhaps cries out in wrath and lifts a vengeful arm; when war-clouds roll and burst in fury—how rare then is the religion that sees a smiling face behind the frowning Providence, and smiles back peacefully, confidingly, singing the while 'God's in His Heaven, All's right with the world.'

"Now I do not forget that everybody has been reading with greater avidity than usual, during the last few months—as always in a Presidential year—and I know very well that it would be all but impossible for a speaker today to present any fact or opinions relating to the conditions or prospects of problems of our country which would not be to every intelligent man and woman among you a twice-told tale. So the text which I have announced will be used only to remind you of a single aspect of the national situation, in which we may rejoice and give thanks, indeed, yet failing not to mingle humble prayer with our swelling praises. Was there every another people in this world that could appropriate the words upon so many grounds of right and fitness? Surely Emerson never spoke more significantly than when he said, 'America stands for opportunity,' for is not that the very synonym of our name?

"Whether you think of our territorial magnitude, already so vast, and of late years so strangely enlarged in some directions, for better or for worse, of the infinite variety and abundance of our natural resources; or of that all but miraculous instrument, the Constitution of our country which, to quote the words of one of our distinguished citizens, 'for more than a hundred years, by its wonderful blending of strength and elasticity has stood the strain of conflict and met the demands of unprecedented progress without the necessity of change in a single essential feature.—

"Let me dwell a moment on only one or two of these enumerable particulars in which the greatness of our opportunity appears. It is true that extent of territory does not of itself make a nation great, but it will hardly be questioned that the wonderful power of our national life is tremendously reinforced by the extent and character of the domain which we possess. The Great American Desert—the very region whose incalculable value to the nation is at this moment being celebrated by the most splendid and stupendous exhibition ever presented to the world. And but little more than fifty years ago so able and amply furnished a statesman as Senator Benton declared his belief that there was not the remotest probability of our national boundary going beyond the Rocky Mountains.

"Thus Providence has prepared this country to maintain countless millions. It has been predicted that before the clock of the centuries strikes 2,000 there will be 200 millions of inhabitants in this land, and even then every man may be given more than double the space which Europe affords him today.

"Excepting the Philippines, already advancing toward capacity for self-government, and just as surely, we believe, towards independence with the glad consent of Presidents Roosevelt and this whole country, irrespective of party, with this exception, our present island acquisitions, and any others that may follow in the course of events, bringing under our flag other tongues and other civilizations, will not disturb the national solidarity. They will soon be flooded with the outpouring of our distinctive life, every mark of essential difference will be swept away and before the century has run half its course they will be as thoroughly American as New Jersey or Virginia.

"We did not seek, we did not want these lands and the Philippines least of all. So far as any wish or purpose of ours was concerned, they were placed in our arms like poor little foundlings on the door-step of a hospital. But more pitiable still, they were not foundlings. They were *claimed by a mother—*God save the mark!—and they were committed to us as wretched children rescued by the law of humanity from the torturing grasp of that brutal mother. What then? We could not cast them out, to be picked up by any greedy power that might first lay hands upon them. We could not surrender, and at first could say nothing less, 'they are mine —mine to carry, mine to nurture, mine, to protect, mine to lift up and bless.' Yet who of us doubts, whatever faults may be found, that under the vast and utterly strange responsibilities imposed, the heart of the Administration has purposed nothing but the right and the best. This, then friends and fellow-citizens, is the "larger place" in which God has set our feet.

"This world is coming, surely coming to the feet of Jesus Christ, the Great Son of God. Let our be forevermost among the nations to bring it there, and that through the personal piety of its individual citizens. There is no other way."

After the discourse the congregation sang "My Country 'tis of Thee." "The General Thanksgiving," was led by Rev. Albert H. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, the congregation uniting. An offering was received for the Plainfield Relief Association. Following the offertory prayer by Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, the doxology was sung and the benediction was pronounced.

MISS EDITH HUFF NOW IS MRS. WILLIAM HENRY

WEDDING AT HOME OF OFFICIATING MINISTER, REV. DR. SCHENCK.

Miss Edith Huff, daughter of Mrs Helen Huff, of West End avenue, and William Henry, of West Fourth street, were married Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Sobenck, of West Front street. The couple was attended by the bride's mother and her sister, Mrs. Julius Williams, of North avenue.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held at Mrs. Huff's home. The groom is employed as a machinist at The Pond Machine Tool Works. Both are attendants at Trinity Reformed church. They will live at 942 West Fourth street.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Dec. 4: "Worshiping in Spirit and in Truth." Ps. v, 1-8; John iv, 19-24.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES.

There can be no inside without an outside. Thought to be communicated must have outward form and expression. Reverence is an inner attitude of the soul. We seek to express it in visible signs. We clothe it in symbols and rites of worship.

At the first the form springs almost as necessity from the circumstances and seems inspired. We feel the spirit of soul and a new song bursts from the lips in strains before unknown. The emotion sought expression thus. The emotion was so satisfying that we seek to reproduce it. We forget that we have passed the former point of time and occasion and are in other surroundings. We repeat the words, we sing the tune, we strive to bring back the soul attitude we had before. To some extent we succeed, but no repetition can equal the original act in worth or satisfaction.

What, then, shall we do?

First.—We need to guard ever against mere repetition of the form as if that in itself had merit. Garments have value as garments only as they clothe a human form. Personality must be in them and robe itself with them or they are but so much stuff. So our forms of worship must have the spirit in them and be the natural expression of that spirit in its existing conditions or they are but empty forms or may be worse—straitjackets in which are confined those who have lost their freedom. Forms are good if there is a life within and shaping them. Formality is ever bad and only bad. It is a tomb and not a home.

Second.—We should in every and all conditions and circumstances be absolutely open with our God and seek His *truth and guidance. This must be sin*cerely and earnestly the intention of the soul without disguise or reservation and regardless of emotion, pleasurable or painful. In seeking to know God and His will. It is not to feel well or happy. It is to be right and do right, which will eventually yield highest pleasure, but may lead through tribulation and distress first.

Third.—To reach the best attainment we need at times to carefully examine ourselves and seek to know the motives that we are following and compare them with the model given in the New Testament, but shall at times be surprised to find how lacking our worship is in spirit and truth. Then we should seek the Lord and His ways and not make the mistake of seeking by forms to revive our flagging zeal.

How to Laugh.

The secret of happiness is not the size of one's purse, or the style of one's house, or the number of one's butterfly friends, but rather in the person joy is in the heart. If you would only throw open your heart's windows to the sunshine of Christ's love it would soon scatter the chilling mists and even turn tears into rainbows. Some professed Christians pinch and starve themselves into walking skeletons and then try to excuse themselves on the plea of ill health or "constitutional" ailments. The medicines they need are from Christ's pharmacy. A large draft of Bible truth every morning, a throwing open of the heart's windows to the promises of the Master, a few words of honest prayer, a deed or two of kindness to the next person whom you meet, will do more to brighten your countenance and help your digestion than all the drugs of the doctors. If you want to get your aches and trials out of sight, hide them under your mercies.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

Either Will Do.

"Either lighten my burden or strengthen my back;" cried out an old divine in prayer to God under the pressure of trials. The Lord can help us in either one of these ways. In the one case we shall have less burden and less strength. In the other case we shall have more burden and more strength. The grace is proportioned to the need of grace, the added blessing to the added burden. When Paul asked for the lighter burden God gave him the stronger back, and Paul learned to say, "I rather glory in my weakness that the strength of Christ may rest upon me."—Sunday School Times.

Faith.

Faith is the essence of all religion. Unless it is present no amount of preaching will avail. How, then, can it be created and stimulated? By the example of pious lives, as that example appears in the history of the past and as it is shown by those who are living present follow the divine commands.

Nuggets.

[From the writings of the Rev. John Mason, a celebrated English divine, who died in 1694.]

There is grace in the desire of grace, as there is sin in the desire of sin.

Temptations are instructions.

The world promises comforts and pays sorrows.

Be not proud of riches, but afraid of them; lest they be as silver bars to cross the way to heaven.

We put a price upon riches, but riches cannot put a price upon us.

We must answer for our riches, but our riches cannot answer for us.

Riches are indifferent things, good or bad as they are used. Be, then, as indifferent to them as they are to you.

'Tis a sad thing when a man can have no comfort but in diversions, no joy but in forgetting himself.

To have a portion in the world is a mercy; to have the world for a portion is a misery.

God will either keep His saints from temptations by His preventing mercy or in temptations by His supporting mercy or find a way for their escape by His delivering mercy.

CONQUEST OF LHASA.

BRITISH HAVE NO REASON TO BE PROUD OF IT.

Picturesqueness of Invasion of the Sacred Capital of Thibet by English Troops Does Not Conceal Brutality of the Act.

New York Special.

In spite of the cold brutality of the British expedition into Thibet, the imagination is arrested by the thought of the opening of the gates of Lhasa to the outside world. No one spot on the surface of the globe, not even the north pole, has possessed for travelers and adventurers the charm of the Thibetan capital and the holy city of Lamaism. Many of the most daring explorers the world has known have been baffled by the hardships of the journey over the high and snow-swept plateaus, or by the ceaseless vigilance and relentless opposition of the natives. Nature and man have combined to guard the sacred Thibetan city, and only one or two choice spirits have been able to force their way into its forbidden precincts.

Among the most notable failures is the recent attempt of the greatest of modern explorers. Sven Hedin, who would have reached Lhasa had he not been turned back by the Thibetans, as he had already conquered the indescribable hardships that had turned back or destroyed so many previous explorers. The failure of Miss Taylor and that of Prince Henri of Orleans are also fresh in memory. The attempt by Mr. Landor, and his ignominious failure, is probably too mythical to be seriously accepted as part of the history of Thibetan explorations.

Yet Lhasa had been reached and pretty thoroughly explored before the English army from India invaded it. Father Huc lived there for months and left a fairly accurate account of the city and its inhabitants. Chandra Das also succeeded in reaching the sacred city, but his account is not very satisfactory. The most successful of all explorations was, as might have been expected, by a Japanese, Kawaguchi, who not only reached Lhasa and lived there for months, but thoroughly informed himself about the language, customs and life of the people. The account of this recent traveler had already opened the gates of Lhasa to thousands of readers throughout the world.

COL. YOUNGHUSBAND.
(Leader of the British Expedition for the Conquest of Thibet.)

It was not astonishing, therefore, that when Col. Younghusband entered Lhasa with his expedition he found the city familiar. It had been charted and described in more accurate detail than had been supposed. Indeed, it was no longer a mysterious city. But despite the fact that the bloom of discovery had been taken from the adventure, the entrance of the British expedition into Lhasa will probably take its place among the most picturesque and interesting events in history, alongside of the entrance of Cortes into Mexico, and Pizarro into the city of the Incas, and Marco Polo into the capital of Kublai Khan.

This picturesqueness, however, does not conceal the hideous brutality of the British expedition. There has not been in history a more unprovoked invasion of a peaceful country. There is absolutely nothing behind this murderous incursion into Thibet except the sordid wish of the Indian government to sell tea and opium to the Thibetans. The world should never forget, whenever it thinks of the degradation of the Chinese opium smoker, that opium was forced upon the Chinese by England merely to increase the Indian trade. England now repeats her ignoble record by forcing opium upon Thibet. Every Thibetan killed in his mountains was practically murdered. It is greatly to be deplored, truthfully observes a writer in Gunton's Magazine, a New York publication of the highest standing, that the British expedition could not have been checked, even if it had been necessary to destroy the entire force. It will help, together with the seizure of Kimberley, the extinction of the Boer republics, the murder of Hindus at the mouth of cannon, to make the unanimous record of crime and shame that constitutes a part of the history of British "imperialism."

Wolves Attack a Horse.

Joseph Wenzel and wife, who live near Neals, three miles from Ashland, Wis., had a hair-raising experience with wolves while they were returning from berry picking. They were several miles in the woods, and had their horse, harnessed to a buggy, hitched to a tree. Hearing several howls, they ran to where it was tied and found it surrounded by a pack of five wolves. The horse broke the hitching strap and started through the woods, the wolves after it. The buggy was caught in between two trees before going far, and the wolves were right upon it, when Mr. Wenzel appeared upon the scene with his rifle and put the brutes to flight.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 4.

Topic.—How to worship in spirit and in truth.—Ps. v, 1-8; John iv, 19-24.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Worship may be popularly defined as the homage which we render unto God through the medium of praise, prayer, reading the Scriptures, including the interpretation of the Scripture and its application in the sermon, and the giving of gifts unto God when the worship is public.

Since worship is so great and important a part of our lives it is very necessary that we should understand its character. Two of the most vital characteristics of true worship are suggested for our consideration in the topic—namely, the spirituality and truth. The true worship of God must be both spiritual and sincere.

These characteristics of worship were emphasized by Christ Himself. The occasion was His conversation with the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well. Her idea was that the place determined the value of the worship. "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain (Gerizim), and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." She looked upon Christ simply as a Jew and assumed that He believed, as the Jews, that Jerusalem was the place to worship. But Christ pointed out the error of her belief concerning worship and declared that the true worshipers would not magnify place but would worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." No other worship than that which is "in spirit and in truth" is actual worship.

We worship God only when our spirits come into touch and fellowship with His. Time, place and methods of worship avail nothing, only so far as they help us to realize such fellowship. It comes into fellowship with the Divine Spirit. The need of sincerity is very evident. A formal worshiper could have no fellowship with God. Sincerity is an absolute necessity to spiritual worship, and there is no true worship that is not spiritual; hence the absolute need of spirituality and sincerity in worship. Let us remember these facts and both in private and public devotions worship God "in spirit and in truth."

Ohio's Field Secretary.

In politics they say "As goes Maine goes the Union." In Christian Endeavor it is getting to be "As goes Ohio so ought the rest of us." The indefatigable work of Rev. C. C. Hubbell, whose home is in Columbus, is accountable for the putting of Ohio to the forefront as to Christian Endeavor. Mr. Hubbell, in his position as Field Secretary, has literally "lived in his satchel" the past two years, and the results of his phenomenal gain in societies and a corresponding increase in the general effectiveness of all the work. In addition to his duties as field secretary, which makes for him an average of one or two addresses every day, Mr. Hubbell is editor of the Ohio Endeavorer.

REV. C. H. HUBBELL.

Two Greetings.

The New York state Endeavor convention was unique in its greetings. One of them came from President Roosevelt, the other from Dr. Clark, the founder of the movement. Their greetings, which were received by the 6,000 people in the convention hall with unusual enthusiasm, were as follows:

My Dear Mr. Clements—I believe in the work of the Christian Endeavor unions and always regret to be unable to attend their conventions, but it is an especial pleasure to send, through you, to the Endeavorers of my own state hearty good wishes. Sincerely yours,

Theodore Roosevelt

I wish I could be with you in Buffalo. Please give my affectionate good wishes to all the Endeavorers assembled there and tell them "God is good and doeth good continually."—Christian Endeavor.

Tell them that the "increase campaign" has been taken up with vigor all over Great Britain, Australia and South Africa as well as in the United States.—Mizpah.

May God bless it more and more in the Empire State.

Francis E. Clark

"In Other Tongues Than Ours."

The little verse which appeared in this column some weeks ago from the pen of John R. Clements entitled "Christian Endeavor" and which ran thus,

I promise that, as best I may,
I'll do my little task each day
And strive to shine
I'll let Christ have his way in me;
I'll show my every loyalty
In all my work.

comes back to us in a recent issue of L'Activite Chretienne, the Endeavor organ of Switzerland. The literal translation as it there appears is as follows:

Je promets de faire chaque jour ma petite tache
Et de ne rien negliger.
Je laisserai Christ accomplir toute sa volonte a mon egard.
Je montrerai dans tout mon travail une loyaute qui ne se dementira jamais.

HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL WILL OPEN NURSES' HOME

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY DECIDES TO HOLD THE AFFAIR ON DECEMBER 7.

The annual harvest home for Muhlenberg Hospital will be held at the new Nurses' Home, now in course of construction, Wednesday afternoon, December 7, and the affair will mark the opening of the new Home. Announcement of this fact was made at the regular meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors of the Hospital, held yesterday in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The chairmen of the various committees have been appointed as follows: Decorations, Mrs. Benjamin B. Drake; refreshments, Mrs. John B. Dumont; printing, Mrs. L. C. Gleason; section, Mrs. George A. Chapman and Mrs. Walter Gaston; receiving goods, Mrs. A. E. Barclay; contributions from Needlework Guild, Mrs. Edgar S. Hyatt.

There have been a number of contributions to the work of the auxiliary since the last meeting, including $37.- 55 from employes of the Manganese Steel Safe Works. At the meeting yesterday Mrs. Frederick H. Andrews was appointed purchaser for the coming month.

RULES PREVENT WINNER FROM TAKING BOTH CUPS

E. I. SERRELL CAPTURES TWO TROPHIES AT HILLSIDE CLUB.

In the special competition at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Thursday for cups for the best gross score and best net score, Edgar I. Serrell was the winner of both, but according to the rules governing the play, he was allowed but one cup, the Halliday, while T. W. T. Maxwell having the second best net score, received the cup in that competition. These scores were returned in the play:

Edgar I. Serrell, 83, 11—71; W. L. Glenney, 83, plus 2—84; T. W. T. Maxwell, 97, 20—77; S. D. Lounsbery, 87, 87—9; D. H. Rowland, 94, 13—82; Arthur Murphy, '96, 8—87; Morris J. Dumont, 94, 6—88; H. D. Hibbard, 94, 6—88; J. Lane, 106, 18—88; A. R. Fisk, 93, 6—90; W. L. C. Glenney, 111, 20—91; A. E. Barclay, 109, 17—92.

INSURANCE SETTLED.

J. F. MacDonald Plans to Repair and Enlarge Building Damaged By Fire Recently.

J. F. MacDonald, whose building at Front street and Watchung avenue was recently badly damaged by fire, has effected a settlement with the insurance companies. The amount of payment for his loss was fixed by a commission of three, of which the company selected one, Mr. MacDonald one and these two the third.

In repairing the building, Mr. MacDonald has planned to have it made one story higher and beautify it architecturally. Instead of a peaked roof as before it will be made flat, thus giving more room. Three windows will grace the front instead of one as before and other embellishments will be added to alter its appearance.

Royal Arcanum Affairs.

One candidate was initiated at the meeting of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, Thursday night. The members took up the question of forming a club for social purposes, also the matter of starting a whist tournament among members of the council only. The matter will come before the Council Thursday night, December 8, for open discussion. Regent Clarence A. Goss gave notice of the annual visitation of the Grand Lodge officers on Thursday night, December 22. The annual election of officers will be held Thursday, December 8.

—Joseph Green has purchased the blacksmith business of Samuel Tayner, corner of West Front street and Grant avenue, and is now in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Garret J. Fowers and son, Alfred, and John F. Fowers, of Jackson avenue, spent Thanksgiving Day in Newark with Mrs. C. A. Martin.

EGYPT AND HER PEOPLE

Charles W. McCutchen Lectures in Warren Chapel.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

The River Nile, Cairo and Interesting Scenes Aptly Described In Detail.

Only recently returned from an eight months' trip abroad, the greater part of which was spent in the vast territory adjacent to the upper part of River Nile, Charles W. McCutchen, of the borough, addressed a large audience in Warren chapel, Friday night, under the subject of "Egypt;" its land, people and religions." Experienced in traveling, Mr. McCutchen has the faculty of seeing the most interesting persons and objects in foreign lands and his hearers derive the benefit.

According to his introductory remarks, the valley of the great river is 400,000 miles in area and is in reality a vast desert which is made fertile by the overflowing of the stream. Without it the great productions of wheat, corn and sugar cane, superior in many *respects to those raised in this coun*try, would be impossible. In addition its 1,500 miles of length is the great highway of travel, its bosom being dotted with thousands of picturesque boats of the type used before the birth of Christ. Since Egypt came under the control of the English, many modern methods in agriculture and *commerce have been used but the peo*ple like to adhere to old customs and this is one of them.

Mr. McCutchen spoke highly of the work being accomplished by the American missionary societies in the Orient. From 13,000 to 14,000 pupils are receiving instruction in the schools at Cairo established by them and the native are learning the value of an education. England has put an end to the tyranny practiced by the former powerful Khadi's and by lightening the tax burdens of the working people, has also done a great deal toward uplifting them.

Dwelling particularly upon the city of Cairo, Mr. McCutchen declared it to be one of the most cosmopolitan in the world. It is possible to stand at a certain point and note in the ever passing crowds on the street, the costumes of nearly every nation on the globe. The Cairo citizen still clings to the loose flowing robes the same in every respect as those worn by Joseph when he made his journey to Egypt. The women have very little freedom and the speaker contrasted their narrowed confines with the many privileges enjoyed by their American sisters.

The speaker told in detail of the Mohammedan religion, which prevails in Egypt, and he declared the fidelity of its followers exceeds that of those in other countries. Although there is nothing tangible in their beliefs, it is a common sight to see merchant in the little street bazaars become oblivious to their surroundings and pay homage to their gods. They will observe their beliefs several times a day whether Europeans are watching them or not.

*In conclusion Mr. McCutchen re*ferred to the almost total absence of the liquor drinking habit in the country as declared that if America were as free from the curse it would be a happy state of affairs. The lecture was of absorbing interest throughout and was one of the most complete in wealth of detail that has yet been given in the city.

APPOINTED TRUSTEE.

Lewis Squires Will Wind Up Affairs of Big New England Concern.

Lewis Squires, of Watchung avenue, son of Henry C. Squires, was appointed as trustee by Referee Lewis, of Hoboken, on Thursday, to administer the estate and dispose of the assets of the Johnson Dunbar Mills Company, which went into bankruptcy last October. The concern operated large cotton mills at North Adams, Mass. The liabilities were $410,000 with assets of about $250,000.

Mr. Squires is a Plainfield High School boy and a graduate of Williams College. The position of trustee in this instance is an important one and the selection was made after careful consideration.

County Election Expenses.

The last election cost the taxpayers of Union county $15,000, an average of sixty cents for each vote cast. In Somerset county the expense was $5,-260. It is said that additional polling places proposed before the next election will increase this sum in that county.

Presented An Historical Paper.

Hugh Hastings, of this city, who is historian for the State of New York, read a paper before the Sons of the American Revolution at the regular meeting held in New York, Friday. The subject was a historical one.

NEW PHASE IN WILL CASE

Death of Recluse's Brother Complicates the Situation.

BATTLE FOR ESTATE

Counsel for Contesting Heir Asked That Questions in Lord Case be Decided by a Jury.

The death of D. Porter Lord, the half brother of Miss Aileine Lord, the eccentric recluse of Somerville, who died leaving an estate valued at about $60,000 to public and charitable institutions, which occurred at his home in Montclair, Saturday, has somewhat changed the aspect of the sensational will case in which he was trying to break his half sister's will on the ground of lack of testamentary capacity and undue influence.

Mr. Lord had been indisposed for some time and at his age of 80 years, his demise was not unexpected. Major Dungan, counsel for Mr. Lord, the executor, says, however, that the will still be contested on the same grounds by the executors of the estate of D. Porter Lord.

On Friday in the Orphans' Court at Somerville, the application of Mr. Lord, for the hearing of the questions involved in the caveat of the will of Aileine Lord to be held before a jury in the Circuit Court, was heard by Judge Schenck.

Dungan & Reger, in behalf of the caveator, argued as the questions involved were matters of fact they should be decided by a jury.

James L. Griggs, H. K. Gaston and Bayard Stockton, counsel for legatees under the will, contended that as this was an unusual proceeding strong reasons should be given for pursuing any other than the usual course in such cases before the Orphans' Court.

In reply Major Dungan said the powers and jurisdiction of the Orphans' Court were purely statutary and that the Legislature in 1874 had added a statutory provision to the Orphans' Court law pertaining to the certification of the questions of fact relating to the probate of wills to the Circuit Court. He said that since that time a number of cases had been so certified—some in cases involving only a single point.

The Lord will case is a most spectacular one and there are hosts of witnesses to be examined. This move to take it to the Circuit Court is considered by the legal talent as a master stroke made by Dungan & Reger.

Judge Schenck reserved his decision in the matter one week.

FIRST NUPTIAL EVENT IN LOCAL SYNAGOGUE

MISS MARY BRANT AND AARON LEVINE ARE MARRIED.

In the presence of 400 relatives and friends, Aaron Levine and Miss Mary Brandt, both of this city, were married in the Jewish Synagogue on New street, last Sunday. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Weitman, of New York, and was one of the most elaborate ceremonies that has taken place in the structure since its dedication.

Following the wedding adjournment was made to Company K armory on West Front street where a reception took place that lasted until nearly midnight. The groom is a conductor on the local trolley line and is widely known throughout the city. The guests in attendance were from this city, Newark, New York, Brooklyn and many other places.

Tolles Family Reunion.

Councilman and Mrs. R. I. Tolles, of Westervelt avenue, have been entertaining Mr Tolles' mother, Mrs. Maria W. Tolles, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Tolles, Miss Emma Tolles and Clarement Tolles, of Naugatuck, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Tolles, of Ansonia, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Ward, of Seymour, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Ira P. Bennett, Miss Marjorie Bennett and LeRoy Bennett, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Tolles and daughter, Miss Charlotte, of Ossining, N. Y. It has been the custom to hold an annual reunion of this family, the first gathering being as early as 1875. Since then the members have always met at least once a year.

Restored Lost Pocketbook.

While shopping on West Front street, Saturday, Mrs. Conrad Brose, of Vine street, lost her pocketbook containing $16. It was found in front of the postoffice by Letter Carrier Thomas Meaney and restored to her. The finder refused any reward for his action.

In Honor of Debutante.

Mrs. William T. Kaufman, of West Seventh street, will give a dinner on Saturday evening in honor of Miss Edith Fisk, daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk, who will make her debut as the Casino on Friday night, December 2.

NEW YORK, N. Y.

I. O. U. A. M. COUNCILS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

OLD GLORY COUNCIL, D. OF L., ALSO PRESENT.

According to their annual custom, members of the local Jr. O. U. A. M. Councils, Somerset, Franklin and Benevolent, attended divine service in the Park Avenue Baptist church, last Sunday. A large delegation from Old Glory Council, Daughters of Liberty, was also in attendance, which added to the regular congregation, filled every seat in the church. The pulpit was draped with the American flag and others were placed on each side.

In a preliminary address, Rev. A. E. Finn, the pastor, welcomed the Juniors and reviewed the cardinal principles of the order. They were in many respects the same as those of the church, he said, and they should be encouraged in upholding them, especially with respect to placing the Bible in schools and the right for man to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience. Afterward the clergyman gave the fourth of his series of sermons on the Prodigal Son, without making any especial comparison appropriate to the gathering.

INAUGURATION PLANS.

Governor - Elect Stokes, Unlike Murphy, Wants Simple Ceremony.

In some quarters there is much interest manifested in the plans for the inauguration of Governor-elect Stokes in January. It is well known that Governor Stokes is averse to display and it is therefore pretty certain that the gorgeous ceremonies which attended Governor Murphy's inauguration *will not be repeated when Gov*ernor Stokes becomes the chief executive of the State.

The proposition of an inaugural ball is opposed by practical politicians, because of the ill feeling such an event usually engenders among those who are overlooked, or who believe they should be invited, and because also of the dissatisfaction that ensues because some get invitations who have no right to be there.

The inaugural ceremonies, no doubt, will be very simple and will probably consist of the usual programme in the Opera House at Trenton, the swearing in of the Governor and the reception in the afternoon and evening at the State House.

WEDDING RECEPTION.

Seventy-Five Friends Honor Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haan Recently Married.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haan, of the borough, who were recently married, were tendered a reception at the home of the former's mother on Somerset place, Thursday evening. During the evening piano solos were given by Miss Mabel Kiernan and phonograph selections by John Shroop.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Haan were the recipients of numerous presents, among them being a piano from the bride's mother. There was also a profusion of silverware, bric-a-brac and cut glass.

Deaman Out of the Game.

Charles H. Deaman, formerly manager of the Westfield Baseball Association team visited Saturday with us. Under no consideration will he manage a ball team next season, adding that he is through with the management of a team. He also said that there is not enough money in Plainfield to induce him to assume the management of a team here. The foxy baseball manager seemed to feel that a great load was taken off his shoulders with the termination of the past season, for he then practically decided not to continue in that capacity another year.

—John Steiner and William Barlow, of the borough, recently joined the choir of the First Baptist church.

HIGH SCHOOL MUSICIANS GIVE AN ENTERTAINMENT

BANJO AND MANDOLIN CLUBS PLAY TO LARGE AUDIENCE.

Successful both from a musical and from a social standpoint, the first entertainment of the season under the auspices of the Plainfield High School Banjo and Mandolin Clubs went off without a hitch Saturday evening.

The assembly hall of the Franklin School was well filled when the first number was rendered by the mandolin club. The selection was the "Assembly March," and was well played. The club has been trained by Samuel B. Howe, Jr., of the faculty, and Saturday evening showed the value of his instruction.

A recitation, "Seeing Things at Night," was the next number on the programme, and was spoken in a pleasing manner by Miss Helen Whitney. A chorus by the glee club was followed by a selection, "Crescent Queen," by the mandolin and banjo players. Both these numbers were much applauded, and deserving of their reception.

A feature of the entertainment was a recitation entitled "The Rivals," by Miss Edith Hanford. Chester H. Briggs' mandolin solo, "The March of the Third," was also a favorite, and Mr. Briggs was obliged to play an encore. Following the reappearance of the mandolin club, when it played the "Venetian Beauty," E. A. Howe and Chester Briggs played a delightful mandolin duet, "The Director's March." This was longly applauded, as was also a banjo duet by William Briggs and Gerth Williams. The latter played the "Berkeley March" in a spirited manner.

*The concluding number on the pro*gramme was a chorus by the glee club, "The Fisher Crew's Return." At the end of the entertainment a short informal dance took place and was enjoyed by a large number. The proceeds will be devoted to defray the expenses of the Boys' and Girls' Athletic Associations. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Chester Briggs, chairman; Charles Titsworth and George Bentley.

D. of A. Entertainment.

Martha Washington Council, No. 26, D. of A., conducted an entertainment in its rooms Saturday evening. The programme consisted of vocal and instrumental selections, recitations and readings. The committee which had charge consisted of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Allen, Mrs. Lant, Mrs. Anglemon, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Archie Niles and Mrs. Fritts.

Fire Loss Adjusted.

Edwin Maynard, whose apartments in the Woolston & Buckie building were recently damaged by fire, settled with the insurance company Saturday, for the loss on furniture, through Elston M. French. The amount paid was $365. The owners of the building settled their loss for $300.

Contract Case Easily Settled.

The contract case of Harry Swarts against Jacob Fass, of the Paris Cloak and Fur Company, has been settled by the payment of five dollars. The plaintiff has returned to work on a salary of three dollars a week less, though he originally sued for $102.90.

What Was It All About?

Republican County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean and James E. Martine, the defeated Democratic candidate for Congress, had a heart to heart talk on Broad street, Elizabeth, on Saturday afternoon.

Company K Dance.

Company K has set December 14 as the date for the first of its series of winter dances. The committee entrusted with the plans consists of Corporal George L. Apgar, Alfred Trichard, C. H. Bilyeu and Privates W. H. Bond and T. A. Weaver.

WITHOUT A WARNING

MAN STRICKEN TOTALLY BLIND AT WORK BENCH.

In the Twinkling of an Eye Power of Vision Leaves a New York Cigarmaker—Case Considered a Very Rare One.

While rolling cigars at his bench, Morris Brown, of New York, a powerfully built man, who had scarcely known a day's sickness, was stricken blind the other afternoon. The lower of vision went out of his eyes like an electric flash. There was no warning. His eyes had never troubled him. He was 48 years old and never wore glasses. One instant his sight was perfect, the next it was gone. An agonizing shooting pain that lasted only the fraction of a second was the only thing, except the terrifying blackness that told the man of his misfortune.

Brown has been a cigarmaker nearly 30 years. The physicians at Bellevue think his blindness is due to nicotine poisoning. It is their belief that the constant inhalation through the nostrils of tiny particles of tobacco had paralyzed the optic nerve.

An eye specialist will be summoned to the hospital to diagnose the case and direct the treatment.

It was Brown's birthday. Before he left his home, 1386 Second avenue, for work, he planned to get off early in the afternoon and go with his wife and two children on an outing.

Brown had worked for years in the cigar factory at 353 Bowery. He was one of the most skilled men in the place and was liked by his many associates in the factory.

A few minutes after one p. m., when the crowd of workers returned to their benches and all were busily engaged, Brown suddenly gave a shriek, crying out:

"I cannot see. Everything is black. I cannot see my hand."

The other workers ran to his bench. His eyes were open, and except for a twitching of the lids seemed normal. Brown would rub his eyes and hold his hand up close to his face and say:

"I CAN'T SEE MY HAND."

"I can't see it. Everything is dark."

Max Bittner, the foreman, thinking the man had suddenly gone mad, said:

"Look at me, Brown. You can see me. I'm right in front of you."

"I can't see you, Max," Brown moaned. "I can't see anything."

Some of the women in the place began to get hysterical. Mr. Jacoby, thinking the cigarmaker was merely ill, sent out one of his clerks for a physician. When the doctor arrived and looked over Brown he advised that the cigarmaker be sent at once to a hospital.

When Brown reached Bellevue he was almost dazed by this calamity. It was some time before he could talk to the physicians connectedly. His wife was sent for and after she had talked with him for awhile he became calmer. On the records of the hospital his malady was entered as amaurosis, which simply means total or partial loss of vision.

No directly similar case could be recalled by any of the physicians at Bellevue. About nine years ago the hospital had a case of toxic amaurosis, but the poison came from other causes than tobacco.

Mr. Jacoby, the employer of Brown, said that he never before heard of a cigarmaker losing his sight by nicotine poisoning. He said that cigar rollers have developed lung diseases and pulmonary troubles by constantly breathing in particles of tobacco.

The Bellevue physicians said they were not prepared to prophesy about the chances of Brown recovering his sight. These are cases on record where the sight had been restored after the nicotine poison had been eliminated from the system.

Woodpecker's Savings Bank.

Among the woodpeckers of California there is one kind, popularly called the carpenter, which is of such careful habits that many a friendly society might take a lesson from it. Although the winter is not very severe, the bird well knows how hard it will then be to obtain food. So it begins early to lay by for the frosty day. It stuffs the holes of trees with acorns, and it is artful enough to choose those that contain the larvae of insects. The larvae thrives on the fruit, and in the course of time becomes a fattened tit-bit for the bird. Pine trees, on which acorns do not grow, have often been seen dotted or plugged all over with them.

ONE-DAY COURTSHIPS

A PECULIAR PHASE OF LIFE IN CITY OF LONDON.

Some Girls Have Lovers for Every Day in the Week — Used by Rogues to Obtain Valuable Information.

A London publication, Smith's Weekly, gives a graphic account of a peculiar phase of English life. It says that in some of the large drapery establishments there are young fellows and girls who make it a rule to have a fresh sweetheart every week. An regularity as the early closing day, which is now such a deeply-rooted institution, comes round a new partner who takes the place of the one who did duty the previous week.

A smart young counter-jumper was heard to boast recently that during the 18 months spent in his present situation he had "taken out" over a hundred different girls. Not content with a fresh companion for each weekly half-holiday, he had also often contrived to provide himself with yet another on Sundays as well.

Extreme cases like this are rare, but it is quite common in some business houses where both sexes are employed, for young couples who are comparative strangers to pair off together for a holiday.

In many such establishments there are plenty of young people, whose homes are too distant to visit for one day, who are glad to accommodate and to be accommodated in the manner indicated.

A day's courtship is sometimes merely an ingenious ruse for the purpose of obtaining valuable information.

Not long ago a skilful burglar, who confines himself to what he calls high-class work, confessed that one of his accomplices had successfully ruled in love with one of the servants of the house which he had planned to plunder, and at the first opportunity to take the girl for a day's outing. The one excursion was generally sufficient to allow him to artfully extract the necessary information which enabled him to afterwards perform his nefarious work with comparative ease.

BORROWS ALL HER READY CASH.

Equally mean and criminal is the somewhat similar trick which is sometimes played on simple women. The dodge consists in accosting likely-looking girls in the street and carrying them off to lunch.

The trickster in most cases passes himself off as a lord or a duke, says he has been greatly smitten by the appearance of his dupe, gives her worthless checks or Bank of Engraving notes to buy dresses and jewelry, offers her a magnificent situation or promises marriage, and, on the strength of all this, borrows all the ready cash which his victim happens to have.

The deceived one, of course, sees no more of the impostor, unless he leaves her under the impression that he can swindle still more cash out of her, in which case a further appointment is made.

A day trip with an old sweetheart was the plan by which a Homerton man recovered the ring which he had previously given her, and which she had refused to return.

The engagement had been broken off and an estrangement had existed between the couple for several months. The not very generous swain had made several attempts to get back his rings, as he called them, but without success.

At last he hit upon an idea more ingenious than honorable. He made false professions of a desire to renew the *engagement, and wrote asking his ex*sweetheart to accompany him on a day's excursion to Margate as an act of reconciliation.

Unsuspectingly the maiden complied. But her subsequent anger and mortification were very bitter, for, during the day, the faithless attendant, on some pretext, managed to slip the rings which she was still wearing from her finger. She treated the matter as a joke, and he kept up the delusion for the remainder of the day.

When they parted at her door in the evening, however, he retained possession of the rings and left her very abruptly, after having recovered also his property, there was no need for him to make any further appointments.

Salvation Army Uniforms.

Salvation Army uniforms for women, including the bonnet, cost about nine dollars. Nearly all of them are made in Luton, England. The fashion never changes, and the girls do not worry about the way the bonnets ought to be trimmed.

Sand as Bedding for Cows.

Sand is plentiful and inexpensive in Holland, and is used instead of hay and straw as bedding for cows. It keeps the animals perfectly clean, requiring only a slight raking in the morning to soft- and freshen it.

C. C. RANDOLPH ELECTED

Selected to Fill Vacant Seat in Common Council.

HIGHAM NAMED HIM

No Other Candidate Mentioned—Fourth Ward Voted Nay.

To the surprise of those present in the lobby, as well as several members of the Common Council, Charles C. Randolph, of Dunellen avenue, son of Former Councilman Isaac Randolph, of West Front street, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Robert L. Lee at the adjourned meeting held Monday. Councilmen Garrigues, Higham, Daniel, Bullock, Murphy, Wilson and Tyler voted for Mr. Randolph while Councilmen Glenk, Frank DeW. Randolph and President Tolles voted against him the last on the ground that he did not know the candidate.

The Fourth Ward members not wishing to assume the responsibility of naming a successor from their ward to succeed Mr. Lee, Mr. Higham undertook the task. He moved that the Common Council proceed to fill the vacancy. This motion adopted he then nominated Charles C. Randolph whose name had hitherto not been mentioned publicly. Mr. Wilson seconded the nomination and the vote was seven to three in favor of Mr. Randolph.

It was expected that other nominations would be made but when the members from the Fourth ward waived their right to the member at large from the Third ward it was practically a certainty that there would by but one nominee. Both during the election and after the meeting many inquiries were made as to who Mr. Randolph was. It was plainly evident that he was not generally known among the members.

Mr. Randolph has been a resident of Plainfield all his life and at present he resides at 1135 Dunellen avenue. He is manager for a Newark concern engaged in the manufacture of tar roofing for buildings. He is identified with the Monroe Avenue church and is a member of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M. His friends predict that he will be a good representative in the Common Council. He is elected to fill the vacancy in the Common Council until the next annual election.

THANKSGIVING MUSIC AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

SPECIAL SERVICE UNDER DIRECTION OF HOWARD CASE.

Appropriate to the harvest and Thanksgiving season, the chorus choir of the First Baptist church gave a special musical service, Sunday p. m., under the direction of Howard Case, organist. The programme was opened with a prelude on the violin by Miss Florence O. Wohlfert, accompanied on the organ by Howard Case.

Then followed the rendition of several anthems, including "Sing to the Lord of Harvest," Barnby; "Lovely Appear," Gonned; "Praise to the Great Creator," Shackley; "Just as I Am," Neidlinger, and an offertory duet, "O Lord, the Light of Heaven," by Miss Harris and Mrs. Ward.

During the service, the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, gave an appropriate discourse.

The choir was augumented by Mrs. Clayton M. Nagle, John Steiner and William Barlow, Jr. The solo parts were taken by Miss Lucelia C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor.

Keep Crowd Back at Fires.

It has been suggested that inasmuch as the fire truck carries a rope which is supposed to be used at fires to keep the usual crowd back of the danger point, that it would be well to use it. An illustration of the necessity of this was shown last week at the fire in the wall paper store on North avenue. It was with difficulty that the crowd was kept back and when Chief Doane arrived he had trouble in getting through the mass of people that had congregated there.

Brick Paving Completed.

The work of laying vitrified brick in Watchung avenue, between North avenue and East Second street, was completed on Saturday and within a few days the southside of the street will be opened to traffic, the cement taking a little time to set. The job has been pronounced equal to the best in the State and it is predicted that the brick will wear at least ten years before any further attention is needed.

Cadets Use Battalion Movements.

The regular weekly drill of the Plainfield High School battalion was held yesterday afternoon, and for the first time this season the battalion movements were taken up. Commandant McNab was in command and the cadets did the new work well.

NO CORONER'S INQUEST

Lewis Drake, the Motorman, Held For Manslaughter.

IN TROLLEY WRECK

County Prosecutor to Lay Facts Before the Grand Jury—P. S. C. Officials Active.

Although Motorman Lewis Drake, of this city, is still held in the county jail at Elizabeth, on a technical charge of manslaughter, it was declared Monday that no coroner's inquest would be held over the body of Charles Tattam, of Jersey City, who met death in the fatal trolley wreck at Roselle Saturday night. It was also said that no action would be taken by the county prosecutor with the exception of calling the attention of the Grand Jury to the case, provided no criminal complaint was made by the relatives of Tattam.

County Physician Westcott said that in his judgment there had been no criminal negligence and that the loss of a man's life in the disaster was due to an accident. Prosecutor English telegraphed the family of the dead man that it would be necessary for them to make formal complaint if they wished an examination, but as yet they have not answered.

Officials of the Public Service Corporation have been conducting an investigation in their own behalf but they refuse to make known what discoveries were made. Drake's version of the accident, that his brakes failed to work, is generally accepted and there is no feeling against him. The wrecked car was examined but nothing could be discovered that would be of use in the event of a trial.

The condition of Mrs. Fannie Harris, of this city, who was seriously hurt in the accident, and who is in the Elizabeth General Hospital, is reported today as being much improved, and every hope is entertained of her ultimate recovery, unless some unlooked for complications arise. Harry Woodland, of the borough, is also doing nicely as are all the others who were more or less injured.

Frank Bergen, counsel for the Public Service Corporation; Uhandler Riker and Thomas N. McCarter, officials of the same company, were in Plainfield Monday on business pertaining to the wreck. They called on the Plainfielders injured and conferred with relatives about circumstances relating to it. It is also understood that they conferred with Conductor Harrall, of Church street, who was on the ill-fated car.

MISS MARY DUNNING ON MEXICAN MISSIONS

SPOKE TO CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH SUNDAY-SCHOOL PUPILS.

Appropriately combining a harvest and a mission service, the regular session of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church Sunday afternoon was a particularly interesting one. Both the junior and primary grades were united in the service, which was at once significant of Thanksgiving and of harvesting in the mission fields.

Miss Mary Dunning, who is a member of the Congregational church, and a worker in Mexico was the speaker, and she held in a delightfully interesting manner of the laborers who have devoted their time to missionary work in Mexico, and of the results of their efforts. She showed by her interesting stories of the life in Mexico, how much more the children of this country have cause to be thankful than those who dwell in Mexico. Miss Dunning also emphasized in a beautiful way appropriate to the subject of the afternoon, "the need of reapers in the foreign lands, and especially in Mexico."

In addition to Miss Dunning's remarks, there were several recitations by members of the junior department, and a group of nine girls gave a flag exercise, which concluded in a grand march. In this march all the countries where the Gospel is taught by missionaries were represented by their flags. The exercise was a pretty one, and was well done.

Miss Dunning has been associated with missionary work in Mexico for some time, having come to this city a short time ago from Somerville.

Martine's Generous Gift.

James M. Martine, of "Cedar Brook Farm," has generously offered the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital as many maple and elm trees as may be needed to properly shade and beautify the grounds about the hospital. The trees will be taken from Mr. Martine's nursery on the farm. The offer has been accepted and Mr. Martine has received the thanks of the Board.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, of Elizabeth, stayed over Sunday with James Bailey, of Jackson avenue.

CHILDREN THEIR SUBJECT

Plainfield Clinical Society Listens to Subject Discussed.

BACKWARD CHILDREN

Dr. Grossman, Dr. Maxson, John Leaf and Kenneth Robbie Speak at Society's Banquet.

Departing from its usual custom of holding its meeting for members only, the Plainfield Clinical Society entertained the Elizabeth Clinical Society, to the number of sixteen, together with several well-known educators, at its regular meeting held at the Casino, last night. The society also invited Dr. Maximillian P. E. Grossmann, of this city, asking him to present a paper on the subject of antipathetical or backward children and treatment for the same. Dr. Grossmann conducts a home on Johnston's Drive for the treatment of these kind of children and the local physicians having become interested in his work planned to have the doctor tell them something about it. The object of the meeting was thus explained by Dr. F. C. Ard, who had charge of the arrangements.

Dr. Grossmann in telling of the treatment of backward children, displayed a number of illustrations of writing by children in his home, showing the various methods employed by these children in expressing their ideas. A marked improvement was noted as the treatment was continued. As expressed by one of the speakers later in the evening, the subject is in its infancy in this country and one about which few persons know anything. This thought was also presented by the doctor. He explained the exercise of patience, the carefulness in noting the condition of the children and giving them treatment according to their special needs, and then described many of the peculiarities of children, some being capable of one thing and some another. He cited many interesting incidents and cases which had come under his observation where children had become strong and useful members of society through proper training and were able to compete with other children in studies and business.

Following Mr. Grossmann, Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield Public Schools, was asked by Dr. Ard to open the discussion. Dr. Maxson began by saying that his experience had not been with backward children and that the problem in the local schools had been to care for the normal children. He appreciated fully the work of which Dr. Grossmann spoke and realized that there is a field for it. He said that the per centage of backward children in the city schools was small.

John Leal, who conducts a school for boys here, was the next speaker. He said that the subject under discussion was one of which he knew but little, yet he denied that Dr. Grossmann has a corner on backward children. He mentioned several personal cases of very poor comprehension and bad spelling among boys who are normal. He, too, spoke highly of the work of training backward children according to their special needs, coinciding with the remarks that as he was not versed in the subject presented he preferred not to discuss Dr. Grossmann's paper.

One of the interesting addresses was given by Hugh F. Fox, president of the State Board of Children's Guardians. He spoke of the condition of the feeble-minded and backward children to be found in the State institutions, presenting many individual cases that were unique. He believed that any expenditure made to care for and treat the feeble-minded was a wise one.

Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was asked to tell briefly of his observations among the boys he is brought in contact with in his work, and he explained the objects of the association as being chiefly to throw the best influence about boys and help them to become useful men. He told of the contrary dispositions of boys and how difficult it is to hold their attention and train them. He mentioned instances of where some boys were very saint-like when surrounded with good influences only to be their reverse when brought in contact with evil influences. It is this condition that the association is trying to meet.

The last speaker of the evening was Dr. Wilson, of Elizabeth, who gave a few interesting facts to prove the value of the proper training of backward children. He said that in his profession there were many opportunities of correcting defects in children which helped to make them bright and intelligent.

This concluded the discussion of the evening and a social hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served.

Y. M. C. A. FAIR A SUCCESS

Great Crowd Attend the Opening of Women's Undertaking.

ELEVEN BOOTHS

Auxiliary's Bazaar to Close Tomorrow Night—Supper a Feature of Affair Tonight.

Pretty decorations, picturesque booths, and attractive saleswomen, combined in making the Y. M. C. A. fair which opened at the Babcock building yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary, one of the most elaborate and in every way successful events of the season. In the front window of the building, evergreen branches are strewn on the floor sprinkled with artificial snow flakes, while a large Christmas tree, tastefully decorated, occupies a recess in the window. Throughout the entire interior of the building the walls are attractively covered, and the booths present an appearance which does credit to those in charge.

Large crowds of interested spectators and buyers frequented the fair yesterday afternoon and especially last evening. A bountiful supper was served from 6 to 9 o'clock last night under the direction of the women of the Seventh-Day Baptist, Congregational and Methodist churches. The committee in charge last night were Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Mrs. George Rittenhouse and Mrs. Beekman. Throughout the evening, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra rendered an excellent musical programme.

Though all the booths were tastefully arranged, and prettily decorated, the most attractive was the Japanese booth, at which tea, and Japanese articles were for sale. This booth was presided over by Mrs. Roger Murray, who with her assistants, was appropriately costumed. There were eleven booths in all on the ground floor, which were arranged and presided over as follows: Japanese—Mrs. Roger Murray; aprons—Mrs. F. C. Harder; candy, Mrs. Walter Freeman; dolls—Mrs. Frank Hubbard; fancy work—Miss Lena Bass; brushes and brooms—Mrs. Stephen Cahoone; handkerchiefs—Mrs. A. G. Jenkins; paper booth—Mrs. Wheaton Lowry; country store—Mrs. S. M. French; lemonade—Miss Edith Cairns; children's table—Mrs. E. A. Edgar.

At these various booths many useful and ornamental articles were for sale; the variety of purchasable goods being extensive, and thorough. The fancy work and country store booths were in the greatest demand last night, and many of the articles were disposed of yesterday. Lemonade, ice cream and cake were continually on sale. The doll booth was another feature, adding to the general good appearance of the fair. The dolls were all daintily dressed, and arranged so as to be prominently noticable. One doll in particular which was perfectly dressed in every detail to represent a bride attracted a great deal of attention.

The fair will re-open this afternoon at 3 o'clock, remaining open till 10, and for the same time tomorrow. Tonight, the supper will be in charge of the women from the Crescent Avenue, Park Avenue, and Grace M. E. churches, the committee being composed of Mrs. Howard Runyon, Mrs. Most, and Mrs. D. M. Runyon. On Thursday evening, the First Presbyterian, Trinity, First Baptist and Episcopal churches will have charge. These women will be in charge of the affair tomorrow evening, Mrs. Howard Pope, Mrs. J. S. Probasco, Mrs. Scofield and Miss Helen Pfender.

ORGAN RECITAL.

New York Organist at Grace P. E. Church Wednesday Evening of Next Week.

An organ recital will be given at Grace church, East Seventh street, by William Neidlinger, on Wednesday evening, December 14, beginning at 8 o'clock. Neidlinger has been for some time in charge of the music at St. Michael's church, New York, and is also organist at Columbia College.

The rector of Grace church through former associations has been able to secure the services of Mr. Neidlinger and offers this musical privilege to the general public without any charge whatever. It is well known that the organ at Grace church is one of the best instruments of its kind in the country, and under expert handling may be heard to advantage.

Arthur Chamberlain, Will Tadlamy and Mrs. Theodore Martin will assist at the recital.

—St. Stephen's church fair will be at 613 Webster place on Saturday, December 10, from 2 to 10. Gypsy encampment a feature. 12 6 5

J. P. NORTHROP IS UPHELD

Court Holds That He is Not Liable for Payments.

OPINION REVERSED

Vice Chancellor Bergen Declares That Executors Acted Within Their Powers in Administering Estate.

Vice-Chancellor Bergen, acting as vice-ordinary of the Prerogative Court, has just decided the appeal taken by the executors of the Woolsey estate from the decree made by Judge Blair in the Hudson County Orphans' Court, holding them liable to the estate in the amount of $37,016 85. One of the executors is James P. Northrop, of this city.

There were other provisions in the will to the effect that the amounts to be paid to the legatees annually should be paid out of the income of the estate, other than that derived from the C. A. Woolsey Paint and Color Company, and only so much should be taken from the company as might be needed to make up any deficiency. The Woolsey Company was adjudged insolvent in January, 1903.

The estate came into court and Charles E. Hendrickson, Jr., was appointed Master. In his report last January Master Hendrickson charged that the terms of the will had been disregarded and that the money ordered to be invested had not been so applied, and that interest and annuities paid had come out of the corpus of the estate.

The Orphans' Court refused to allow the executors credit for the sums which they had paid to heirs and legatees for annuities and interest, although there was no question that the money had been paid. Judge Blair held that the executors were responsible in the sum of $37,016 85.

Vice Ordinary Bergen reverses the decree and thus comments upon this action:

"To say, as the Orphans' Court has said, that these accountants should be liable personally for that large sum paid to the persons entitled to it out of the fund provided by the testator for that purpose, is manifestly incorrect."

The Vice-Ordinary says further: "It should also be borne in mind that it is not alleged that these accountants have not charged themselves with all the money that came to their hands. Every dollar is accounted for, and the principal contest is over the question whether they had the right to pay annuities from the surplus fund. In my judgment, they had the right to use this surplus fund toward the payment of these annuities, at least as far as the payment of the legacies would permit.

"The account which by the decree of the Orphans' Court is approved is radically defective, and the decree should be reversed."

WHITTIER SCHOOL TO GIVE XMAS CANTATA

"THE KORONATION OF KING KRIS KRINGLE" TO BE PRODUCTED.

The pupils of the Whittier School are preparing for the rendition shortly before the holidays of an attractive Christmas cantata entitled "The Koronation of King Kris Kringle," being a sort of miniature opera. The characters which take part in the pretty little plot are about thirty in number, and will be represented by members of the school. In addition there will be a chorus of the entire school which will sing the musical numbers in the cantata, while the play will be acted by the members of the cast. Charles L. Lewis, musical instructor of the public schools, is training the pupils for the production, assisted by Miss Addie Parker Jackson.

The part of Kris Kringle, the same old traditional character, will be taken by Roy Woodhull, while the Fairy Queen will be Miss Mary Mann. The soloists are Leslie Westphal, Miss Bessie Alpaugh, Miss Agnes Dunham, and Miss Mary Mann. The date for the production, which will be given in the evening in Franklin Hall, has not yet been decided upon.

—A drawhead on a passenger coach attached to the 8:02 train to New York pulled out at the North Avenue Station, this morning, and after losing about twenty minutes trying to repair the damage, it was finally necessary to side-track the car, the passengers going to the other coaches.

COUNCILMAN MURPHY MAKES EXPLANATION

DEFENDS HIS FAILURE TO MAKE COMMITTEE REPORT.

Councilman Clarence L. Murphy, in speaking about the arc light petitioned for by residents in the vicinity of West Front street and Watchung avenue, states that he asked former Superintendent W. A. McClurg for a figure as to the cost of this light and that he never received a report. Mr. Murphy says that the arc light on Front street at the head of Park avenue costs the city $100 a year and he is not sure that another such light can be secured at Front street and Watchung avenue for the same price.

He also says that other electric wires at this corner may not permit the location of a light there. These and other things must be considered before any action is taken, he says. Besides he adds that there are members of the Common Council who do not favor the proposed arc light, knowing that it means that many incandescent lights will be cut out.

Another point against favorable action on the arc light Mr. Murphy says is that the light committee has reached the limit of its appropriation, and it would be unwise to recommend such an expenditure as this light would cost at this time of the year. Again, Mr. Murphy says that persons living near Watchung avenue and Front street are willing to lose some of the incandescent lights now there in case the other light is installed and he does not think that the city can afford to have both burning there when other parts of the city are asking for lights.

PLACES TO BE FILLED BY MAYOR-ELECT BUCKLE

TO SELECT THREE FOR HEALTH BOARD AND FOUR FOR BOARD OF ASSESSORS.

Among the appointments to be made by Mayor-elect James F. Buckle the first of January will be three members of the Board of Health to succeed Charles J. Fisk, president; Dr. B. vanD. Hedges and Charles H. Dunham, whose terms expire. All three will be re-appointed. There will also be the re-appointment of an overseer of the poor to succeed Alex Ayers and his retention in office seems to be assured.

Other appointments will be the entire Board of Assessors, one from each ward. It is believed that the members from the First, Second and Fourth wards will be re-appointed, but doubt is expressed as to whether Mr. Buckle will continue the present Third ward member. Among those mentioned for the office of tax collector to succeed F. H. Smith was Harry S. MacDonald, of the Third ward, but it is understood that he declined to be a candidate. This leads many to believe that he will again be a candidate for assessor from his ward and that he will succeed.

There will also be a number of minor appointments, as well as the selection of the various committees which Mr. Buckle will announce as the first meeting of the 1905 Common Council on Monday night, January 2, when that body will meet to organize for the coming year.

EAGLES ELECT.

Officers Who Will Conduct Business of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E.

At the regular meeting of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., held last evening, the following officers were elected to serve for one year: Worthy past president, Rudolph Kampf; worthy president, Daniel V. Force; worthy vice-president, Samuel O. Terry; worthy secretary, Horace G. Adams; worthy treasurer, Jacob Ellmm, Jr; worthy conductor, Frank McCabe; worthy inner guardian, Thomas Kane; worthy outer guardian, J. Henry Adams; worthy physician, Dr. A. H. Dundon; worthy trustees, Louis Molnaeh; Edward G. Pope; Lawrence Powers; worthy chaplain, Patrick Guisse.

Mr. Frazee's Funeral Arrangements.

The funeral of Augustus M. Frazee, who died at his home on South avenue, Tuesday morning, will take place at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Gullberg, of South avenue, this afternoon at 2:30. Members of the Exempt Firemen's Association will act as pall bearers and interment will be made in Evergreen cemetery.

NOVEMBER HEALTH REPORT

Little Contagious Disease in City During Past Month.

VITAL STATISTICS

39 Births, 18 Marriages and 22 Deaths—Dairy Inspection and Milk Analysis.

The city at the present time is exceptionally free from contagious diseases, according to the monthly report presented at the December meeting of the Board of Health, yesterday afternoon, there being but one home under quarantine. Not a case of scarlet fever or diphtheria was reported from November 3 to 30 and from November 17 to 30 there was not a single house under quarantine in the city.

During the month there were two cases of diphtheria, one of scarlet fever, five of typhoid fever, seven of tuberculosis, nine of measles and two of chicken pox. Of these there were two deaths from tuberculosis and two from typhoid fever.

The work of dairy inspection and milk analysis has continued as usual during the month, twelve dairies were visited and sixteen samples of milk analyzed. During November there were reported thirteen marriages, thirty-nine births, two still-births and twenty-two deaths. Of the marriages, ten were white and three colored. Twenty nine of the births were white, ten colored; nineteen were male and twenty female. Twenty-two deaths were reported, seventeen of which were white, five colored; fourteen were male and eight were female. The deaths at all ages are as follows: Under one month, one; one month to one year, four; one year to five years, two; five years to twenty years, three; twenty years to forty years, five; forty years to sixty years, one; over sixty years, six.

These permits were granted: George Cook, Alfred Keenan, J. Y. Barrett, Julius Seigel, to sell milk; Peter P. Robinson and Fernando Brown, to collect garbage; T. M. Ingraham to carry on business of scavenger.

The only members present at the meeting yesterday were Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Dr. T. S. Davis and F. W. Dunn.

VON MINDEN APPOINTED RECEIVER FOR AUTO CO.

NAMED BY VICE CHANCELLOR TO TAKE CHARGE OF DEFUNCT CONCERN.

R. V. P. VonMinden, who has recently represented William B. Smith and the Plainfield Auto Garage Company in much of their law business, was appointed receiver of the company by Vice Chancellor Bergen at Trenton yesterday, in consequence of the move made by Andrew Wilson, a stockholder, for the appointment. Mr. VonMinden will take charge of the company's business at once.

S. S. Swackhamer, of this city, presented the motion for the appointment of a receiver, on behalf of his client, Mr. Wilson, and though it was expected that there would be some opposition, none was brought up, and the selection was made without a contest.

MRS. TINSMAN DEAD.

Peritonitis Carries Off One of Dunellen's Women.

Mrs. Christie A. Tinsman, aged thirty-three years, wife of John F. Tinsman, of North avenue, Dunellen, died at her home yesterday from peritonitis. She was a native of German Valley, Hunterdon county, but had lived in Dunellen since her marriage. She was an active member of the Methodist church at that place.

Mrs. Tinsman is survived by a husband and one son. Her daughter died last May from diphtheria. Funeral services will be held this morning at 10 o'clock from the late home, Rev. S. E. Doolittle, of the M. E. church, officiating. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery, this city.

Dentists His Prey.

Chief Kiely today notified local dentists to be on the lookout for a thief who has been operating throughout the county and who is supposed to be the fellow who worked his games in Westfield yesterday. His plan is to engage the victim in conversation about doing some work and while letting him examine his teeth locate the places where the gold fillings were kept. He would then contrive to get the dentist out of the room for a short time and steal the gold and costly implements.

HONORS MR. RANDOLPH

Mayor Jenkins Names Ex-Mayor a Director of Library.

GIFTS TO INSTITUTION

Committee is Authorized to Purchase Book-Plates—Resolutions on Mr. Yates' Death.

Announcement was made at the December meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library, held last night, that Mayor O. L. Jenkins had appointed Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph a member of the Board to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Joseph W. Yates. A letter from the family of the late Mr. Yates was received, acknowledging the receipt of the resolutions passed by the Board at the time of his death.

A committee was authorized to purchase book-plates for the general library and a second committee comprising Dr. Leonard Waldo and the librarian, Miss Adams, was given the matter of distributing the library reports and periodical list.

The committee having charge of the work of improving the building and grounds, having completed the same, was discharged with the thanks of the Board.

Among many valuable gifts noted as being received during November were these: Two handsomely bound volumes of the reports of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital from the beginning in 1870 to 1904, for which the Board was directed to extend its thanks. There was also a set of eleven volumes of electrical tour handbooks presented by the library committee of the American of Institute of Electrical Engineers, and a valuable work entitled Baptismal and Marriage Register of the Old Dutch church, of Kingston, N. Y., from J. B. Dament.

N. Y. STATE LOSES SUIT AGAINST PLAINFIELDER

JACOB V. BOOTMAN NOT GUILTY OF VIOLATING GAME LAWS.

By a decision of the New York Court of Appeals at Albany yesterday, in the case of the people against Jacob V. Bootman, of this city, and another the State loses its last chance to recover over $1,000,000 penalties for alleged violation of the game laws. The court affirmed the action of the lower courts dismissing the complaints of the State game authorities.

Mr. Bootman and Howard R. Robinson, of New York, were charged with violating the Forest, Fish and Game law by having in their cold storage warehouses between May 23 and June 1, 1901, a quantity of game birds. The total amount demanded was $1,168,315.

The defendants base their case on the claims that they had no knowledge of the exact contents of the cases of game which were stored with them by the owners, and that none of the birds were killed in the State. Former Governor Frank S. Black argued the case for the State.

N. P. H. S. PRODUCTION.

Pupils to Render Lamentations of Julius Cæsar.

For the benefit of the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association, an entertainment, "The Lamentable Tragedy of Julius Cæsar," will be presented by members of the school, largely the senior class, on Tuesday evening, December 13. The play is a comical one, and the cast is preparing at the present time for its production.

Those who will take part in the play are Stanley Fisher, Otto Mueck, Lawrence Milne, Clarence Hand, George Cubberley, Frank Webster, Carl Steiner, Robin Hamilton, William Niechwiez, Arthur Dunning, Miss Myra Emmons, Miss Maud Emmons, Wilbur Danning, William Burtis, Charles Doerinser, Ralph Kuts, Julius Newmark and Lee Keaney.

Funeral of Mrs. Manning.

Funeral services over the body of Mrs. Jacob Manning, who died suddenly at her home on Berkley avenue yesterday, will be held from the residence at its afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield.

Stole Dentist's Gold.

While Dr. E. P. Wheaton, a Westfield dentist, was at lunch yesterday noon, thieves entered his office at Broad and Elm streets and ransacked the place. They took, among other things, $75 worth of gold used in fillings.

FOWLER ON THE TARIFF

Advocates Board of Tariff Commissioners.

CURRENCY VIEWS

Points to Reform in Funding National Debt and Urges Asset Currency and Bank Branches.

"There is no more urgently needed reform in the legislative branch of this government than a change in the sessions of the Congress of the United States," said Representative Charles N. Fowler, of the Fifth New Jersey district, at Washington, yesterday.

"What I mean is this: At present all of our progressive and important legislation is had at the long sessions immediately preceding the national elections. Statutes are enacted so shortly prior to the voting that there is no time to test their merit, and with only a partial and often incorrect knowledge of their utility the people go to the polls and cast an adverse verdict.

"What I contend for is that these laws should be enacted in the interval between the expiration of an old Congress and the assembling of a new one, so that the country would have a chance to view legislation in its merits after it had been given sufficient time to note its workings. In other words, our short and long sessions should change places."

"Have you any opinion as to the proposed extra session for revising the tariff?"

"The doctrine of a protective tariff is now the established and permanent policy of this country, and even the more intelligent of the opposition acquiesce in it. To enter into the task of revising the tariff at a called session would be a step fraught with danger and disaster.

"This government of ours is the most gigantic affair, viewed simply as a business proposition, in the world, and is high time the tariff questions should be dealt with in a scientific way. No law affecting the tariff should go into effect until a year had passed after it had been decided upon, so that the business interests of the nation could be adjusted to the coming change.

"My views on this question have been set forth in a bill introduced in several Congresses. I would eliminate it from partisan politics by the appointment of a commission of experts composed of the ablest men to be had, who would measure to the intrinsic details of the subject by study at home and travel abroad, and who would, from time to time, report to Congress such changes as should be made in the schedules. This body would come to have the dignity and importance of a high tribunal, and its advice to Congress would have the respect due a commission clothed with such great responsibility. Of course, the final enactment of any proposition would rest with Congress."

"What of currency legislation?"

"Reforms in this as in all other important affairs move slowly. I was one of only seven Republicans who openly advocated the gold standard in the Fifty-fifth Congress and spoke in its favor. After this, though opposed by Secretary of the Treasury for three years, I worked for the funding of the national debt by the issue of two per cent. bonds, and finally the Secretary agreed that this should be done and the debt was funded. Remembering these reforms, I have faith that the plan of asset currency and branch banks will yet be adopted and I expect to live to see it an accomplished fact. It is the only sensible and easy way to avoid the periodical money famine that distresses the nation with every recurring harvest. The idea that a solvent Western bank must send to New York for currency with which to meet local demands for moving the crops is so nonsensical that in years to come it will be ridiculed. There is no more reason for it than for a man who has a bank account in Washington sending money to a debtor in Baltimore instead of a check known to be good. We do not need any financial seasons in this country and money should be just as easy in October and November as it is in May or June," said Mr. Fowler.

F. H. Jacobs Coming.

Under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, F. H. Jacobs, the evangelist, will give an illustrated lecture in the church on Friday night, December 16, showing over one hundred views of life in Palestine. All young people's societies in the city have been invited to attend.

HANDSOME WRAPS.

Elaborate Outer Garments and Their Proper Accompaniments.

The other night I went to see "Becky Sharp." Mrs. Fiske is an actress who attracts an audience of well dressed women. They looked like a garden of marigolds with a few scarlet poppies thrown in and a lot of red skinned onions scattered around promiscuously. Many were all in white, like stately lilies, while a few were black, but black so covered with white lace on the waists that the effect was like cobwebs over the frozen grass. The picture was one of radiant color and beauty. Never before, I think, have I seen rich colors in such general use. Heretofore it has been considered vulgar to appear in public in such deep reds and yellows, to say nothing of the russets and browns—but there are so many shades and colors that I despair of telling half their glories. Beautiful woman, however, is always more beautiful than ever in the latest new thing with which she decks herself.

Hats were largely in evidence before the curtain went up—big, flat, high and overloaded with enormous ostrich plumes—and these hats, instead of lying flat, as they have done for two seasons, are now so arranged that they stand high and curl over in graceful shapes. The wraps, too, come in for quite a good share of admiration, and there was just a little ladylike craning of the necks to see some of them. The wearers came sweeping down the aisles with heads poised in accordance with the beauty and value of the wrap, and when at last seats were reached the happy wearers stood quite a half minute, turning slowly, so that all there saw and straightway became so envious that they lost half the meaning of the opening act. These wraps are like loose sacks in shape, generally with a fold in the center of the back, and the sleeves are big and elaborate. White broadcloth or white ribbed velutina, or in some cases heavy white silk, makes the richest.

A few very light pearl grays are seen, and white in its variations of ivory, cream and oyster is often employed. These garments are lined with some contrasting silk, satin or rich heavy brocade. Most of them are without collars, but all are heavily embroidered or incrusted with lace. This lace is naturally of a shade differing from the material as far as possible and still remaining white. If the garment is mat white, the lace is ivory or cream, and so on. The effect is elegant and stylish, while its value is patent to all. A few wraps are high in the neck, with small storm collars made very stiff with featherbone, so that while flexible they are sufficiently firm, and others are bordered with some rich fur around the collar and on the sleeves and also down the front. Swansdown, after having been relegated to the place where out of date styles are kept, has been brought forward and is seen on many of the elegant evening wraps.

THREE-QUARTER WRAP.

When the handsome wraps have been fully admired they are slowly removed with that beautiful assumption of utter ignorance of the presence of another being in all the big place which only the fashionable woman can display, and then the waist beneath is seen in all its glory. White, with embroidery and lace, is the favorite color. What did the world ever do without lace and chiffon? A few waists are red, some golden brown, some gray, others lilac or pink, as one's complexion makes advisable, but all are slightly pouched still and made with folds rather than fine plaits. Embroidery in which are mingled metallic threads, spangles or fine cut jet is seen. One suit under observation had a dark velvet skirt, a pale lilac silk waist fairly covered with ivory lace, heavy and thick, and over this was worn a medium short cape, heavily wrought with a wide pattern in cut jet.

Very smart are some of the three-quarter cloth wraps of the season made along the lines of the old fashioned mantles of the sixties, but modified into modern requirements. The wrap illustrated is a stunning new example carried out in fine black face cloth. The full, long shoulder capes are trimmed with braid and ornaments of the new silk braid variety. The wrap itself is stitched many rows about the edges and fastens at the throat with graduated lengths of cords on which are handsome dangles.

NOVELTIES IN FURS.

Trimmings Are Elaborate and Sometimes Entire Shells Is Made.

Trimming used on the fur coats of the day are important items. Buttons are very much in evidence, and for the richer furs, such as chinchilla and ermine, the most exquisite specimens are used, many of them being composed of French paste and silver with jeweled centers.

Beaver, which is by no means a dressy fur when used by itself, may be made very effective trimmed with self colored braid and velvet.

The newest muffs of the season are large bags decorated at the top with the innocent heads of the animal whose skin goes into their makeup. On a beautiful ermine "bag" muff at the top was an ermine head which held in its mouth a shower of tails from its hapless little fellow victims, and probably its own among them.

For the more dainties kinds of evening frocks, and on light cloth skirts a band of fur several inches wide is a smart addition and at the same time protects the trailing lengths.

The picture hat illustrated is of white felt twisted into a delightful shape and adorned with a long black ostrich feather and a chou of black velvet.

FASHION'S TREND.

Puffed Sleeves a Modish Fancy. Long Jackets Are Modified.

There is a fashion lost sight of for a decade which has been revived, that of the puffed sleeve and its sister, which boasts a quantity of fullness at the shoulder.

The long, tight fitting cuff is also a feature of the new sleeve. Then there is the Henri II. sleeve, puffed all the way up the arm, but tight at the elbow. This style is too stiff and bulky to be generally becoming unless made in a thin taffeta or some equally soft fabric.

Many of the petticoats are hooped, and there is lots of talk about crinoline, but little is actually seen. The fashion of stiffening the hem of the petticoat by a hoop is almost necessary to support the heavily weighted cloth skirt, which, at its best, falls in simple folds.

Already the long jacket has become modified, and dressmakers are making these long coats either slightly bloused at the waist above a plaited silk band or with innumerable fine tucks in all directions from the waist to the collar. Others, again, have embroidery or galloon upon a simulated bolero, but in all the smartest jackets the skirt is invariably full.

A number of the new cloth costumes are trimmed with grosgrain silk in pale shades, which forms a contrast to the material of which the gown is made. This silk is especially used for gathered and corded bouffonnes and tucks which are seen on many elaborate toilets for afternoon wear.

Very swagger is this walking dress of black cloth. The tight fitting jacket has a bolero front and basqued back and is trimmed with plain and fancy mustache braid. The embroidered waistcoat is of pale yellow cloth fastened with buttons of passementerie and gold. The skirt is laid in plaits opening out below the knee and adorned at the foot with bands of velvet and braid.

some attractive fashion, helped out often with a fastening up the front of the waist of tiny black velvet bows.

Deep black silk cuffs, with wide white lingerie frills, are about the smartest ideas it is possible to find in their way. They give the touch of black and white so becoming, as a rule, to any gown, no matter what its color may be.

Pipings are more than ever in vogue and are carried out in silk, velvet and leather. A dark blue gown is relieved and made stylish with pipings of Scotch plaid. The little line of color gives neatness and brightness to the bloe.

The girl who wants to be smart will employ her spare time in making wheels of lace and silk for trimmings. The wheels should be about the size of a half dollar, and in the middle of each is placed a small button. The lace wheels have in the center another little wheel of lace.

A new idea in trimmings consists of bands of tucked taffeta padded out to form a kind of thick roll. Another novelty is the embroidered tuck, which has a running or scroll device worked in fancy stitch on the material itself. It is very effective and adds a richness and importance to a frock.

The evening wrap illustrated is of the very latest mode. It is made of pale rose cloth lined with pale green silk and adorned with a lace stole collar and pink tassels.

A Few Hints About Gowns—Fashion Facts and Fancies.

Two shades of cloth which are very much in evidence are dark blue in which there is a touch of violet and a soft, velvety shade of plum. Made up with a long basqued coat, a gown of either color in broadcloth would be stunning.

It must be understood that the long coats are not tight fitting, as a rule, below the waist. They flow gracefully in one piece with the bodice or have a stitched band at the waist and fall in long knife plaits upon the skirt.

Chinchilla and yellow tinted coarse lace with passementerie fastenings of braid in gray and silver form a delightful stole wrap, having wide shoulders in pelerine fashion. Heavy flounces of lace form the cap sleeves.

The new sleeves on fur coats are very full at the top of the arm and drop toward the elbow. These sleeves are becoming to slight figures.

The evening blouse illustrated is of old green satin drawn in puffs across the figure. Cream lace insertion borders the front, trims the sleeves and bands the waist just above the girdle. The ribbon tie, ruffle and ceinture are of velvet a shade darker than the satin.

Women on The Farm

Many Are Without Civilized Conveniences

At the St. Louis fair I visited the village of the Moros, most barbarous of the Philippine natives. It was about 6 o'clock, when the tiny women of the tribe prepare supper. Some big, fat, lazy Moro men were smoking in a group. A woman not five feet high left one of the huts with a heavy water pail in her hand. She passed the men and spoke to one of them. He did not move, and the thin armed, hollow chested, weak looking little female creature passed on to the fountain, a considerable distance away, returning shortly staggering under the weight of that huge pail of water.

The strapping hulk of a fellow still squatted upon the ground where she had left him. As she came by the group she spoke to him again, this time in tones of expostulation, then entered the hut.

Presently, when the big hulk of a man got "good and ready," he sauntered off and returned soon with three little wisps of wood under one arm. It was the task of the male Moro to split them into kindling. He squatted upon the ground near the hut. A small girl brought him a hatchet. Then in the most leisurely manner, too lazy to stand up or stoop over, the fellow split the kindling wood. When he had split the little sticks the small girl carried them into the hut.

After returning home I read a terrible story of the kidnaping of a lovely girl by some ruffians, who pounced upon her while she was getting water from a well. The well was 400 yards, nearly a quarter of a mile, from her home. The path to it lay through some clumps of scrubby trees. There were signs of a desperate struggle around the well.

The young lady was the prettiest girl in the neighborhood, the dispatch added, and her father was one of the wealthiest farmers in that part of the country.

Now, will you tell me wherein this wealthy farmer in one of the leading states of the American Union was one whit superior to of more civilized than that fat hulk of a Moro savage who let his weak little wife stagger under a load heavy enough for a donkey while he squatted upon the ground, smoking and looking peacefully on? It was in the dusk of the evening when the beautiful country girl was kidnaped, and no doubt her father and the other men of the house sat and smoked peacefully while the daughter lugged water to cook their food with from a well a quarter of a mile away.

Bathrooms; hot and cold water in the house; underneath it, to warm it throughout, a furnace which the men take care of in winter, saving the women's time and strength for other duties; improved machines for churning and washing, the new lightweight domestic and cooking utensils that have superseded the heavy old ones in most houses—how many of these things are to be found in the home of the average American farmer?

A woman of the new west who lately visited the east says eastern farmers' wives work themselves to death, wither and grow old and die, the husbands looking complacently on, knowing it is the custom for a man when one wife departs to get another, which he can readily do owing to the abundance of women in the older states.

Undoubtedly a large number of farmers' wives are worked literally into their graves. Undoubtedly, too, the overwork frequently comes from want of conveniences wherewith to accomplish their laborious tasks. Again undoubtedly this unfortunate condition of things is often the fault of the women themselves. The average man is not deliberately brutal, only thoughtlessly so. He does not know what conveniences his wife needs for housekeeping. If she will take him when he is first married and his heart is still tender and goodly, yet firmly and without ever letting up, insist on labor saving conveniences, then farm existence would cease to kill off two women to one man.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

How the Fashionable Winter Bride Will Be Gowned.

In Paris they are wearing with the dressiest waists high, stiff linen collars with a jabot of lace. They are very fetching when put on with the indescribable manner of a Frenchwoman.

There is an odd fancy in this season's evening toilets of wearing a dark silk coat fashioned corsage over a light, soft mousseline skirt, and quite an economical style it is, as a single waist will do duty with a number of skirts.

PARISIAN WEDDING GOWN.

La mode, though, hardly had this idea in mind. Rather the originality of the thing appealed to her.

Wedding frocks of white panne cloth elaborately trimmed with heavy lace are very smart.

The charming gown illustrated is of regulation heavy white satin, soft and pliable. The skirt hangs prettily from the waist in well laid plaits and is trimmed around the long train and petticoated front with puffings of satin. A bolero effect of lace falls from under a mousseline lace trimmed fichu, which is caught with a spray of orange blossoms. A chemisette with high collar of brussels lace fastens with three tiny satin bows. The elbow puffed sleeves are lined with stiffening to give a broad effect and end in ribbon trimmed ruffles. The tulle veil is gathered in a soft chou at the top of the head and arranged with a cluter of orange flowers.

MODES IN SHIRT WAISTS.

Wash Flannel Is Stunning—This Blouses to Be Worn All Winter.

The prettiest shirt waists of the season are built on the Quaker, the sailor and plaited masculine lines. All are simple, washable and adjusted to the smart figure of the day. These shirts are worn with any kind of short skirt of tweed, hopsack or cheviot. If the skirt is of smooth cloth the shirt harmonizes in color, but when of rough material the color is not so much considered.

It is fashionable now to wear quite thin blouses through the winter, but the majority of girls find lightweight flannels their best choice. The new wash flannels come in exquisite shades of dahlias, copper, onion and oak brown dyes from the palest to the richest and deepest hues.

A dainty shirt is carried out in oak brown wash flannel with long shoulder epaulets edged with a Remstitched band of reddish brown silk. A long tie is worn with this waist pulled through slashes in the center of the box plait. The sleeves have a circular puff to meet deep Puritan cuffs.

The smart little waist illustrated may be created from any lightweight material, although in one of the season's soft silks this design is at its best. The material is adjusted over a fitted lining which opens at the back. The fullness comes from a V shaped yoke of all over lace. About the shoulders are puffings formed by carefully gathering the waist fullness into shape. The sleeves have short puffs finished at the elbow with tiny puffings and ruffles, below which are wrinkled cuffs.

Garments That Are Valuable Adjuncts to My Lady's Wardrobe.

Charming are the evening wraps of lace over chiffon embroidered with shaded panne and velvet leaves finished with an ermine or chinchilla collar and cuffs. An edging of the fur is also a luxurious addition. The three-quarter length wrap is the favored one, but the Josephine cloaks are fully trained.

Long suede and kid gloves and mittens are worn in the evening. With classical dress the Juliet cap of many colored stones is wonderfully pretty, and quaint choux of velvet worn in the hair, the center consisting of a beautiful diamond or paste ornament, is a becoming coiffure adornment.

Flowered effects are the vogue just now, and lace motifs on gowns take the flowered form outlined with gathered velvet or satin ribbon. A gown of black taffeta has medallions of venetian lace outlined with a narrow border of pale reseda green ribbon.

An exquisite arrangement of La France roses done in panne velvet adorns the petticoated front of a white satin frock made for a society beauty. The roses are held together by festoons of velvet ribbon.

Altogether charming is the little bodice shown in the picture. It is of broche silk, with an underground of pale blue and an overpattern of lacy effect. An application of lace embroidery outlines the low neck with lattice medallions of pale blue velvet ribbon.

FASHIONABLE FURS.

The Dyeing of Skins Carried to Perfection This Season.

Fur ties are as popular as ever, and the stoles are so large they almost form pelerines. Some of the muffs are of enormous size, and both the flat and round shapes are the favorites of fashion, the round muff being carried out in long haired pelts and the flat shape that narrows at the top, adopted for short napped skins.

Those who require a fur of real utility will purchase caracal, which is quite as much in vogue as ever. In fact, it has now produced in smoke gray as well as black and white. This fur is made up in the smartest little Louis coats and boleros, with suede bands at the waist, and worn with a cloth skirt of the same color.

The up to date furriers are very clever at dyeing inferior skins, and in many cases it is difficult to tell the imitation from the genuine. There was a time when the swagger woman would not wear these dyed furs, but the furrier's art has changed all this, and now almost any skin may be turned into pretty and becoming garments. For instance, musquash is dressed to resemble sealskin and forms most charming boleros and jackets. For the smart little girl's coat long haired furs are dyed to match the dainty colored silk or velvet from which the wrap is made.

The picture shows a smart little coat of Texas beaver ornamented with rosettes of brown silk and touches of narrow silver braid. Down the fronts and on the cuffs is introduced a little Japanese embroidery. The smart feature of the coat is found in the epaulets, which are cut in one with the shoulder and fall deep over the arm.

WHAT WILL BE WORN.

Materials and Accessories For the Up to Date Wardrobe.

One of the smartest materials of the season is a black amazon cloth embroidered in silk. It has a waved border, the pattern of which graduates from large to small designs and is punctuated with punched holes embroidered in buttonhole stitch very like the English embroidery so much used last summer.

Lace motifs are frequently edged with the narrowest laces, which increase their size and soften the edges, which are apt to show a crude outline when applied on a contrasting material.

There is a great demand just now for petticoats of chameleon taffeta in three distinct shades or tones. Another fancy of the moment is to have the under-skirt exactly match the gown and to ring the changes with each costume—a very dainty but expensive fashion, by the way.

The child's frock in the cut is made of old blue cashmere, with a lengthened bodice. Shaded velvet edges the plaited plastron and skirt. The yoke is of cream embroidery, and the velvet belt fastens at the side.

EVENING GOWNS.

Princess Effects Popular and the Old Fashioned Polonaise Revived.

For evening wear there is a revival of the polonaise and the old princess frocks. If well carried these styles are charming, but a frock of this sort cannot be put up by an amateur.

One of the ideal fabrics for evening frocks is velours mousseline, which takes the loveliest lights and shades. In the new bronze green this velvet is exquisite when trimmed with sachin lace. For a matron a gown of this description is exceedingly handsome.

A flower dress which suggests a delicious scheme for a girl in her first season is composed of the palest water green chiffon mousseline de soie over satin of rose leaf consistency which falls in clinging folds around the figure. The bodice is minutely tucked and gathered. Over the upper part of it is a bertha pointed back and front of latticework formed of pink tipped daisies with golden centers. The skirt is gathered and tucked to correspond with the bodice, the same tangle of daisies being repeated on the lower portion of the skirt.

An equally charming dress is one of pink chiffon gathered full around the waist in the style of the moment, and adorned with graduated entre deux of lace dotted at intervals with tiny bunches of pink rosebuds, the pattern picked out daintily in crystal dewdrops. At the bottom of the skirt is a deep flounce of chiffon, widening at the back and adorned with little gathered ruches of chiffon edged with lace.

Soft ribbon fashioned into roses forms a favorite trimming on smart dance frocks arranged between festoons of the ribbon.

The illustration shows a stunning ball gown of sky blue mousseline de soie. Bands of white lace embroidered in rose motifs head the flounce on the skirt. The bodice is prettily made of rows of lace and gathered mousseline, with a puffing about the decolletage. The sleeves are shirred into puffs. The girdle and sleeve knots are of blue peau de soie.

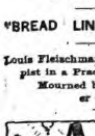
GOTHAM CHARACTERS

GOSSIP OF INTERESTING PEOPLE OF NEW YORK CITY.

"BREAD LINE" MAN DEAD

Louis Fleischman Was a Philanthropist in a Practical Way and Is Mourned by Many—Other Gossip.



END the man who invented the "Bread Line" is dead.

Louis Fleischman was a brave officer in the Austrian army that Moltke broke at Sadowa; his medal, won there and bestowed by Emperor Franz Josef, was his most proudly valued possession. He came to Philadelphia in 1876 and started there at the Centennial the Vienna bakery. It is no secret that Yankee bread was in those days upon the average pretty bad. Fleischmann succeeded, came to New York and in the shadow of Grace church established a real Vienna cafe like those of his native city. At this point the Ringgarten quarter reaches almost to Broadway from its center over near the East river. To-day there are 50 Hungarian cafes in that region less prosperous and less famed, but equally European.

There was much poverty in 1877, the ebb of the great panic, when Fleischmann began giving out every midnight, after the day's business was over, a loaf of stale bread and a mug of hot coffee to any man that asked. He was never afraid of "hard luck" waiting in all weathers for that inconvenient hour. As a matter of fact, most of the men who came to the "Bread Line" are genuine enough. The line is always longest on Sunday nights, because on Sunday men without regular work can get no odd jobs to do.

Never was a man's death more dramatic than Fleischmann's. The "Bread Line" forms long before midnight; it is a sort of club to the men, whose time is of no value and who talk together in low tones while waiting the dole. Fleischmann died about 10 o'clock of a Sunday evening when the line is longest and earliest in assembling.

Five Hundred Real Mourners.

DRE than usual the poor wrecks of humanity who are oblivious of the little knots of gayly dressed and prosperous ones who had gathered to see the Line. It is one of the sights of the city; and not seldom some flaunting red automobile brings down a load of merry men and women who some perhaps to feel thankful that they are not as these, and who often end by pressing trifles of money into trembling and unnerved hands. Among them, too, passed this night the news of death. As midnight struck there were 500 men in that army of misfortune. I doubt if dead man had ever more sincere mourners. More than one of these men had been cheered and encouraged by personal words of hope by Mr. Fleischmann. More than one who now sees the Line no more was drawn from it back to better days by his quiet aid.

The "Bread Line" has figured in literature a hundred times. Once at least by Albert Bigelow Paine it was made the title of a novelette. In his story one of the most successful of American authors now is described as he was in his struggling days when trying to found a weekly paper. The story was so nearly true in the large and in the little details that it was hardly fiction. Paine himself was one of the thinly disguised characters, and three well known artists are minor characters. The hero, who is represented as an invincibly optimistic Col. Sellers of a man, perhaps it is as well not to name. In the story, the five men who have just agreed to found the paper happen along by the Line just as it is forming and in their golden dreams of wealth give generous largess to the men that stand there. And again they come to it after the last issue of the paper has been printed—this time themselves to take the loaf and the mug of coffee. That part was of course an artistic exaggeration.

According to the staid Philadelphia Public Ledger a dinner was given in that city to 18 persons recently by the Hon. Charlemagne Tower which cost $100 per plate, where the menu consisted only of oysters, chicken soup, mutton and lettuce—costly simplicity. Simplicity of another sort is the "Bread Line."

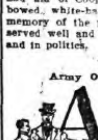
The Mayors of New York.

THE death of Franklin Edson so soon after William R. Grace leaves as living ex-mayors, Low, Grant, Gilroy, Cooper and Van Wyck.

Is there bad luck in being New York's mayor? Low's political prospects were clouded for 20 years by his successful mayoralty of Brooklyn getting tangled up with the Blaine fight in the republican party at its close. So far as elective office is concerned it was damaged again by his defeat a year ago at the polls after another good administration. Grant has done nothing in politics since his term ended, and has shone mainly as a social butterfly. Edson's death was hastened by the scandal of his wayward son, who stole money from a church, deserted his wife and finally killed a woman and himself while apparently crazy. Strong died in sorrow over the antics of his son, Putnam Bradlee Strong, whose escapade with the actress wife of a British nobleman was the scandal of all the miles that lie between New York and Yokohama. Besides the failure of Strong's dry goods firm embittered his last years. Van Wyck is the only one of these men whose personal reputation suffered while he was mayor, which, of course, ends him politically. Grace and Gilroy were business men; and as they continued business men after their terms closed, they may be called fairly successful in spite of their dip into politics.

There remains Edward Cooper, very old, very infirm, very much beloved, the son of Edward Cooper, the friend and aid of Cooper Union; a slender, bowed, white-haired old man, like a memory of the past; a man who has served well and nobly in philanthropy and in politics.

Army Officers' Wives.



STORM OF abuse has descended upon the high-held head of huge Gen. Corbin for daring to suggest that army officers should get the consent of the army department before marrying—which consent, as in Germany, presumably being conditioned upon the financial prospects of the happy pair.

An army officer below general's rank draws pay ranging from the $1,400 of the young second lieutenant to the $4,500 of the colonel after 20 years service. He has house-room free in most cases, traveling allowances and the privilege of buying supplies at cost in commissary stores. Ten per cent is added to his pay if he serves outside of the United States proper.

These sums do not sound so small outside of New York. It is probable that Gen. Corbin was speaking with the New York standard of living in his mind; perhaps even from the standpoint of one whose marriage with a wealthy woman has made luxury familiar. As a matter of fact, the second lieutenant's $1,400 is not very big here. A New York police patrolman gets that sum, lives in a tenement if he likes and has no social standards to maintain. Under the circumstances the policeman is more likely to save money than the young army officer who marries on his salary.

Yet even in New York public sentiment is overwhelmingly against the Continental idea which practically requires an officer to marry a girl with a fortune of from $10,000 to $250,000, according to the grade and regiment of her affianced. It has always been the theory that a poor boy has a chance in our army or navy. Has he, if the government says he may not marry upon his salary?

The Madness of Wealth.

HE fact is, there is something in the air of wealth that drives many people wealth-crazy.

A millionaire horseman gives at his country home a "nursery party," where the father of his wife appears as a little Lord Fauntleroy with gray whiskers, and all the guests dress as babies of the story books.

By the time this letter is read, if no citizen has had the courage to protest, the automobile race for the Vanderbilt cup will have been "pulled off" on the public highways of populous Long Island, from which the "peasantry" have already been directed to keep their children and themselves for ten hours, and to "chain up their dogs and lock up their fowls."

The fairs in every county near New York have been captured from the farmers by rich suburban estate owners who go to them to see and be seen, and to make about in infantile pleasures. *Long Island has not yet ceased to gos*sip about the "hospital fair" at Mrs. Mackay's great house on Harbor hill, when the "common people" were practically invited to buy admission fees to see the members of the 400 at close quarters; when "Ollie" Belmont mixed drinks behind the bar and Mrs. Mackay herself, Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Vanderbilt and other great ladies passed pennies counter to sell toys and trinkets at fancy prices.

At Bernardsville, at Westchester, at Mineola, the summer people invent the devices of the idle to kill time, as if it were the great enemy. Always there is a race meeting going on somewhere; and the automobiles of society jostle at the entrance the haggard clerk who has fingered the money in his employer's till to back the little ponies against odds to amount to certainly for the "booky."

All this is very English, no doubt. But isn't there danger that the sound and the flashing of it all may be too much the humdrum millions who simply do their daily work, of the thousands who devote wealth and *leisure to philan*thropy? And these there are, even in New York.

THROUGH THE FOREST

WHAT MAY BE SEEN ON A SUMMER DAY.

Flowers and Trees and Animals Are Interesting to the Nature Student —How to Study Them to the Best Advantage.

Recently I walked through a forest It was one of those hot days when there is no breeze stirring, and when all the birds, save the red-eyed vireo and the indigo bunting, are sitting silent in the depths of the woods. The most noticeable sounds were those of the crickets in the grass, the drowsy thrilling of cicadas, and the occasional "peep" of a hyla from the foliage of the trees. The coloring of the tree flowers had a strong suggestion of autumn, for the goldenrod was at its best, and mingling with it were trumpet weed, boneset, and great masses of pearly everlasting. All the shrubs along the roadside were living with garlands of wild clematis and along the borders of the forest itself even the darkest spots were lighted by great clumps of the white wood asters.

As I entered the woods, the first living creature to catch my eye was a chipmunk, looking bright and cheerful in spite of the heat. He did not seem in the least afraid, and he was munching briskly at some blueberries which he had brought from a distance in his cheek pouches. He appeared improved most at the moment, perhaps, was the spotless condition of his fur. Here was a little animal which lived in a hole in the ground, grubbed in the soil every day, and which at this season lived chiefly on berries whose juice dyed the hands of every man who picks them. Yet, on that shining coat before me, there was neither mud, nor dust, nor stain of any kind. No racehorse, fresh from the hands of a careful groom, has a sleeker coat than this. And so it is with most wild things; it seems that they might touch even pitch without being defiled. Watch a muskrat, delving in the muddy bank of a stream, and then note the brightness of his glistening brown coat as he sits on a stone by the water to wash his face. "No man can work, in mud and dirt, and keep his clothes so clean."

Soon I struck an old forest trail, faintly marked by tree blazed years ago. The marks of the hatchet, once white and prominent, were now almost grown over with bark, or so weatherstained as to be almost invisible except when close at hand. The narrow path was overgrown with ferns, but here and there a bruised or broken frond showed that the wild things used it still. All around, the trees grew close together, and the light was dim, but now and then there was an open space, where the sunshine filtered through, and glorified the mossy rocks and the fungus-covered trunks of fallen trees.

I was crossing such an open space when I saw, lying on a bed of pine needles in the shade before me, a white-tailed deer whose warm red coat was flecked with brighter red, where spots of sunlight danced across it. It was a buck with well-grown antlers still in the velvet, and he was looking full at me with head raised and ears straight out on either side. I felt that it took another step after he knew that his presence was known he would dart away through the trees, so, pretending not to see him, I sank slowly to the ground. Then, putting my back to the trunk of a tree, I turned my face slowly toward him. His dark eyes were full upon me, and his well-shaped translucent ears moved slightly from time to time, as though searching the air for any sound which might be in the nature of a warning. There was no wind, so the large black nostrils were dilated to gain air in this case neither the nose nor the ears were needed, for I was in full view, and the eyes were getting all the information there was to be had.

I knew that, by less than a month, this mild-eyed dweller of the forest now resting so gently in his peaceful tree-walled home, would be fleeing over the country side—an outlaw with a price upon his head. I knew that every mile that those splendid antlers would covet them, and that the shoulder, where now great limber muscles played beneath the dark skin, would be the target for a score of bullets. Perhaps he would escape them all—small chance, but still perhaps—and live to be pursued again next year. Probably he would be hit, and, if so, I hoped that it might be by a marksman, with a bullet through the heart or lungs, when death would quickly come to his relief.

I raised my hand, and the lithe creature before me sprang to his feet, snorted, stamped, and with his broad white tail in the air, leaped away among the trees.

DOOM OF AMERICAN DESERT

Years of Exploration Show That Cultivation of Vast Waste Is a Possibility.

Fifteen years of work of exploration, survey and investigation by the engineers of the government at an expenditure of $1,500,000 show that the Great American desert can largely be brought under cultivation by irrigation systems and made to support a population probably as great as that of the whole country. Not only this, but it will supply opportunity for the working of the thousands of ranges of barren mountains in that vast region, for their stupendous stores of precious metals and useful minerals that have merely been guessed at as yet. The throbbing east, with its manufactories of necessities of all kinds, would profit no less than the west by the opening up of these lands. And all of them, experience shows indubitably, are so rich, when cultivated intelligently with adequate water supplies, that their settlers would be able to pay the entire cost of the irrigation systems in a few years and never be distressed in consequence. It was a fortunate day for the nation when the late Maj. John W. Powell, recognizing the vast water, land and mineral resources of the Rocky mountain region, insisted upon adequate government appropriations for irrigation surveys preliminary to the enactment of the national irrigation law, which he foresaw was certain to come.

HUMOR GROWS IN IRELAND

Report That Love of the Ludicrous Had Left the Emerald Isle Is Declared False.

So far from declining, humor has grown and increased in Ireland, declares a writer in the National Review. Indeed, if we go back further still to the early literature to which so much attention is directed just now, I think we shall find that there was no humor at all in Ireland in the days of which it treats. So far, at least, as I have made acquaintance with it, I can find none, but my knowledge is slight, and if I am mistaken I hope somebody who knows better will correct me. At all events, the most curiously un-Irish element to me in this Gaelic revival is the lack of humor in the whole movement; though perhaps the portentous solemnity with which its pioneers treat their own merits, and discuss their own talents, the utter and absolute seriousness with which they take themselves and each other reveals a depth of unconscious humor which does more credit to their nationality. Anyhow, if we are not as humorous in Ireland to-day as our great-grandfathers were, we are at least more humorous than the folk who people the Ireland with which Mr. Yeats and Dr. Douglas Hyde have made us acquainted. For myself, I can only say that in the Gaelic Ireland of those far past days I have never met with so much as the ghost of a smile.

GIRL RECLAIMED FROM VICE

Queen of Bandit Gang Changes Life to One of Purity with Aid of Salvation Army.

At a meeting held at Innerglelthen recently, under the presidency of the Master of Elibank, M. P., Gen. Booth told the story of an Australian Salvation Army soldier who, as a girl of 18, was in the habit of smoking, drinking and gambling. She was known as the "Queen of the Flying Angels," a gang of 36 men, who were a terror to the community. Again and again she was in the hands of the police, and was regarded as incorrigible. One day she was handed over to the matron of a Salvation Army rescue home, where at times she would work and behave well, while at other times she used to take the notion into her head of throwing about everything upon which she could lay her hands. For some while this continued, until eventually she changed her way. A situation was obtained for her, and she got on well until one of her old associates came across her, discovered her and tried to entrap her. She wrote to her captain, who hurried off to see her, and advised her to go to another part of the country, which she did, and has never again been troubled by the "Flying Angels."

ANCIENT NEGATIVE A FAKE

Hard-Headed Business Man, Victim of Camera Fad, Is Fleeced by Old-Time Game.

A case has just come to light in Paris which once more demonstrates how a man full of hard-headed capacity in business may be exceedingly gullible in his fads. A wealthy merchant, much smitten with photographic wonders, permitted himself to be persuaded by a plausible young acquaintance that the art was known to the ancients. To clinch his statement the young man submitted a queer-looking negative, which he claimed to be a picture of Cæsar's wife," and the merchant, being in his hobby as far above suspicion as that famous lady herself, not only swallowed the story whole, but, like Oliver Twist, asked for more. What was speedily forthcoming. He was told that in "a village near Cairo" was a distinct "photo of Seasostris," and innocently gave his friend £280 to bring it. Unhappily, when the emissary was supposed to be among the pyramids his cupe met him at a bachelors' gathering in Montmartre. Then the murder was out, but fear of ridicule overcame the sense of loss and the fleeced victim shrank from prosecuting.

MUSHROOM GROWING

PROFITABLE INDUSTRY UNDER PROPER CONDITIONS.

Temperature, Moisture and Soil the Three Things Which Must Be Closely Watched — Growing Demand for the Fungi.

In the United States the term "mushroom" refers *commercially to but a sin*gle species (Agaricus campestris) of the fleshy fungi, a plant common throughout most of the temperate regions of the world, and one everywhere recognized as edible. From the time of Pliny, and perhaps much earlier, this plant has been sought as an article of diet, and it has been cultivated for many centuries.

The successful cultivation of mushrooms in America has not been so general as in most of the European countries. It is in France and in England that the mushroom industry has been best developed. France is properly speaking, the home of the present mushroom industry. Unusual interest has been shown in the United States in the growth of mushrooms within the past few years, and it is to be hoped and expected that within the next ten years the industry will develop to the fullest limit of the market demand.

Mushrooms may be grown in any place where the conditions of temperature and moisture are favorable. A shed, cellar, cave, or vacant space in a greenhouse may be utilized to advantage for this purpose. The most essential factor, perhaps, is that of temperature. The proper temperature ranges from 53 degrees to 60 degrees F., with the best from 55 degrees to 58 degrees F. It is unsafe to attempt to grow mushrooms on a com*mercial basis,* according to our present knowledge of the subject, at a temperature much less than 50 degrees or greater than 63 degrees F.

A second important factor is that of moisture. The place should not be very damp, or constantly dripping with water, under such conditions a successful commercial work is not possible. A place where it is possible to maintain a fairly moist condition of the atmosphere, and having such capability for ventilation as will cause at least a gradual evaporation, is, by present practice and by the most extensive experimentation, shown to be necessary.

*In the growing of mushrooms for com*mercial purposes, the beds should be built of stable manure which has already been fermented or composted. Many experiments have been made looking toward the substitution of other composts or waste products for stable manure, but nothing has yet been found which may be more highly recommended. Fresh manure should be obtained, and this should include the litter used for bedding the animals, unless the latter consists of coarse weeds.

The manure should be piled in heaps about three feet deep when well pressed down with the fork, and these piles may be of considerable extent. It should be watered until well moistened throughout, but not drenched. In the course of four or five days or a week it will be necessary to fork over or "turn" the manure. A second turning will be required usually in from seven to ten days, and it may be necessary to water again if the material has suffered considerable drying out. If well pressed down and merely moist, the manure will not burn and, moreover, there will be no tendency for a sour fermentation to become established. In from 15 to 21 days, depending upon the conditions, the temperature will begin to fall, the violence of decomposition will begin to show a subsidence, and the compost will be ready for the construction of the beds. The manure is always ready for construction of beds when nearly all objectionable odors are lost and a sweet fermentation, as growers term it, has begun.

HUNT MEXICAN TREASURE.

Search Being Carried On in Texas for Vast Wealth Buried During War.

A number of Mexicans with teams, plows and scrapers are excavating in that vicinity, claiming to have in their possession maps and charts showing treasure to be buried there to the amount of $100,000 in Mexican doubloons. The treasure is buried near what is known as the Bull Tank, and the party has agreed to pay the owners of the land on which they are at work a certain per cent of the find for the privilege of excavating. This treasure is said to have been buried during the Texas and Mexican war. It is said a tradition has existed that a large sum in Mexican doubloons was buried somewhere on the banks of Pond creek, and another that there was treasure of considerable amount in Mexican money buried at some point along the banks of the Brazos river near Marlin. Many excavations have been made to locate the buried treasure, both on Pond creek and the Brazos river. These efforts were not only made by home people, but strangers have gone in and excavated, among whom were Mexicans. A few years ago it was no uncommon thing to see deep holes dug along the banks of these streams, presumably by parties in search of the lost treasure, but if any money has ever been found in this manner the fact is not known.

SAVAGES DESPISE LABOR.

Hardest Task of African Missionary Is to Persuade Dusky Natives to Work.

The hardest task of the missionary among tropical savages is to teach them the dignity of labor. Where every bodily want is supplied freely by nature, the chief motive for the earning of one's daily bread, is absent. But the lesson is being learned. This was shown some months ago in Toro—a central African country lying to the west of Uganda at the foot of the snow-clad Ruwenzori and the Mountains of the Moon. The king's birthday was celebrated, by an exhibition of native work. There were 200 entries, a smaller number than the previous year, but the standard was much higher and the variety greater. The queen, who was herself a prize-winner, presented the prizes, and the king showed much interest. Yet ten years ago, when the first Europe Baganda missionaries went to this people, they were sunk in the lowest depths of savagery. In some respects, this exhibition in the heart of the dark continent was more interesting and remarkable than that in St. Louis.

FEW SNAKES IN NEW YORK

Copperhead and Rattler Are the Only Poisonous Species About the Great Metropolis.

Over the country extending for many hundreds of miles both north and south of New York, the same embracing the Adirondacks, the Catskill and Blue Ridge mountains, there are but two species of poisonous snakes—the rattlesnake and the copperhead, declares the New York World. The former may be at once distinguished by the rattle, while the latter is a reptile of beautiful hues, showing rich, reddish-brown bands on a hazel body-color. The bands are very narrow on the back and very wide on the sides, presenting the outlines of numerous dumbbell-shaped markings. Despite the presence of these poisonous snakes in the eastern states accidents are of great rarity. The rattlesnake is an honest brute and usually gives ample warning of its presence. The *copper*head is a secretive species and generally prefers flight to combat.

LIKENS RUSSIAN TO FLINT.

George Gould, on Return from European Tour, Says Things About the Czar's Subjects.

George J. Gould returned on the Philadelphia from a 4,000-mile auto*mobile tour through Europe.* In the smoking room of the Philadelphia an American resident of Moscow spoke one evening of the Russian press cen*sorship.*

"Through this censorship," he said, "the war news has been perverted horribly. Repulses have been changed into advances, and routs into victories. Hence, the discussion of a dozen defeats, I have seen the deluded Russians, thinking they had won victories, light big bonfires and caper about them joyously. Russia, when I left, offered the world the spectacle of defeats everywhere and fires of rejoicing everywhere."

"The Russians are like flints," said Mr. Gould. "The more you beat them the more fire they make."

Freak of the Wind.

Almost beyond belief is the story which comes from England of a trick the wind played not long ago on the spire of a Presbyterian church. It blew the steeple above the belfry some 25 degrees out of plumb, so that the spire pointed in a northwesterly direction and it was feared that it would fall. When the next morning men were engaged in straightening it the wind veered around and blew it back to its original position. Of course it was necessary for the men to straighten it and its supports, but the wind's freak made their work much easier.

HER LEAP FOR LIFE

A GIRL'S HEROIC PLUNGE INTO THE COLORADO RIVER.

Caught by a Herd of Stampeded Cattle on a Long Suspension Bridge —Horse and Rider Go Down Together.

Not many months ago, Miss Beulah Thorn, who is one of the loveliest girls in Texas, was one riding on horseback. Nearby the road passed over the great suspension bridge that spans the Colorado river.

She had trotted about a quarter of the way over when the sound of heavy hoofs caused her to glance around. Not a hundred yards behind a great cloud of dust floated in the hot air. And in this cloud a great herd of oxen was thundering straight towards her.

With eyes aflame, and bellowing loud and ominously, they rushed on to the bridge.

In spite of the awful fear that assailed her, the girl never for a moment lost her presence of mind. She glanced before her. Far away—it looked an interminable distance—she could see the end of the bridge. There only was safety. But was it possible to reach refuge before the oxen overtook them?

Her eyes fell upon the horse. Blazer —that is the animal's name—was swift and sure of foot.

"Now, Blazer, go!" the girl commanded, tightening her grip upon the rein, and bringing her whip down on his flanks.

A bound; the horse had answered to the call. They were off—to safety? But, no, something was happening that the girl had not foreseen. Under the huge weight of the living avalanche the great suspension bridge was swaying heavily. The movement caused the horse to stumble.

There came a mighty roar and the thunder of many hoofs. The herd was on them. Pale, but collected, the girl reined her steed round, and faced the mad onslaught.

Now, a young bull, its head bent low between its fore legs, thundered by; another followed, old and weighty. With nose almost touching the ground and head tilted sideways, it made straight for them, then swerved aside, grazing the chestnut's flanks with its sharp horns.

THUNDERED STRAIGHT TOWARDS HER.

Still, the terrified girl never for a moment lost her self-possession, but cast around for some other means of escape. Only one loophole presented itself to her. Far below she could see *the swirling, muddy waters of the Colo*rado.

For an instant she hesitated and patted the neck of her trembling steed. Would he make that awful leap? She faced him towards the railings.

"Go, Blazer, leap!" the girl cried out.

And Blazer leaped, bearing his fair mistress on his back down, down, into the swift-running Colorado.

On the river bank a dozen cowboys had seen the gallant leap. Voiceless with excitement they watched both the girl and steed disappear with a great splash beneath the waves.

At last the horse arose—riderless. For a few minutes the animal swam around in a circle, as if in search of something.

Springing from their saddles, the cowboys sent up cheer after cheer, and ran to the brink to assist the brave girl. Six rough, willing hands were out-stretched to her, whilst one cowboy, filled with admiration for the faithful beast, put out his hands and embraced its glossy neck affectionately.

Native American Music.

There is hidden among the mountains of Kentucky, Tennessee and the Carolinas a people of whose inner nature and its musical expression almost nothing has been said. The music of the southern mountaineer is not only peculiar, but, like himself, peculiarly American. Nearly all mountaineers are singers. Their untrained voices are of good timbre, the women's being sweet and high and tremulous, and their sense of pitch and tone and harmony remarkably true. The fiddler or the banjo player is well treated and beloved among them, like the minstrel of feudal days. —Harper's Magazine.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Dec. 8, 1904.

According to the New Brunswick Home News it is "The Brooklyn Eagle continues to scream—the wrong way." Possibly so, but there are few if any better edited and better conducted papers in this country.

It is understood, says Printer's Ink, that the Waltham Manufacturing Company, of Waltham, Mass., through its president, Harrison Williams, of New York, has contracted with a prominent agency for a large advertising campaign on a complete new line of Orient automobiles. But while the advertiser will employ large space, it will be confined to a few mediums only, the advertiser preferring to spend the appropriation in this manner rather than scatter the expenditure broadcast through the magazines.

Passaic, which has attempted to make the P. S. G. give cheaper rates in that city, will have a bill introduced in the next Legislature giving cities of the second class the right to supply gas for their own citizens. The measure will be pushed by Assemblyman Dalrymple as the solicitor of the Mayor and Common Council. If the proposed statute is passed it will pave the way for Plainfield to establish a municipal gas plant and the citizens of this city are now in the mood to urge the Mayor and Common Council to do so. It was exceedingly small business on the part of the P. S. G. to discontinue the privilege of allowing the municipal departments to use gas free of charge. Some years ago when a municipal plant was agitated, the company, then doing business here, staved off the proposition by granting the privilege which the P. S. G. has now cut off without any specific reason.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Majestic Theatre has resumed its popular sway with the production of "A China Doll," a dainty comic opera with melodeous music, bright and catchy songs and a great deal of humor and fun. Dainties is the best of this clever opera and beautiful production, there is nothing vulgar. It is the kind of theatrical attraction that men like and that appeals particularly to the feminine contingent of theatre-goers. It is interpreted by one of the best casts seen in New York this season, including such well known artists as W. F. MacDonald, Albert Hart, George O. Boniface, Jr., Miss Helen Boyton, Gerrinne, Adele Rafter. The play is drawing big houses. Scenically the production is the most beautiful seen in New York in many seasons. This is especially true of the setting of the second act, which shows the interior of the Porcelain Palace. The critic of the New York Times in referring to it, it mentions the name of the painter—Ernest Albert—and said "it is a creation of really poetical athmosphere;" and the conservative critic of the Evening Post declared the scenery "Really gorgeous." Other of the metropolitan newspapers referred to it in equally complimentary vein. The scene is entirely in blue and white, a distinct novelty in the way of Chinese color effect. Different shades of blue and the use of cream white relieve the possibility of monotony and produce the effect of porcelain.

George M. Cohan and his "Little Johnny Jones" are playing to large audiences at the Liberty Theatre. This popular young star and his comedy company are giving great satisfaction and their New York engagement will prove one of the most successful of the current metropolitan season. The piece is a clever musical comedy splendidly played. The character of the stranger with a slight "edge," played by Thomas Lewis, is a remarkably strong study. Every time Mr. Lewis comes on or leaves the stage he receives applause. Mr. Cohan has put very snappy and witty dialogue into the mouths of this role, which is one of the "fattest" comedy parts played in years. Mr. Lewis fits the part and it suits him, a combination greatly enjoyed by the audience.

"Higgledy Piggledy" as presented by the Weber & Ziegfeld stock company, has proved the greatest laughing success in the history of the reconstructed playhouse now known as Weber Music Hall. People are turned away at every performance, not excepting the Tuesday and Saturday matinees, and already the catchy music of Maurice Levi is beginning to be heard in the land. The dainty witchery of Anna Held contrasts pleasingly with the more strenuous humor of Marie Dressler, while Joe Weber, Harry Morris, Charles A. Bigelow, Aimee Angeles, Bonnie Magin, Aubrey Boucicault and the sixty odd other members of the big company by their individual and collective efforts, combine to furnish an entertainment pleasing to the eye as well as the ear. Of the many song hits in the play, Anna Held's "Game of Love," "Nancy Clancy" and "In Gay Paree" have preference in popularity. Marie Dressler's "A Great Big Girl Like Me" and "In the Chorus," are more than merely mirth-provoking.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE WORK

Various Reports Presented and Referred.

ONE CLAIM MADE

Another Session to be Held Dec. 23, When Money Will be Borrowed in Anticipation of Taxes.

John Ross, owner of the building corner of North and Watchung avenues, presented a claim for $55 to the Common Council at the monthly meeting held last night, alleging that a workman in the employ of the city while engaged in working on the street with a pick struck a stone which flew against a large plate glass window in the drug store, breaking the same, and causing an expense of $55. The claim was presented to the Common Council through Charles J. McNabb, attorney for Mr. Ross. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh presented the legal papers in the sale of the plant of the Plainfield Sanitary Company, formerly owned by Mayor-elect J. F. Buckle, and the city, the new owner. The papers were filed.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of ninety-four sewer permits from September 28 to November 28 and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that he had granted twenty-seven building permits.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution authorizing the City Clerk to draw a check for $63,122.24, the city's share of the State and county tax. Another resolution offered by Mr. Daniel provided that when the Common Council adjourned it be to meet on Friday night, December 23, when the business for the year will be concluded as far as possible. At this meeting it will be necessary for the Common Council to borrow money in anticipation of taxes and at that time it will be possible for the finance committee to tell how much money it will be safe to borrow, the bulk of the taxes being paid by December 20. The final meeting of the present Common Council will be held on December 30.

During the evening President Teller appointed Councilman Charles C. Randolph, the new member from the Fourth ward, to membership on the same committees left vacant by the resignation of Robert L. Lee. All of the members attended the meeting, excepting Councilman Frank DeW. Randolph. Mr. Tyler was present at the opening of the meeting, but he asked to be excused and the request was granted.

DINNER IN HONOR OF RECENT DEBUTANTE

MISS GRACE KAUFMAN GIVES CHARMING AFFAIR AT THE PARK CLUB.

In honor of Miss Edith Fisk, daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk, of West Seventh street, who was presented to society on Friday afternoon at a reception given at her home and which was followed by a dance at the Casino, Miss Grace Kaufman, a member of the receiving party, gave a dinner at the Park Club on Saturday evening. The affair was a charming one, those present being numbered among the leaders of the younger society set.

There were two tables in the large dining room and the decorations were a feature. The color scheme was pink, many roses of that color being used to garnish the tables. The menu, an excellent one, was much enjoyed.

Among the guests were Miss Edith Fisk, Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Elsie Harman, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Grace Kaufman, Miss Georgiana H. Smith, of this city; Miss Elizabeth Richmond, of Scranton, Pa.; Miss Regis Smith, of Philadelphia; Miss Cole, of Hartford, Conn., and Miss Cahart, of Brooklyn; Frank O. Reinhart, Owen Fleming, Joseph T. Wadsworth, Augustus H. Fisk, Harvey Fisk, Effingham Pinto, Story Rowland, Willard Wadsworth, W. T. Kaufman, of this city; Mr. Kilmer and Mr. Truesdale, of New York, and Mr. Sparks, of London.

Following the dinner the young folks enjoyed a dance until nearly midnight, a feature being the music which was unusually good.

BOROUGH AFTER P. S. G.

The North Plainfield Council Orders Bill to be Collected.

TO ENFORCE PAYMENT

P. S. G. Refuses to Bear Its Share of Cost of Street Improvement—Other Proceedings.

In the transaction of regular business at the Borough Council meeting, last Friday, the Public Service Corporation was rapped over the knuckles because of its refusing to pay a bill of $197.16 as its share of repair work done on Somerset street from February 1 to November 1.

Chairman Arnold, of the street committee, declared that he encountered trouble every year when these payments were asked for and he offered a resolution that the borough counsel be instructed to take the necessary steps to collect the money. The borough owes the Corporation $400 for lights and Mr. Lee suggested that it be taken out of this account but his motion was lost on vote. Mr. Arnold's resolution was carried and Counsel Reed announced that he would proceed at once to bring the trolley people to terms. As near as could be learned, the objection to the payment was made because none of the officials had noticed any of the work being done.

Several appointments were made by Mayor Smalley and afterward confirmed by the Council as follows: Edward Terry, as captain of No. 3 Hose Company, to fill a vacancy; James D. Cooper, as a call man in the fire department and Brooks Carson as a special marshal. It was reported the Public Service Corporation had granted the borough's request for a free light in front of police headquarters and also that $7 in fines had been collected in the department during November.

A petition from residents of Stone street for a hydrant on that thoroughfare between Greenbrook road and Union street, was refused. Chairman Arnold reported the expenditure of $168.05 on streets during the month and on motion of Mr. VanArsdale a "held-up" bill of $12.50 from the Manganese Steel Safe Company, for placing a lock on a door at police headquarters, was ordered paid.

ROUTINE MATTERS.

City Board of Education Has But Little Business at Regular Monthly Meeting.

Practically nothing but routine business was transacted at last Monday's meeting of the Board of Education. The medical inspectors reported examining 189 pupils, the custodonian reported a balance of $38,000 and Superintendent presented a check for $444 as tuition fees from non-residents pupils for the fall term.

H. M. Mays, of New York, appeared in person before the Board and requested the use of class rooms in the various schools for the inspection of advanced penmanship. The matter was referred. Mr. Abbot reported progress in the work on the new High school and several applications for its janitorship were received.

THREE ASSEMBLIES.

Invitations Now Being Issued for Series at the Casino This Winter.

Invitations are now being issued for a series of assemblies to be held at the Casino during the present winter. The dates set are January 2, February 20 and April 24.

The following women will act as patronesses: Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. R. Arrowsmith Hagaman, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen and Mrs. Henry G. Runkle.

Match Shoot on Saturday.

At the weekly meeting of the Plainfield Gun Club, last evening, it was decided to hold a match shoot next Saturday afternoon between F. Keller and H. P. Vosseller, and H. B. Williams and Harold Keller. The shoot will be for fifty birds. In addition these professionals will be on the range Saturday afternoon, Jack Fanning, representing the Laplin Rand Gun Company; "Tim" Glover, representing the Ballistite Gun Powder Company; T. H. Keller, of the Peters Cartridge Company, and Harold Keller, of the Stevens Arms Company.

Trolley Service Change.

Pending the completion of the bridge over the Lehigh Valley at Lyons Farms, the trolley cars heretofore run between Dunellen and Newark will be run only as far as Lyons Farms. The present North Broad street line in Elizabeth will be discontinued for the present and will be taken up by the Dunellen cars. After the completion of the bridge over the Lehigh Valley at Lyons Farms the Dunellen cars will continue running through to Newark as before.

NO SPECIAL ELECTION

Opinion That Assembly Vacancy Will Not Be Filled.

UNNECESSARY EXPENSE

Cost of Choosing One to Take Mr. Embree's Place in Union's Delegation Would be $8,000.

The question of necessity of opinion there will be no special election held to fill the Assembly vacancy from Union County caused by the death of Assemblyman-elect George H. Embree at Westfield. The Governor has the power to issue a proclamation calling for special election fifteen days prior to the convening of the Legislature, if he deems it necessary, and in case he fails to do this and the Board of Freeholders of the county think that such action is necessary, it can pass a resolution asking the Governor to issue such a decree.

As the Republicans have such a large majority in the lower house of the Legislature, and there are no very important measures to come up this winter calling for a full vote, it is more than likely that the vacancy will not be filled. The expense for a special election would be $8,000 and this would be entirely unnecessary under the circumstances.

LOCAL YOUNG MEN FORM A SOCIAL ORGANIZATION

OFFICERS ELECTED AND PLANS FOR THE WINTER COMPLETED.

For the purpose of holding a series of dances during the coming winter and promoting sociability among themselves, a party of local young men on Saturday, perfected an organization to be known as the Arion Club. Rooms have been secured in the Vanderbeek building and they will be handsomely fitted up with furniture and means for divertisement. The receptions and other large affairs will be held in the Casino.

The following officers were elected: President, Alexander Muir; vice president, Vincent W. Nash, Jr.; secretary, Leonce Texier; treasurer, Raymond McVoy. The membership, which is to be limited, comprises the following: George B. Cose, William Baker, George Kaen, Harry Kaen, Landrum Jennings, Bertin Banks, Edward Texier, James Conklin, B. C. Firstbrook, W. W. Warneck and Louis Chatelaine.

CHRISTMAS DINNERS.

Local Salvation Army Corps Preparing to Send Out 500 in Baskets.

The local corps of the Salvation Army is arranging to give a free Christmas basket dinner to five hundred of the most worthy poor of Plainfield and vicinity.

The basket will contain sufficient food for five persons and consist of the following: One turkey, or chicken, one lb. of bread, one pound of sugar, ½ lb. of coffee, one cabbage, one turnip, one quart of potatoes, one half pound of candy, one half pound of nuts, five oranges, as well as other articles of food that may be sent in, also a copy of the Christmas number of the War Cry with special supplement.

Plainfielders in the Sunny South.

There will be a good sized colony of Plainfielders at Daytona, Fla., this winter. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, formerly of this city, but late of Patchogue, L. I., Mrs. Moore and daughter, Miss Carrie Moore and Mrs. Moore's sister, Miss Ida Recap, of this city, will spend the coming season in Florida. The members of the above party, with the exception of Miss Recap are now at Daytona and she sailed Tuesday on the Steamship Comanche. A number of other Plainfielders are planning to go to Daytona during the cold weather.

Aivah Clark Takes Law Partner.

Former Congressman Aivah A. Clark, of Somerville, has taken Clarence H. Case, who has been connected with his office some time, into partnership. The firm name will be Clark & Case. Mr. Case is an able young lawyer. He graduated from Rutgers College in 1900 at the head of his class. He had previously been editor-in-chief of The Targum, the college paper. He entered the New York Law School in 1900 and graduated with honor in 1902. In 1903 he was admitted to practice.

Miss Morris to Wed.

Announcement is made of the forthcoming marriage of Miss Mary Morris, of Park avenue, to Frank Howard, of East Orange, on Wednesday, Dec. 14. Miss Morris is a very attractive young woman, popular among her associates, and Mr. Howard is a rising young electrician in the employ of the Edison Manufacturing Company.

ASSEMBLYMAN IS DEAD

George H. Embree Succumbs to Typhoid-Pneumonia.

ILL THREE WEEKS

Hard Work During the Campaign Caused Illness Which Terminated Fatally—Career of Westfielder.

George Hoffman Embree, who was one of the three Republican Assemblymen chosen at the last general election, died Friday afternoon at his home in Westfield, from typhoid-pneumonia. He had been ill three weeks, and it was the opinion that the hard work of the campaign was largely responsible for it. He was generally popular among his townsmen and received the full vote of his ticket.

Mr. Embree was born in 1862 in Brooklyn and moved to Westfield in 1872, where he lived the rest of his life. In business he was the sole New York agent for the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Company, having held the position for many years. In politics he was always a Republican. In 1896 he was elected town committeeman of Westfield, serving three years, the last of which he was chairman of the Board. Last year he was appointed Freeholder, holding that position one year. He was also town treasurer and chairman of the Republican Executive Committee.

Mr. Embree was a member of St. Paul's church, Westfield, being the junior warden at the time of his death. He was also a member of Fireside Council, No. 715, Royal Arcanum, the Westfield Club, the Westfield Baseball Association, and for twenty years was treasurer of the Fairview Cemetery Association. He leaves a wife and two children, a son twelve years old, and a daughter fourteen years old.

Union County officials and those from the various nearby towns, as well as many prominent in the Republican affairs of the county, together with a large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral services of Assemblyman-elect George Hoffman Embree, held Monday afternoon from St. Paul's Episcopal church, Westfield. The edifice was much too small for the great number that tried to attend the service. Rev. C. W. Jarvis, the rector, officiated.

The services were floral. The Union County Republican Committee, as well as from individual officials and the several local organizations of which Mr. Embree was a member, completely hiding the casket from view.

Among those attending the obsequies were Hamilton Kean, Surrogate Parrett, County Clerk James C. Calvert, Registrar of Deeds Frank H. Smith, Assemblymen-elect Edward S. Coyne and Peter Tillman, Charles N. Codding, Freeholders J. F. Hubbard and William Westphal, Former Assemblyman William Newcorn, Mayor-elect J. F. Buckle and S. P. T. Wilbur from this city. The Union County Board of Freeholders was quite generally represented, as were also Fireside Council, Royal Arcanum, and other organizations in Westfield to which Mr. Embree belonged.

A strange co-incident remarked by many yesterday was that while Edward S. Coyne, of Elizabeth, was being nominated for the Assembly, he was very ill in the hospital and not expected to live. At that time Mr. Embree was at the convention in the best of health. Mr. Coyne recovered and was able to attend the funeral services of Mr. Embree.

Following the services the interment was made in Fairview Cemetery. The bearers were J. L. Delatour, M. Welles, W. J. Alpers, J. O. Clark, C. N. Codding and Gerald Earle.

Will Erect Handsome Residence.

A permit has been granted Mrs. G. B. Kelley, of Grant avenue, for the erection of a handsome residence on East Front street, opposite the home of Mrs. Charles L. Hyde. Louis Beck has been given the contract for carpenter work and Seaman Williams will do the mason work.

LITERARY.

The two infinities of Kant did not chill or hurt him, but his fearlessness is shared by few. Only for a short instant, at best, will most persons consent to look open-eyed at any clear image of fate or of infinity. Scarcely a friend will long look steadily at the clear midnight sky for a minute in silence. The freezing of the heart follows, the appalling shudder at the dread contemplation of infinity, which may be called cosmic horror, is more than can be endured. If these stars are absolutely and positively infinite, then there is no up or down, and they knew no beginning, will have no ending. With any such staring gorgon of nihilism the unchanged attention is shaken, and the heresiarx of common life seizes upon the liquid crystals with avid hunger.—George M. Gould, M. D., in the December Atlantic.

Petit Jurors Drawn.

The following petit jurors were drawn by Sheriff Corlell this morning: Cornelius VanHerwerden, James W. Faulkner, William T. Newman, D. S. Pope, Hugh McDonald, Joseph Kingston, Floyd T. Fuller, Thomas Lynese, James S. Clarkson, William Forristelle, Noble Briggs and James Morrison.

Meeker Inn Threatened.

The old Meeker Inn at Union, which is conducted by Mrs. Illsley, formerly of this city, narrowly escaped destruction by fire Saturday. Sparks from an old-fashioned fire place ignited a mantle and the flames were spreading rapidly when discovered. Prompt action on the part of Mrs. Illsley and her daughter, Miss Estelle Illsley, aided by neighbors, is all that saved the building.

MRS. B. R. FORCE DEAD.

Pneumonia Caused Her Death Early This Morning.

Following an illness of nine days with pneumonia, Mrs. Elizabeth Force, wife of Benjamin R. Force, died at her home, 262 East Front street, at 1:30 Tuesday morning. While her condition was critical, it was believed she would recover, but during the night there was a turn for the worse and the best of medical skill was unavailing.

Mrs. Force was formerly Miss Elizabeth Todd, of Bedminister, where she was born and lived for a number of years. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church and a faithful attendant at the services. The funeral services will be private.

Company K Elects Corporals.

At the regular drill of Company K last Monday, James Niles and Lemuel Jennings were elected corporals to fill places made vacant by the removal from the State of Corporals Whitney and Harwell. The new officers will take positions at once. In addition to the election of these officers, it was decided to hold a shoot in the armory ever Saturday night, open to all comers. 22 calibre rifles will be used. The shoots will last through Saturday, December 24, the prizes being announced at a later date. A dance will be given at the armory a week from tomorrow, on Wednesday, December 14.

HONORED THEIR DEPARTED

Local Elks' Conduct Impressive Sacred Service.

HELD AT THE CASINO

Members Assisted by Professional Vocalist and Instrumentalits—Address by Howard McSherry.

To fittingly commemorate the memories of brothers who have passed away, Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, assembled in the Casino, Sunday p. m. and conducted a memorial service. It was the first that has been given by the local organization but was complete in every detail, the nature of the programme adding deep solemnity to the occasion. Great care had been exercised in its arrangement and the result was one of the most impressive sacred sessions that has ever taken place in the city.

The large auditorium was filled to its capacity at 3 o'clock when the members of the lodge, with the exception of the officers, filed in and took seats reserved for them in the front part. Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon, who presided as master of ceremonies, together with his subordinate executives, occupied seats on the platform. A violin, 'cello and piano trio composed of Henry Conrad, Arthur Severa and Mrs. Minnie Seldon-Pearce, all of New York, rendered Thome's "Andante Religioso" as a prelude in beginning and was followed by the opening ceremonies of the Elks ritual. The entire assembly of the lodge, with the exception of the officers, filed in and took seats reserved for them in the front part. Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon, who presided as master of ceremonies, together with his subordinate executives, occupied seats on the platform. A violin, 'cello and piano trio composed of Henry Conrad, Arthur Severa and Mrs. Minnie Seldon-Pearce, all of New York, rendered Thome's "Andante Religioso" as a prelude in beginning and was followed by the opening ceremonies of the Elk ritual. The entrance of the local esteemed, loving brother, Dr. Redman.

The programme following, in detail, was as follows: Baritone solo, "There is a Green Hill Far Away," Townsend H. Fellows, of New York; prayer, Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace P. E. church; hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," in which the entire gathering joined; reciting of Bryant's poem "Thanatopsis," by Brother Frank Rowley; violin solo, "Largo," Mr. Conrad; oration, Brother Howard McSherry, of New Brunswick; baritone solo, "The Publican," Mr. Fellows; instrumental trio, Wider's "Serenade;" closing exercises by the lodge, hymn, "Abide With Me," and benediction by Dr. Redman.

Each number was on a high order of excellence, the assistant artists being especially proficient in their various parts. Mr. Fellows has a voice of exceptional range and power and his solos were features of the service. The reciting of "Thanatopsis" by Brother Rowley was admirably done and aided by his timely gestures and inflective tones, was a pleasing contribution to the programme.

As an orator Brother McSherry has few equals and in the address of the evening he added to his laurels. While paying a deep and loving tribute to the memory of those of the order who had been taken away, he told of the cardinal principles of Elkdom and besought those before him to uphold them. If lived up to, he said, they are an aid to good citizenship, to patriotism and in teaching man his duty toward his fellows. To the auditorium he confided the fact that the members of Elkdom are "good fellows" but yet it is these very same who are always ready to reach down in their pockets and give a dollar toward a hospital or an asylum whenever it is needed.

"Many people," he continued, "have a mistaken conception of Elks, gained by observing a few such as are to be found in any fraternal organization. But they are not the whole, only a small part of it, and they are absorbed in the greater body which goes on gathering strength day by day and wielding a powerful influence for good in the community where it makes its home. The open Bible is in its lodge room and its sessions are opened with prayer and the men who have made it what it is today are men who believe in God and His precepts."

Mr. McSherry at times held the tense interest of his hearers with highly colored similes that were brought to strong climaxes, and again he had them smiling through the keen, subtle wit that he alone possesses.

The Casino was appropriately decorated for the occasion with a profusion of green foliage and plants. These harmonized with the soft decorative red of the auditorium and the combined coloring produced a subdued effect that was in keeping with the service. The front of the stage was banked solid with plants of all descriptions while others graced the alcoves and boxes.

The officers of the lodge who were on the stage and who took part in the opening and closing ceremonies were as follows: Exalted ruler, William N. Runyon; esteemed leading knight, Alexander D. Findlay; esteemed loyal knight, George O. Stevens; esteemed lecturing knight, Frank Rowley; secretary, Walter Freeman; treasurer, Samuel B. Woolston; chaplain, H. Frank Cortell; esquire, Thomas Hanna; inner guard, John Bowman; tiler, Edward C. Keasling; organist, George F. Schoonmaker; trustees, James F. Beckie; Charles A. Reed and Herbert W. Stover.

STATE OFFICERS' VISIT

Members of Old Glory Council, D. of L., Entertain.

STATE GUIDE'S ADDRESS

Complimented the Members on the Initiatory Work—Old Glory Leads in Competition for Prize.

The official visit of the State officers to Old Glory Council, No. 62, Daughters of Liberty, Saturday night, was a most satisfactory one, and afforded a great deal of pleasure to all those present. The meeting was held in L. O. O. F. Hall, and the initiatory team conferred the degree upon forty-eight candidates, working for the first time under the new revised rules, and for the first time in their new uniforms.

With regard to the initiatory work, the lodge received a high compliment from the State Council Guide, Mrs. Francis Bullen, of Hightstown, who in the absence of State Councilor Mrs. Margaret J. Russell, officiated. In her remarks as State Guide said that in all the councils she had visited in the last ten years, she had never seen the work so well done.

The members of the local council have worked diligently in the effort to win the prize offered by the State Councilor for the council getting in the greatest number of new members, and their efforts seem likely to be rewarded. The State Guide announced that up to the present time, Winfield Council, No. 63, of Jersey City, has initiated twenty-eight candidates, and if it is near the end of the social year, it is not likely that they will be able to catch up with the local council.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, the visitors and local members adjourned to the banquet hall, where an elaborate repast was served by the good and welfare committee. Among the officers present were Fred Muir, of Rahway, and Walter Reinhart, of Cranford, also delegations from the following places: New York, Staten Island, Jersey City, Elizabeth, Cranford, Westfield, Dunellen, New Market and Plainfield.

WATCHUNG HUNTERS RIDE TO WESTFIELD

ENJOYABLE GALLOP ALONG THE FOOT OF THE MOUNTAINS SATURDAY.

Starting from the picturesque grounds which border on J. E. Martine's property at Cedar Brook Farm, twelve members of the Watchung Hunt Club, oblivious of the damp chill in the air, participated in the weekly drag hunt Saturday afternoon. It was not the most perfect day for a chase, yet the usual enthusiasm was evidenced and the affair was thoroughly enjoyed by those who took part.

The route was a somewhat different one from former trips, covering the meadows at the foot of the mountains in the vicinity of Scotch Plains and Westfield. The hounds were thrown on the scent on Leland avenue, near the Netherwood station, and the huntsmen followed across the track and the brook through the meadows bordering on Mountain avenue, and thence to the foot of the Watchung hills. The first check was made at Scotch Plains, after which the riders galloped over the fields almost up to the Westfield golf course. From here they returned home by a route parallel with the old railroad track, arriving at their destination at about the same place as the starting point.

Among those who participated in the chase were Miss Leila Cruikshank, Miss Noe, of Westfield, Miss Holly, Dr. M. O'M. Knott, Mr. Obebbeare, George O. White, L. E. Waring, Chauncey Sayer, Harry A. Bourne and C. E. A. Bellows. Next week the hunt will start from the residence of John I. Holly, on Park avenue.

Company K Heads the List.

According to the report of Inspector-General Bird W. Spencer of the New Jersey National Guard, Company K, of this city, stands at the head of the list in figure of merit for rifle practice. It secured a total of .81 and the officer commends it highly for its work. The result is very pleasing to the members as they sought hard to exceed the other companies and many of them went to the range at a sacrifice of time and money.

Suit Over a Painting.

The case of John Monroe against John Vardon, both of this city, will be tried at the Elizabeth District Court, Thursday, December 15. Monroe is suing for the value of some original oil paintings which he alleges he sold to Vardon. On the other hand the defendant claims that the pictures were not sold, but were a gift to his wife. William G. DeMeza represents the plaintiff, and F. J. Blats will appear for the defendant.

Lindsey Woolley, of Madison avenue, is making an extended business trip through New York State.

PARK AVE. IMPROVEMENT

Trust Company Will Widen Block Fifteen Feet.

A NEEDED CHANGE

Work on Its New Building to Commence Early in the Spring.

The much-cherished hope of those interested in the welfare of the business section of the city will undoubtedly be realized in an improvement to be made in connection with the erection of the new bank building at the corner of Park avenue and Second street by the Plainfield Trust Company. It is the purpose of the company to do all in its power to widen Park avenue at that point and it is expected that eventually the widening will be continued as far as Front street.

In erecting the building on the corner of Park avenue and Second street, the structure will be set back five feet from the line of the present building and ten more feet in front will be given to the street, making fifteen feet in all. Charles W. McOmchen, who owns the other property on Park avenue adjoining that purchased by the company, and extending as far as the Estate of Boice, Runyon & Company, is in perfect harmony with the plans of the company to widen the avenue, and as soon as the leases expire on the buildings purchased by him he will at once plan to erect modern structures there and will give the same number of feet allowed by the trust company.

While the trust company has not yet definitely decided on its plans, they are gradually being approved and the structure will be one of the finest in the city. The lease on the corner property purchased by the company does not expire until April, 1905, and for that reason no attempt will be made to tear the building down until that time. The company hesitated to some extent in purchasing this property owing to the narrowness of Park avenue, but when it was learned that it could be widened without detriment to the new building, the deal was made.

The advantages of widening Park avenue between Second and Front streets has been discussed more or less by those interested in the improvement. It has always been a matter of regret that the avenue was not allowed greater width when originally laid out, but the proposed improvement by the Plainfield Trust Company may prove an incentive to the other property owners to take steps toward widening the avenue at least as many feet as proposed by the trust company. This, the merchants say, would make the avenue one of the best for business in the city.

PLAINFIELD ARTIST'S MERITORIOUS WORK

JONAS LIE AWARDED SILVER MEDAL AT ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

Jonas Lie, a young artist and resident of Plainfield, has been awarded a silver medal at the St. Louis Exposition for his meritorious painting, "Sunlight and Shadow," exhibited last spring in the Society of American Artists, New York.

The prize winning picture is one of many painted in the heart of Plainfield; "Sunlight and Shadow" was painted on Harmony street, but a stone's throw from Somerset. Two other canvases, "A Mill Race" and "Reflections," also exhibited at the Exposition and at the National Academy of Design, New York, found their origin along the brook between Somerset street and Watchung avenue.

Jonas Lie is a native of Norway and a nephew of the Norwegian author of the same name. His career, although short, has been marked by much success and few exhibitions are held in the United States that do not include some examples of his work; he exhibits annually in the societies in all the large cities, including New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Pittsburg and Philadelphia, and frequently receives commendation for his virile handling and masterful touch. It was at these exhibitions that the veteran critic, William M. Chase, of New York, saw his work, and paid the greatest tribute a veteran can pay to a rising young artist by purchasing two of his works which he much treasures in his collection. Mr. Lie's studio is in the Babcock building, although most of his work is done out of doors.

Burglars in the West End.

The residences of Alfred Compton and A. C. Hardingham, both in the Kyma section, were entered by burglars Saturday night. In neither instance did they secure anything of value, having evidently been been frightened off.

MAY DEEPEN GREEN BROOK

Councilmanic Committee Reports Concerning Cause of Floods in East End.

TO REMOVE DAMS

Storm Overflow Sewers Also Suggested As Result of Thorough Investigation Into the Present Conditions—Text of the Report.

The anticipated report from the street committee of the Common Council regarding the petitions of residents in the East End asking for relief from floods in heavy rains, was presented at the meeting of the Common Council, Monday, by Chairman W. L. Gleak, of that committee. Accompanying the report was a map, made by Street Commissioner Gavett, showing the improvements as proposed by the committee. Both the report and map were filed on Mr. Gleak's motion to be taken up by the new street and sewer committee for next year. The full text of the report is as follows:

"Your committee on streets and sewers, to whom was referred the investigation into the causes of the overflow from Green brook, would respectfully report that we have made frequent visits to the locality affected, have conferred with residents and property owners in that section of the city, particularly with Messrs. Frank DeL. Hyde, Pierre Mali and L. V. F. Randolph. We have also had a map and profile prepared (which is filed herewith as a part of this report), showing the relative location and elevation of streets and brook.

"Our interviews have brought out wide differences of opinion as to the cause of the overflows, and we are convinced that no single cause exists, the removal of which alone would obviate the trouble complained of. We believe, however, that there are a number of improvements, which, if made, would probably prevent the recurrence of these destructive floods.

"The water shed of Green brook and of its tributary, Blue brook, embraces an area of six square miles above Fanwood notch, and it is estimated that the rainfall, if properly stored, would furnish nearly 5,000,000 gallons of water for every day in the year. These figures make it easier to realize what a vast quantity of water is poured into Green brook in times of severe storms.

"The amount of water has considerably increased in recent years, owing to the cutting down of trees by some of the property owners on the mountains; forest fires, started by mischievous or careless persons, have also tended to make the character of the flow more torrential; this effect being caused not so much by the destruction of the trees, as by the loss of the so-called 'forest floor' formed by the leaves and vegetation on the ground, which, acting as a sponge, holds back much of the water and tends to make the flow more even.

"When we also remember that Green brook, as it passes over the Hyde dam, is higher than East Front street at Farragut road, and that the intervening land is practically level, it will be seen that whenever the flow exceeds the capacity of the shallow brook, Front street must receive and distribute the surplus.

"From Terrill road to Netherwood avenue, a distance of about 4,400 feet, here is a fall of 15½ feet and the brook is free from dams, but it should be cleared of the fallen trees, rubbish and the like, which now obstruct the brook.

"It is desirable that the brook should be deepened, in places, as far east as Scotch Plains, and we suggest that the Common Council request the officials of the adjoining towns to undertake this improvement.

"At a point 1,000 feet west of Netherwood avenue there is a log dam maintained under an old mill right by the Hyde Estate on the property of Mrs. Frances J. Mali. Above this dam the brook is partially obstructed by sand and gravel. In times of floods the water of the brook leaves its bank to the west above the dam, flows over the property of Mrs. Mali and out into Farragut road and East Front street. We recommend that negotiations be opened with the representatives of the Hyde Estate, looking to the purchase of the mill right and the removal of the dam: The obstructions should also be removed and the brook deepened above and below the dam.

"At the easterly side of Farragut road there is a stone dam owned by Mrs. Mali; there is a diversity of opinion as to whether this dam caused any of the overflow, but we think it probable. In case the measures already suggested should fail to prevent the floods, we think that, as the next step, the Mali dam should be moved back about 15 feet, so as to give an overfall or cross line more than double its present length, and thus proportionately lessen the height of water passing over it. The present location of the dam, close to the bridge, is very unfavorable.

"A further precaution would be to place sluice-gates of ample capacity in the dam, so constructed as to be operated from a bridge; they could then be opened at any stage of the water. Similar gates could be placed in the Hyde dam, in case it remains.

"There is a stone dam about two hundred feet west of Farragut road belonging to Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph. It is possible that this dam does not contribute to the overflow, and its consideration may be deferred for the present. The storm water running through Farragut road in ordinary storms is carried into the brook through two pipes, one 12 inches and the other 24 inches in diameter, emptying under the bridge. In times of freshets the water is said to flow back through the pipes into the street; if this does occur, the water under the Farragut road bridge would be at least five feet higher than the crest of the Randolph dam.

"The flooding of East Front street has no doubt been increased since the land on the southwesterly side of Farragut road was raised, as the water formerly passed over the road near the brook and across Mrs. Randolph's property into the brook again.

"It has been suggested that large pipes be placed in the lowest point in Farragut road, running under Mrs. Randolph's land to a point below her dam, in order to carry the water finding its way into Farragut road to the brook instead of to Front street.

"It has also been suggested to us that a storm overflow sewer, about four feet in diameter, be constructed on the north side of the brook from the upper dam to a point near Norwood avenue; this sewer would be at least 2,400 feet long, and would cost about $12,000.

"We desire to extend to Mr. Frank DeL. Hyde, to Mr. Pierre Mali and to Mr. L. V. F. Randolph our appreciation of their expressions of willingness to co-operate with the Common Council in making such improvements as promise to be of service in preventing the overflows; to Mr. Mali for his promptly starting the construction of a levee along the brook above and below the Hyde dam, and for his work, now in progress, of deepening the brook on the Mali property; also to Mr. Hyde for his offer to arrange the gates in the Hyde mill pond below Farragut road in such a way that the mill race will flow to its full capacity during freshets, and reduce, by that amount the flood water above Farragut road.

"Respectfully submitted, W. L. Gleak, chairman; J. Stephen Higham, William S. Tyler, Theodore D. Wilson, committee."

FOR DEBUTANTES.

Dinners and Luncheons In Honor of Miss Hegeman and Miss Fisk.

Following the debuts of Miss Virginia Hegeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, and Miss Edith Fisk, daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk, several dinners and luncheons have been arranged. On Tuesday evening, December 13, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., will give a dinner for Miss Hegeman, and on Wednesday evening, December 14, Miss Georgiana H. Smith, of Belvidere avenue, will give a dinner for both Miss Hegeman and Miss Fisk. On Thursday, December 15, Mrs. Francis deL. Hyde will give a dinner for Miss Hegeman. Miss Ursula Rowland, a member of the receiving party for both Miss Hegeman and Miss Fisk, will give a luncheon in their honor at her home on Monday evening, December 19. Mrs. *Charles J. Fisk will give a din*ner for Miss Fisk, but the date has not yet been decided upon and early in January Mrs. Frederick G. Mead will give a luncheon for Miss Fisk.

Rev. Robert Mackenzie, of New York, an authority on missions, will speak on that subject at a meeting to be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening.

AUGUSTUS FRAZEE DEAD

Originator of Express Messenger Service Passes Away.

FAMILIAR FIGURE

Aged Eighty-One—Member of Old Harmony Engine Co.—A Free Mason.

Augustus M. Frazee, for years a familiar figure about the city, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Euphemia Gullburg, in South avenue, Tuesday, at the age of eighty-one years. He was the originator of the "pony express" service in this vicinity and had many trials and tribulations in making it a success.

Mr. Frazee originated a special messenger service between here and New York fifty years ago or more when passengers on the Jersey Central were transferred from Elizabethport to New York by boat. He was the oldest commuter in the city. After the death of his wife fifteen years ago, Mr. Frazee retired from business, being succeeded by his son Whitney, who now conducts it. During the early stages of his messenger service, repeated attempts were made by the railroad company to prevent his carrying it on over its line, the company having leased the privilege to the Adams Express Company. Attempts were futile for Mr. Frazee rode on top of cars and hid in cars to carry on his business.

Some twelve years ago, he broke a leg while out driving, being thrown from his carriage. The leg was subsequently amputated and a wooden one substituted. Mr. Frazee was a member of the old Harmony Engine Company and later a member of Gazelle Engine Company. He lost a finger some years ago, while running to a fire, being thrown forward and breaking the member. The only fraternal organization with which he was identified was Jerusalem lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M. He was a member of the First M. E. church.

His father was the proprietor of the old Buena Vista Hotel, which stood on Front street, east of Patterson's tobacco store. Surviving Mr. Frazee are four children, George and Whitney Frazee and Mrs. Euphemia Gulburg and Mrs. Alexander Sergeant. He has two brothers living, James and Samuel Frazee.

COURT'S RULING NOT LIKED BY GUARDSMEN

REMOVAL OF TAX EXEMPTION CAUSES WIDESPREAD DISCUSSION.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary there is considerable talk among the National Guardsmen of this State about the recent opinion rendered by the court declaring the tax exemptions heretofore allowed soldiers and firemen, unconstitutional, and there is a possibility that many members of the various companies may retire in consequence. A member of Co. K, of this city, in speaking about the matter, said that the whole State Guard is incensed at the action of the State in taking away the small amount of exemption allowed and he ventured the opinion that it would not take much for whole companies to disband for this reason.

He furthermore stated that he thought the State had displayed a very mean spirit in the matter and that it was the only State in the Union that did not allow such exemptions. He severely criticised the manner in which the Guard is provided for by the State and said that its recent action was only in keeping with several others tending to maintain the Guard on the smallest possible appropriation.

As an argument in favor of continuing the exemptions, this member said that a soldier is liable to be called from one State to another in case of riots or any other similar trouble, and yet no provision is made for taking a man away from his work and providing for his family, it is only a case of go or be discharged from the company. This sort of thing, he said, was having a tendency to cause a feeling among the guardsmen against the State military authorities, as well as the Legislature, and the least the State can do is to allow the exemptions as before. The well-known fact there is considerable feeling in Co. K over the matter and some action would not be surprising.

Autoists Not Yet Arrested.

The borough police have as yet made no arrests in the Barry case although the identity of the young man running the automobile is practically known. It is said that William Barry, father of the injured boy, had retained Counsellor Craig A. Marsh to bring suit and that as the former's request, no criminal charge will be preferred at the present time.

UNION COUNTY'S BIG GAIN

Increase in Valuation for Year Is $2,449,500.

STATE BOARD'S REPORT

Separate Assessment Plan in Plainfield and Elsewhere Works Well.

The State Board of Taxation has submitted its annual report to Governor Murphy. The document was submitted to the executive in person by the members of the commission. According to the report in Union county the increase of valuation over 1903 is $2,489,500. The total in 1903 was $47,106,900, and in 1904, $49,595,700. In Somerset county the increase in valuations over 1903 is $743,325. The total in 1903 was $18,963,067 and in 1904, $19,705,392.

The board finds that good results have followed the enforcement of the rule for the separate assessment of land and improvements. It says:

"Section 7 of the tax act of 1903 provides that 'the State Board of Taxation may by rule direct the assessor in any taxing district to determine the true value of each parcel of real estate assessed by him without the buildings and improvements and to note the same on his list, and to determine and note separately the true value of every building and other structure on each parcel, and add and carry out the same as the assessed value of the parcel, and in such case the receipt given for the payment of the tax shall contain such separate valuations.'

"Under a previous rule the State Board of Taxation had ordered the separate assessment of land and improvements in the cities of Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Trenton, Camden, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Hoboken, Bayonne, Orange, Passaic, Bridgeton, East Orange, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, Asbury Park, Atlantic City and Millville. This method of assessing real estate was found to work so beneficially that at the meeting of the board held on January 5, 1904, it was voted to further extend this order, under section seven, above quoted, to other cities.

"Letters of inquiry have recently been sent from this department to the assessors of the various cities and towns affected by this rule, with a view to ascertaining what the general result of the new system has been. Almost without exception it has been commended as excellent and productive of good results. There are some who think it not adapted at the date of entering this report."

According to the report the total amount of assessed valuations, exclusive of railroad and canal properties, is $1,055,379,022, which is an increase over last year of $47,186,881, and of this amount $913,183,294 represents real estate and $153,344,967 personal property.

The amount of personality returned shows an increase of nearly $4,500,000, and this is explained by reason of the new tax law which exempts mortgages as no longer taxable to the holder as personal property, the whole tax on mortgaged land being paid by the mortgagor. By this mortgages are withdrawn from the list of personal property and credited to real estate.

There is a notable decrease shown in the amount of deductions allowed for incumbrances, the total amount allowed by the assessors throughout the State for 1904 being only $5,890,-997, as against $16,327,363 returned for the previous year. This is a decrease of more than $10,000,000 in deductions for debt, and is principally due to the change in the law, which allows the deductions to be made only from personality.

For 1904 the amount of exempt property in the State is: Public schools, $17,541,890; other school property, $7,539,530; public property, $23,831,613; church and charitable property, $33,791,644; cemeteries and graveyards, $4,617,000. Total, $112,-440,307.

Their Wedding Date is Set.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Douglas, of 303 West Front street, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Edith Louise Douglas, and Ralph Beitman, of Craig place. The marriage will take place at the home of the bride's parents on Thursday evening, December 15, at 8:30 o'clock.

MAY COMMIT MARRA

Authorities Still After Owner of the "Spite House."

CAN'T PAY FINES

Faces Prospect of 360 Days in Jail Because of Inability to Produce $85.

Unable to pay $85, the remainder of an aggregate of $135 in fines imposed upon him in the city court, Antone Marra, the owner of the East Front street "spite house," faces the prospect of spending 360 days in the county jail. Through Corporation Counsel Marah, who was instrumental in his conviction for maintaining nuisances on the much-discussed premises, commitment has been applied for on one of the four accounts remaining against him. There were six originally and he paid the fines of two.

Formal notice that action against Marra was to be taken was served on his counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., who replied that the defendant was unable to pay. Under the law, when a conviction is secured in the city court and a money fine imposed is not produced commitment can be made for ninety days. As Marra is still liable in four accounts the same number of days applies in each instance although this is discretionary with the city magistrate. The matter is now in the hands of Judge Runyon and final steps toward imprisoning Marra will probably be taken today.

Marra was first brought into prominence several months ago by erecting a small shack, which he occupies, directly opposite the handsome residence of former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph. The neighborhood was aroused and finally complaints were made jointly by Mr. Randolph and the Board of Health against Marra, who was arrested on the following charges: That he threw decayed vegetable matter on the grounds about his home; that the howling of his dogs kept nearby residents from getting their proper sleep; that he built a privy vault without a permit and that the same was offensive. He was convicted on all four and fines aggregating $135 were imposed. Shortly afterward he was again arrested on another charge of building a cesspool without a permit, complaint being made by Inspector Thurlow, and he was again fined $10. The $50 was all he could pay and beside owing the $85, he must also pay the costs of court which amount to a large sum. Marra is an Italian junkman and until his arrest was supposed to be worth considerable money.

MRS. EDWARD BARTLE IS GRANTED A DIVORCE

DAUGHTER OF JOHN SCHORB, OF NORTH PLAINFIELD, GETS A DECREE.

Immediately after all the testimony was presented in the action of Mrs. Corinthia Bartle, nee Schorb, of Somerset street, on a petition for divorce from her husband, Edward Marshall Bartle, Vice Chancellor Stevens, sitting in the Chancery Chambers, Newark, Wednesday, granted the petition of the plaintiff. She was represented by Isaac P. Runyon, Esq. The petitioner, her father, John Schorb, and mother and Miss Carrie Marsh, of Rahway; Former Chief Marshal William Campbell and Recorder Thomas Dowd, of North Plainfield, were witnesses. The defendant's counsel, Coddington & Swackhamer and the defendant did not appear in court.

The couple was married on February 5, 1901, the bride being sixteen years old. She claimed that her husband deserted her in August, 1901 and upon the ground of harsh treatment the petition for divorce was filed. The defendant, through his counsel, filed an answer, denying the facts set forth in the petition and the matter was referred to Vice Chancellor Stevens and the hearing was run down for yesterday. Nearly the whole day was consumed in taking testimony.

Sailed for Sunny Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Alberic Buccini, of New York, who, for several weeks have been the guests of A. L. Force and family, of Duer street, sailed for Naples, Italy, last Thursday on the White Star Steamer Republic, to visit Mr. Buccini's mother, brothers and sisters, whom he has not seen in over ten years. From Naples they will make a stop at Paris, for a few days and then go to London, where they will visit Mrs. Buccini's parents, sisters and brothers, returning to New York the latter part of February. Mr. Buccini is an expert Italian interior decorative artist and has gained a great reputation in his art, which is a natural gift. His genial personality has made for him a host of friends in the metropolis and elsewhere.

NOTES ON A SKUNK

INTERESTING STUDY OF THEM BY A NATURALIST.

How an Italian Got His First Lesson in American Natural History from One of the Little Animals.

Not many weeks ago I went out into the fields with two full-grown skunks which I have had under observation since their birth. When we were far away from all houses and dogs, and free from all chance of interruption, I put my charges on the ground, and lay down, with a field glass, to see what they would do. As first they seemed too much delighted at the freedom of the open fields to do anything but walk about, sniffing at the grass and the herbs they found growing there. But presently they became interested in the insects which they found on the ground, especially the crickets, of which they captured a number. When one of the skunks caught sight of a cricket, he would make a little rush at it and stamp on it with his fore paws, squeezing the insect to death by rolling it over the ground. Then he would put down his sharp nose and eat his victim with evident relish.

After a time one of them managed to catch a frog, which he deliberately rolled about with his paws until it was dead. He picked it up in his mouth, but did not attempt to eat it, and while he was still amusing himself with it, the other skunk came waddling up. Then began a squabble for the body of the frog, which was sometimes in one mouth and sometimes in both. And all the while the skunks squealed as though they were being killed, and stamped their feet at one another with an earnestness which seemed simply absurd. Eventually I saw them both walking gravely away, with the body of the frog stretched out between them. When they finally disposed of it, they were out of my sight, but I don't think they ate it, for I have seen them refuse to eat frogs at other times. When I caught sight of them again, a few minutes later, they were interested in a blueberry bush, which was laden with ripe fruit. They ate many of the berries which they could reach as they stood, and some of those which grew a little higher they got at by pulling down the twigs with their fore paws. During the afternoon I saw them feed on blackberries in the same way.

Later on, one of the skunks amused himself by starting to dig a burrow under a large rock. He went at it with his fore feet, and his great long claws proved excellent implements for the purpose.

Presently there came across the field an Italian workman, who, from his general appearance, had not been in this country very long, and whose English vocabulary, as I presently discovered, consisted of a few sentences about as complex as "Two fer fife." He looked hard at the skunk and then at me, and then at the skunk again. Then he delivered himself:

"Wat dat?"

"Skunk."

"Wat spunk? Gude feet?"

"Fine," with a nod. (This on the statement of one of our most eminent naturalists, not from personal knowledge.)

"You goin' eat 'im?"

"No."

A look of surprise came over his face, and he stepped quite close to the hole where the skunk was working. Presently the little animal backed out of the burrow to rest or to survey its work, and the Italian saw two things. First, that its skin was of probable value, and, second, that it was a small creature easily overpowered. Then he spoke again, this time with a covetous look on his face:

"You got 'im skin, eh?"

"No."

"Me get 'im."

As to this, he took the last step towards the skunk, which had now returned to his work.

"No, no," I said, rising to my feet to prevent a catastrophe which I felt was imminent, but the Italian mistook my intention. He apparently thought that I wanted to prevent him getting a prize which I had no use for myself, and quickly reached down, and dragged the skunk out by the tail. Now I have known that skunk for a long time, and he is about as good natured as any member of his species which has come under my observation. But he had never been treated like this in his life before, and the next instant the Italian let go of the tail, and was reeling backwards under the effects of his first lesson in American natural history.

AT PLAY IN SAMOA

THE SIMPLE RECREATIONS OF THE ISLAND NATIVES.

Cricket, Marbles and Mumbly-Peg Played by Young and Old by the Simple Folk Stevenson Loved.

Apia, Island of Samoa.—One is almost puzzled to divide the daily life of our ocean neighbor into those accepted allotments, work and play. It is possible, however, that in time even the daily plucking of flowers becomes a task and the few moments required to spend the sleeping moments in the sun or to gather the over-hanging fruit sufficient for the day would use up all of one's surplus energy.

PLAYING MUMBLY-PEG.

As the Samoans are of a simple and childlike disposition, their amusements partake of the same character and it takes but little to delight them. Baseball has not found its way thither, even with the aid of the American, but cricket is their most popular game. There is but little difference made between the sexes in these flowery isles, so that the fairer portion of the community joins with equal fervor in the games. Cricket or cgi-keet, as they term it, is hardly played according to standard rules. To begin with, instead of 11 on a side there may be any number from 10 to 50, or double that number, often one village of 50 or 100 playing against another village of perhaps only 15 or 20. There is no hard feeling, however, and all the bystanders applaud. The game sometimes runs on for two or three days, but is evidently just as interesting in the last contest as in the beginning.

Some enterprising trader has made a neat sum from the introduction of marbles. This fascinating pastime struck a most responsive chord in the tropic breast, for wherever you go you see groups of men, women and children standing about in excited groups or kneeling at the game. It is most amusing to see a stalwart chief come strutting by, and catching sight of some favorite opponent, stop, produce a handful of marbles from the folds of his loin cloth, and squatting upon the ground enter into the game with all the zest of the 10-year-old.

It frequently happens that the players will congregate in such numbers in the public thoroughfare that the native police will come up, confiscate some of the marbles and disperse the crowd. I was quite interested with the promptness with which the attention to this duty until one day I discovered him with a few of his cronies having a quiet little game with the confiscated marbles. There is never any trouble nor violence and the games go happily on.

Across from the hotel is a large native hut which contains several generations and seemingly untold visitors and relatives. Here all sorts of games are hourly in progress, but the most interesting is that played by the hoary-headed grandsires. Two old wrinkled men will sit for hours over a game of small stones, similar to that youthful delight, "jack stones." Here also may be seen nearly every day an old man crouched opposite to an equally old tremendously fat woman and with a little knife they will play mumbly-peg for hours.

It is the most delightful thing to see old and young living on a common basis, everything, even to the games in the street, being shared alike.

CONSIGNMENT OF ODAIE COMING TO UNION COUNTY

GAME WARDEN HAWKINS ARRANGING FOR DISTRIBUTION.

State Fish and Game Warden Charles M. Hawkins, of Elizabeth, expects to have a consignment of quail for Union County, which will be sent to several sections in care of men who will agree to look out for them until the next season's sport arrives.

Warden Hawkins expects the quail will be sent to these parties on or about December 15. Freeholder Noah Woodruff, of Roselle Park, will receive a consignment to liberate at that place. Editor James E. Warner, of Cranford, will receive the birds for that section; Freeholder Elston Darby, of Mountainside, is to receive a shipment; Hotelkeeper Walpole, at Scotch Plains, and James E. Goodwin, at Ash Brook.

Warden Hawkins is arranging with others to have quail shipped to them to liberate.

MRS. MALVINA GILES SUES FOR A DIVORCE

FORMER NEW MARKET WOMAN ALLEGES GROSS CRUELTY.

Mrs. Malvina Giles, of Newark, has commenced an action for divorce against her husband, Joel Giles, a veteran of the Civil War.

She alleges gross cruelty and mentions the fact that he frequently placed her in a chair and kept her there for four hours with a pistol levelled at her head.

The Giles were married in New Market by Rev. Charles T. Little, in 1867 and resided there for many years.

The couple have five children, two of them handsome and well-educated.

LITERARY.

The novel complete of Lippincott's Magazine for December is timely and taking. It is by Alden March, an editor of the Philadelphia Press, and is called "A Darling Traitor." It pictures all the intrigue and human frailties of a great political campaign, and, besides, it tells a love-story most fascinating and most real. The "Darling Traitor" is a fresh youngster who knows the town as only such kids can, and his dareliction wins a husband for one of the nicest girls in recent fiction.

Anne Warner, creator of Susan Clegg, and a favored contributor to the Century and other leading magazines, has written the daintiest of Christmas stories for the December Red Book, under the title "As Queens are Wedsmith." A young mother who is also a literary woman, her publisher, and her little girl, are the characters in the tale, which is bound to please by the charm of its thought and its diction. It is interesting to note that Anne Warner's first novel was "A Puritan under the title "As Queens are Wed," but this name was changed at the desire of her publishers.

"The Despotism of Combined Millions," the second of the series of life insurance articles, by Henry Shedd Beardsley, in The Era Magazine for December, reveals the interesting and astonishing inside details of the interest of the life insurance "combine" in the shipbuilding bubble, in J. P. Morgan's unsuccessful attempt to form a transatlantic steamship trust, and in E. H. Harriman's mammoth railroad enterprise. The article contains, also, other equally startling and interesting features that are now disclosed to the public for the first time. Mr. Beardsley makes the statement unconditionally that the life insurance "combine" is boldly and dangerously violating the laws of the States.

The twenty-one contributions in Leslie's Monthly Magazine for December are as expressive of the real spirit of Christmas as is the gay and attractive cover of the magazine itself. In the list of contents is an account by Dr. Grenfell, the famous Labrador missionary, of his work along that coast and of the heroic deeds of the fishermen and their wives, and an exciting Christmas story by Annie Payson Call about Christmas. The story of the foreign actors and actresses who will tour America this winter, is illustrated with a number of attractive portraits, and the third article about the Theatrical Syndicate, which takes up the dealings of the critics and playwrights with the Trusts, is the best of the series. Besides these there are eight short stories.

This prospectus of the more notable features of the Atlantic Monthly for 1905 is intended chiefly for those persons who are not new subscribers to the magazine. We expect that our present readers will remain upon our subscription list. The Atlantic is confident of the loyalty of its old subscribers. But it would not be an American magazine if it did not want new subscribers—as many as it can possibly secure without lowering its standards of taste or departing from the principles which have made it what it is. The Atlantic is a magazine "devoted" as its cover used to say—to "literature, art, science and politics;" in a word, to the most interesting things in human life. It is nearly fifty years old. It has been edited by some of the foremost American men of letters. It is unsectarian in religion and independent in politics. It prints each month 144 pages of reading matter—made up of timely articles on social, political, and educational topics, biographical and historical papers, brilliant fiction, essays and literary criticism. It is beautifully printed at the Riverside Press, and is sewed so that it lies open like a well-made book. The Atlantic has no illustrations whatever, and will contain none.

COUNCILMANIC "SLATE"

Report That Tyler Will be Head of Police Committee.

DANIEL FOR FINANCE

Bullock Likely to be Chairman of Fire Committee—Gloak to Hold On.

In the re-organization of the Common Council for 1905 there is considerable talk to the effect that among the most important changes will be one in reference to the head of the police committee. Councilman Frank DeW. Randolph has been chairman of this committee for two years, but William S. Tyler, who is now chairman of the license committee, is "slated," according to the opinion of many, to succeed the present chairman. It is said that he has had considerable experience in police matters, and being well versed in the laws governing this branch of the city government, his friends argue that he would be just the man for the position. If Mr. Randolph is removed as the head of the police committee, he may be given the chairmanship of some other important committee.

Mr. Bullock, the second man on the fire committee, is slated for the chairmanship of it, and there is no reason to look for a change in the head of the finance committee. Mr. Daniel is especially fitted for this position, it is argued. He is looked upon as a worthy successor to former Councilman John S. Dumont, who made an enviable record as the head of the finance committee.

As Mr. Gloak has become so well acquainted with the work of the streets and sewers' committee, it is believed that he will be retained as the head of it. There will be two new members of the Common Council, in Charles C. Randolph and H. D. Hibbard, and they will probably be placed on some of the important committees, especially Mr. Hibbard, who is a man of wide business experience. Mr. Murphy is quite likely to be retained as chairman of the lights and trees' committee, and in fact he will probably remain a member of the various committees on which he is now serving.

VAN ZANDT & VOORHEES PURCHASE PROPERTY

FIRM TO ERECT LARGE BRICK BUILDING ON PARK AVENUE.

VanZandt & Voorhees, hay and feed dealers in Park avenue, have purchased from the Estate of Boice, Runyon & Co., a strip of land adjoining their present place of business and running along the New Jersey Central and they will erect a large brick building thereon in which they will continue their business. The property has a frontage on Park avenue of forty feet, a depth of 275 feet and seventy feet in the rear. The railroad company will run a siding into the building.

This change is necessitated owing to the fact that F. L. U. Martin has taken a five-year lease on the property now occupied by VanVandt & Voorhees, which he will use in connection with his automobile business. A. E. Hoagland, the expressman, is the only tenant on the property purchased by VanZandt & Voorhees and he received notice of removal today.

Inspector McCardell to Enforce Law.

As a result of the inspections made by Andrew McCardell, one of the State factory inspectors, changes involving thousands of dollars in expense will have to be made by manufacturers to comply with the law. It is not Mr. McCardell's purpose or desire to work a hardship on any one, but he says that he will insist upon having the law enforced in his territory. He has been obliged to close one or two factories until certain changes are made. In a majority of cases Mr. McCardell finds the owners willing and ready to obey every letter of the law.

Administering Estates.

Letters of administration have been granted in Middlesex county to Mary E. Brouwer, of Dunellen, on the estate of Aaron Brouwer, personally $1,000, and to Seymour L. Shafer, also of Dunellen, on the estate of Fredrick Shafer, personally $50.

FIRE DEPARTMENT NEEDS

Appropriation of $23,000 Is Wanted for Coming Year.

THAT HOSE TOWER

And 2,000 More Feet of Hose Are Among the Urgent Needs.

It is the purpose of those in control of the fire department of the city to make an effort to secure more money for its maintenance next year, if possible. When this year's budget was asked for from the various departments, the sum of $38,000 was asked for the fire department. When this reached the finance committee about $5,000 was cut off, making the appropriation about $33,000. This, it appears, has not been sufficient to properly run the department and meet all obligations, and make the necessary repairs from time to time.

One drawback to the department is the $5,000 which has to come out of the appropriation for fire hydrants, and an effort will be made to have that sum taken out of the general fund. By doing this and allowing the department $33,000 all needs could be met. This year the Common Council attempted to take the hydrant money out of the fire appropriation, but was unsuccessful. No doubt legislative action will be sought to help out the department next year.

Among the present urgent needs of the department at present is 2,000 feet of new hose. The hose now on hand is pretty well worn and if new hose is not purchased this year the Common Council will have to get it early in the coming year. The general equipment of the department is in excellent shape and with the exception of the truck horse recently injured, the equine force is in the best of condition.

Chief Doane would like to see some improvements next year. Among other things he would like to have is a hose tower. For a long time he has felt that the department has needed one to fight fires in the larger buildings, which are frequently being erected about the city. Another thing the chief will endeavor to get is a fire net. He says that the natural risk and danger to a fireman at work on a blazing structure is great enough and all proper safe-guards should be provided.

Still another improvement that Chief Doane has not entirely given up is that of a fire house in the East End of the city. In view of the constant building in that section he says that the need of additional apparatus there is more urgent every day.

LEAL'S 1905 ELEVEN WILL BE A LIGHT ONE

PROSPECTS FOR NEXT YEAR'S TEAM ARE RATHER UNPROMISING.

From the present point of view the football prospects of the Leal's School do not look very bright for next season. They made a good showing this year, and have won the city scholastic championship, but after the 1905 senior class has graduated, unless some new material enters the school, the chances for a winning team are slight.

In spite of the fact that they are looking heavy odds in the face the Leal's boys are determined to put a team on the gridiron next season, and they have elected Russell Lawrence, who played guard on the team for the past year, as captain for next season's aggregation. In addition to Lawrence, the old players who will be in the school next year are Clenney, Guterie, Strong and Manning. Three substitutes on this year's team will be in the field for the 1905 eleven: Howland, Underhill, Howard, and Endicott.

This squad will need upholstering a great deal, as it is lighter than any team which the school has put out for some time, and the boys are in hopes that some "dark horses" will turn up in the ranks of the school, and some unforseen weight will be added to the team. The veterans who graduate from the school this year, and who have helped the eleven to victory for the past season are the following: Roger Wilcox, captain for 1904; Edwin Daniels, the fastest half back that the school has had for three years; Edward Suffern, who has made a capable manager of the team and has played end; Frank Curtis, the right tackle, and William Smith, who has held down the position of center.

J. W. Gavett's holiday sale of china ware makes one of the most attractive and acceptable Christmas presents imaginable. In addition he has all kinds of electrical stands and fixtures for table and reading lamps. An inspection of his store is welcomed.

STREET COMMITTEE WORK

Sycamore Street Widening Petition Given a Hearing.

EAST END FLOODS

Request for Sewer System Through the Martine Tract Brought Up for Discussion.

The whole of last evening was taken up by the Councilmanic street and sewer committee considering three important matters upon which reports will be made at the December meeting of that body to be held Monday night. The question of widening Sycamore street, between Fourth and Sixth streets came before the committee, there being a large number of affected property-owners to protest against the improvement. The ordinance drafted for the widening provided for a street sixty feet wide, and this is considered too much. It is possible that if the street is widened a less number of feet may be decided upon.

D. S. Alpaugh, who owns the property corner of Sixth and Sycamore streets, is the leader of the movement to have the street widened, believing that so important a thoroughfare leading from the railroad station is entitled to this improvement. The street committee made no promise as to what action would be taken.

The question of providing adequate drainage in the flooded district in the East End was another matter to be considered. It will be remembered that a lengthy petition asking the Common Council to relieve this condition in heavy rains have been in the hands of the committee several weeks. A report will be made at the December meeting, and it is believed that the recommendations of the committee will be adopted. It is understood that the report will recommend the location of storm sewers and will also have something to say about the dams in Green brook.

F. M. Wells, who recently acquired a large portion of the Martine tract in the southeastern part of the city, appeared before the committee and asked that provision be made to sewer that part of the city when proposed improvements are completed there. While the committee could not make any promises as to what might be done, Mr. Wells was given assurances that the Common Council would undoubtedly be willing to provide sewers for that portion of the city at the proper time.

The matter of widening and deepening Cedar brook was also considered and it is likely that an ordinance will be presented to relieve the present condition which has been complained about.

VENISON, WILD TURKEY AND A JOLLY GOOD TIME

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM L. SMALLEY ENTERTAIN MERRY PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, of Somerset street, entertained a party of friends at their home Tuesday, with a dinner which was unique because of the distance at which the game was procured. There was wild turkey from the farm of Alfred I. Smalley in North Carolina, and venison steaks from a buck shot by a Plainfielder in Maine several weeks ago. The dinner was a decided success in every way and at its conclusion several hours were spent in song and story.

The menu was as follows:

OYSTERS.
First Mountain, a la Kinsey.
SOUPS.
Hudson Pond Red Snapper.
FISH.
Stony Brook Pickerel.
RELISHES.
New School Hominy. Paid Fire Department.
Voting Machines.
ENTREES.
Venison Steak, Currant Jelly.
Mushrooms, a la Red Peas.
ROASTS.
Wild Turkey, Cheetah Dressing.
Lettuce and Tomato Salad.
DESSERT.
Roquefort Cheese. Toasted Crackers.
Coffee. Cigars.

Among those in attendance were Mayor N. B. Smalley, City Judge William N. Runyon, former Councilman John M. McLoughlin, Leonard Runyon, John V. L. Pierson, Isaac P. Runyon, William Morrison and several others.

On the menu card was this toast:

"To keep my health! To do my work! To live!
To see to it I grow and gain and grive!
Never to look behind me for an hour!
To gain in weakness and to walk in power!
But always fronting forward to the light!
Always and always facing toward the right!
Rebuke, discard, defeated, fallen, wide astray—
On, with what strength I have!
Back to the way."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Dec. 11: "Good and Bad Habits." Rom. viii, 1-15.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES.

We rarely or never realize how much we are the creatures of habit. We of necessity become accustomed to certain acts until they become by frequent repetition almost automatic. A new exertion requires thought and exercise of will, but each succeeding time we do the same operation it requires less of thought and care. So acts crystallize into habits and habits settle into character which becomes the unchangeable basis of destiny.

Habits may acquire a strength which it is difficult to break even before we realize that we have formed them, unless we are constantly careful not to act in any new way unless we are sure we are in the right way.

"There are no trifles in the moral universe of God." A careless compliance with a solicitation to something not quite right commits one to a like course when again asked. Each time it becomes harder to say no. It is always more difficult to get out of a wrong road than to avoid entering it at first.

We can never afford to form a habit we will need to soon break up. At the very best we have no time or strength or capital to waste. We need all our exertions directed to acquiring the helpful. Failure to be helpful in the course we ought to hold may prove fatal to all our prospects at some moment when the unexpected crisis comes.

Two things need to be kept in mind: observe the danger signals and never run by them, and watch the safety signs and make the best speed possible when you have a clear track.

We should ever avoid everything which injures us in body, mind or moral life. Harm to one part of our nature injures all parts. Symmetrical development of all is best. Eating should never run into gluttony since it hurts not only body, but mind and spirit also. On the other hand, every spiritual wrong reacts on the intellectual powers and on the body. Make the body the best possible instrument for mind and spirit, and keep it in its place. Its appetites must ever be held under by reason and right. They must never as hosts overbear the reason and right or ruin follows.

We must acquire right habits of body, right habits of thought and right habits of soul.

All this requires practice long continued. We will be apt to form habits of value for health and mental strength easier than for religious life. Therefore we ought to give the most earnest heed to our soul life lest we let it slip.

Worship and Preaching.

Vinet says, "Preaching is framed into worship, but is not worship." Why is this? Because worship is the answer of man in heart and voice to the entire revelation which God has made of Himself in creation and redemption. Worship in the Bible is the thing which passes from God to man, but always something which proceeds from man to God. Preaching is a very desirable or even indispensable adjunct, for religion must have both the truth of God and the answer of man, and the one is as important as the other. Still it must be borne in mind that, strictly speaking, singing, prayer and the reading of Scripture are the exercises by which we "give unto the Lord the glory due to His name." These constitute worship. And yet how many forget this and make the sermon the principal thing, treating all else as only incidental or preparatory? Yet what can be a more imperative obligation or a more uplifting exercise than the rendering of homage to Almighty God in view of what He is and of what He has done? Rightly rendered, it brings heaven to earth and fits the soul for the everlasting anthem on high.—Christian Intelligencer.

God's Diamonds.

There is a way in which a lapidary tells whether a diamond is genuine or not. He breathes on it, and if the breath lingers there it is a false diamond; if the breath immediately vanish, it is a real diamond. Then he has a grinding process after. So you can tell God's jewel. If the breath of temptation comes on it and soon vanishes, it is a real diamond; if the breath lingers and continues to blur it, it is a false diamond. But better test than all is the grinding machine of affliction. The soul can go through that and keep bright, it is one of God's jewels.—T. De Witt Talmage.

Where We Are Going.

I find the great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving. To reach the port of heaven we must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it, but we must sail and not drift, nor lie at anchor.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The Prayer of Life.

Lead me, O God, in life's brave early day,
While hopes are clear and all the world is gay.
So many hurtful blooms my vision greet!
So many paths diverge to lure my feet
Far from the peaceful, sinless road astray!

And when the morning can no longer stay,
And songs are mute and noontide's fervor, too,
Upon the weary track must fiercely beat,
Lead me, O God!

Nor leave me when the eventide shall lay
Upon life's happy field its vapor gray;
Clasp my hand in Thine more close and sweet
Than Thou hast ever held it, and, while I fear
The night is falling, down the unknown ways
Lead me, O God!

SINGWA THE PRODIGY

PRIDE OF IGOROT VILLAGE AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A Five-Year-Old Boy Wonder from the Philippines Who Has Astonished All with His Precocious Brightness.

The greatest child attraction of the world's fair—the pride and pet of every visitor to the Igorot village—such is Singwa, the five-year-old boy wonder, who has astonished all with his precocious brightness, and holds the record of $24 given to him in a single day by American admirers. Singwa is a wonderful example of the possibilities of the Filipino savage and of the natural ability of the Igorot, in particular, but he is a little more than that, as he is undoubtedly an exceptional child. He was but five years old in August and there has not been an American child visiting the Igorot village who could approach the little savage in wit, fun, sprightliness and real accomplishments. When the American boy in prettily starched sailor suit has been lined up beside the little savage from the Philippines the naturally biased mother of the home product has never failed to admit that the brown-skinned Igorot with no advantages, but a brightly colored cloth about his hips, and a bright mind within his well-shaped little head was more than the equal of the American product.

The surest way to spot Singwa when you enter the Igorot village is to look for the densest crowd about the grounds. Wherever men and women are gathered like a city crowd about a street catastrophe there you are sure to find a spot of Igorot yellow dancing about in the sunshine—the happiest creature at the whole world's fair. An habitual visitor to the village finding Singwa in a ridiculous American boy's suit of large proportions which successfully concealed all his cuteness, queried of Dr. Hunt, the superintendent of the village, "Why have you put those ridiculous clothes on Singwa. Don't you know it takes away all his attractiveness?"

SINGWA AT PLAY.

"Yes," replied the shrewd manager, "and that's just what I want to do. That boy would be pestered to death if I didn't give him a rest once in a while. In his natural state he is entirely too popular for comfort."

Singwa is now an attendant at the Model Filipino school, which holds daily sessions on the Philippine exposition grounds, but long before the school opened he had picked up more English than any of the natives in the village. It is not that Singwa can greet the visitor in English and take a pencil and draw all sorts of caricatures on the visitor's card, but the way he does it that creates astonishment. It is the sly cunning with which he invariably does the unexpected and asks the visitor his own age and name after telling all about Singwa. His first passion was drawing, and when he had learned the alphabet in the model school, his next was writing it on the cards which he sold on the typewriter. Being a Suyoc he does not eat dog, while the much advertised Bontoc in the same village do. If a visitor asks Singwa if he eats dog, in great disgust he points the finger of scorn at the inquisitor and replies: "No, Singwa Suyoc no eat dog. You eat dog."

Singwa draws some remarkable pictures of chickens, wild hogs, and different types of visitors on the souvenir books sold in the Igorot village, and there is always a struggle to get the ones he has signed with his name. He has no pocket in his scanty trousers and so wanders up to the visitor and in a cute tone that is never refused asks for a "pencil." If the visitor he is picturing has glasses, a large hat or other distinguishing mark of attire, he puts it in the caricature and then laughing in high glee points to it and says, "You, you." Singwa is the favorite father or mother, his parents trusting him to the care of C. A. Pettit, who brought the Suyoc Igorots to the fair.

"When he proposed," he said Miss Antique, coyly, "I tried not to let him read my answer in my face."

"Yes," said Miss Critic.

"Yes," continued Miss Antique, with a girlish giggle, "but he seemed to know right away."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning Dec. 11.

Topic.—How to break bad habits and cultivate good ones.—Rom. viii, 1-15.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

The breaking of bad habits and the cultivation of good ones are most desirable achievements. It is, after all, the sum of the practical results aimed at by Christianity. Christ's kingdom exists to dethrone evil and to enthrone the good, and the millennium will be reached when all evil has been overthrown and all the good exists. This was man's original condition when before the fall God looked upon the works of His hands "and behold it was very good." Moral as well as physical goodness was included in this verdict.

The Bible frequently emphasizes the two phases of this topic together. "Cease to do evil, learn to do well," was the injunction in Isaiah to ancient Judah, and we may take it to ourselves. Paul commands, "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." And in the lesson the apostle speaks of Christians as those who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit, the flesh standing for evil and the spirit for good.

But how are we to live a spiritual life instead of a carnal, sinful life? How are we to put out the evil and put in the good? Not by any reliance upon self is not a sure remedy. Personal power is often great in exalting good and dethroning evil, but no man can make himself a perfectly good man or free himself from all sinful habits. Since we must look beyond human power for that which is successful, and we find the remedy in the power of God in Christ. "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God, sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." Conversion is the first step in the substitution of good habits for bad. The soul must be regenerated. Convicted of sin, we must seek forgiveness for our sins, and then, by the grace and power of God, "die unto sin and live unto righteousness."

BIBLE READINGS.

Its Militant Friends.

The following extract is from a recent timely editorial in a Boston weekly:

"From the start Christian Endeavor has been a movement of and within the churches, officered in all its unions chiefly by the pastor and controlled by them in every particular of pledge, constitution, committees and methods. The pastors that believe in interdenominational young people's work, in definite and distinct young people's work and in young people's work based on the solid verities of Christ are many and influential. They have recognised it as their battle, the battle for wise, liberal, progressive, Christian methods of training the young for Christ.

"Never, we think, as during recent months has this friendship of the great body of the pastors been shown so powerfully, readily and helpfully. Readers have noticed in how many directions Christian Endeavor has lately been attacked. But always defenders have arisen in the very denomination from which the attack comes. If it is a speech there are a dozen indignant speeches in reply. If it is a newspaper article the papers are inundated with letters of refutation. And these replies have always been spontaneous, not prompted in any way by the United society office.

"This is as it should be. Christian Endeavor stands for principles that are worth defending. Its fall would mean infinite loss to the church. Its continual progress and wise evolution will mean the progress of the church, because it will mean the progress of her young people. And these militant pastorianism are many, and the workers at Christian Endeavor headquarters are very few, but the friends of Christian Endeavor are very many, and upon them we rely for continued victory."

Never Better Than Today.

Now and then a local Endeavor society gives up the ghost, as it ought to. There are churches where an Endeavor society is as much out of place as a thrashing machine would be in a girls' boarding school. But the majority are never represented by so many societies or so many members as today. And these members were never doing such practical, definite work for Christ and the church as they are doing today. Christian Endeavor is not "passing." Let friends of youthful energy and progress fall in. Others may stand aside and see it "pass."—Rev. Dr. David James Burrell.

Irish Endeavor.

MRS. HALL'S SISTER AUTHOR OF ROMA BEATA

WORK ON THE ETERNAL CITY BY MRS. JOHN ELLIOTT.

Mrs. John Elliott, a sister of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, and a daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, of Boston, is the author of "Roma Beata," which is highly praised by literary reviewers. Mrs. Elliott was formerly Miss Maude Howe, and is a famous beauty. Her portrait in the Corcoran gallery, at Washington, attracts the attention of every visitor. Mrs. Elliott is well known to Plainfield people, having made addresses here on several occasions. At Mrs. Rowland Cox's, on West Seventh street, she gave a talk on "Gen. Booth and the Salvation Army" and has also appeared before the Monday Afternoon Club and at Miss Kenyon's Seminary. At present she is living in New York.

Jeannette L. Gilder, the editor of Critic, says of Mrs. Elliott's latest work:

"This delightful book consists of a series of letters from the Eternal City, most of which have been published in the leading magazines. The book is illustrated with drawings made by Mr. John Elliott, the husband of the author. Mr. Elliott was commissioned by the Boston Public library to paint some of its decorations, and he took a studio in Rome for that purpose. The Elliotts knew everybody worth knowing in Rome in fashionable as well as artistic circles. Mrs. Elliott attended a ball and was bebuubbled with the queen, on the one hand, and gave charming little dinners to distinguished artists on an improvised roof garden opening out of her husband's studio. One can see in reading this book that Mrs. Elliott's sympathies are with the government. She thinks that the people are much better off new than they were before, and that it is better that they should be educated than to grow up in the ignorance that so long surrounded them."

NOVEMBER WEATHER WAS OF ALL VARITIES

AVERAGE TEMPERATURE AND RAINFALL SOMEWHAT BELOW THE NORMAL.

November, the month generally associated with cold rain and buckwheat cakes, treated Plainfielders to a great variety of weather, according to Observer Neagle. There were cold days, warm days, rainy days, several foggy ones and .06 of an inch of snow, to say nothing of a sleet storm that dropped around on the 18. There were but seven clear days, fifteen partly cloudy and eight cloudy, during which rain fell. The mean temperature for the month was 3.1 degrees below the normal, while the precipitation was 0.43 inches below the normal.

The detailed report for the month is as follows: Highest temperature 61, date 1 and 4; lowest temperature 19, date 29; mean temperature for the month 39.1; mean maximum temperature for the month 47.8; mean minimum temperature for the month 30.4; greatest daily range of temperature 22, date 11; total precipitation for the month 2.27; greatest precipitation in twenty-four hours 1.35, dates 13 and 14; date of sleet 18; dates of fog 3, 4, 29; dates of Lunar halos 17, 28.

C. W. M'CUTCHEN BOUGHT BLOCK ON PARK AVENUE

TRUST COMPANY ONLY GOT RANDOLPH AND FORCE PROPERTIES.

It has been learned through investigation that The Plainfield Trust Company only purchased the Randolph property as the corner of Park avenue and Second street, and the Force property directly in the rear, upon which will be erected the new banking institution. The other property on Park avenue, extending from the Randolph building to the Boice, Runyon & Co., estate, was purchased by Charles W. McCutchen, of North Plainfield, who is a director in The Plainfield Trust Company. It is his purpose to eventually improve this property with modern buildings. For the present nothing will be done toward tearing down the old dwellings.

The Plainfield Trust Company is making progress in preparatory work for the proposed new building which will probably be started early next year.

This is just the season for warm gloves and O. M. Dunham, of Park avenue, has a full line that will surely please you. He also keeps a complete stock of men's furnishing goods, of the best quality and the prices are right.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETS

Members Discuss Several Important Municipal Problems.

BETTER STREET LIGHTS

Reports on Trolley Extensions and the Permanent Pavement Question Again Agitated.

Arousing from a lethargy of three months, the city Board of Trade met Thursday and discussed several municipal problems, among them are lights, permanent pavements and street railway extensions. The first named was taken up in detail and although the matter was recently agitated and then dropped, it was the prevailing opinion that something should be done leading to better illumination for the business district. [Remarks were made by E. A. Laing, Harry Runyon, Charles W. Runyon and others, all of whom mentioned the fact that the absence of up-to-date lights is quickly noted by strangers and that the increased traffic demands them. It was pointed out that the erection of four lamps on the east pattern on East Front street, by Woodbell & Martin, shows that this firm realizes the need and that it is seeking to overcome a lack of municipal progression that should be attended to by the Council. The opinion prevailed that cheaper rates could be secured at the present time than when the question was first agitated and Charles W. Runyon was appointed a committee of one to confer with the electric light officials.

Harry C. Runyon gave an extensive report on trolley matters in which he stated that the Public Service Corporation has been blocked in its effort to get a line through to Metuchen because of property owners' opposition. Consents have been secured as far as Oak Tree and the road will probably be extended to that point within a year and then stop while negotiations are pending for a private right of way. This plan has already been resorted to but land values soared so high it was declared out of the question.

Mr. Runyon said that a route to Metuchen is of more importance to Plainfield than ever before as the "fast line" is being constructed through that way from Elizabeth and with its completion this city will be cut off from the express service. He declared, however, that the Arlington avenue route would be extended to the Driving Park in the spring and that the Public Service has its eye on a route running from the present terminus at Monroe avenue through to South Plainfield.

The permanent pavement question was brought up by Harry C. Runyon, who has been investigating methods in other cities for the past few months. He asserted that places much smaller than Plainfield are far ahead of it in this respect and that many more are waking up to the fact that it is a waste of money to put down macadam where there is heavy trucking constantly going on. It was decided to take up the matter in detail at another meeting, when if possible, an expert on pavements will be secured to speak.

As the annual meeting takes place on January 5 next, it was decided to make it a special occasion. E. A. Laing, C. W. Krause and Charles Runyon were appointed a committee to prepare a programme and provide refreshments. W. K. Cansbrook and R. P. Bache, both connected with the Public Service Corporation, were elected to membership, and George H. Patterson, who is soon to remove to California, tendered his resignation. The question of the annual dinner was touched upon and though no plans were laid, it was decided that it should be given as usual.

MISS H. E. WEBSTER DEAD.

Devout Christian Dies From Pneumonia.

After an illness of one week with pneumonia, Miss Hannah E. Webster, one of Plainfield's oldest residents, died at her home on West Second street Thursday afternoon. Sixty-three years ago Miss Webster was born in the little house on West Second street, near New street, where she has lived all her life, and in which she passed away.

Miss Webster was a member and a regular attendant and active member of the First Baptist church. Her parents have been dead several years, the only surviving member of her direct family being her brother, Daniel Webster, who lives at the Webster home, and is a harness maker in the employ of John Worth. She also leaves two nephews, George Webster, of this city, Daniel Webster, of New Providence, Mrs. Harding, of New York, is a niece of the dead woman.

If you have never patronized Timbo's restaurant on North avenue, you have no idea what an excellent meal is obtainable there day or night. It is just the place also to get a business man's lunch. You will find the food all right and the service perfect.

HYDE'S TAXES TO BE CUT

Both Assessor and Committee Deny Responsibility.

DISPUTE SETTLED

State Board of Taxation to be Asked to Make Reduction of $4,000.

With all the interested persons in attendance and a crowded lobby, the inquiry into the Hyde assessment increase before the Borough Council, last Friday, narrowed down to a "Katy did," "Katy didn't" episode. Assessor Cooley, fortified with books and a plan of defense, said the Councilmanic committee had ordered $4,000 additional value put on Frederick Hyde's property; the Councilmanic committee insisted that Mr. Cooley had done it of his own accord; Mr. Hyde said Mr. Cooley had told him the Council had ordered it and a lot of questioning by Mayor Smalley and Counsellor Reed only served to bring out the fact that Councilmen Arnold, VanArsdale and VanWinkle said Mr. Cooley was the cause of it all and Mr. Cooley said that these same three were the guilty parties.

The matter might have ended there but for Councilman Lee offering a resolution that the State Board of Taxation be asked to restore the Hyde assessment to the old figure and this was carried. The appeal will have to be made through Mr. Hyde and he announced that he would do so at once.

In beginning the inquiry, Mayor Smalley briefly related the facts of the case, stating that without his knowledge Mr. Hyde's property on Norwood avenue had suddenly been jumped $4,000 in assessing value while there had been no improvements to warrant it. Mr. Hyde did not go before the Commissioners of Appeal to object because Assessor Cooley told him the Council had ordered it done and he thought there was no use. He afterward met the mayor on the street and then spoke of the matter, this being the first that he knew of it.

"I told Mr. Hyde," said the mayor, "that I believed in his stand and saw no reason for the raise, especially as he had just paid into the borough treasury the sum of $1,800 toward macadamizing Norwood avenue. This was an improvement to be sure, but it did not benefit his property any more than it did many others in that section. I believe the assessments on North Plainfield real estate are higher than any properties in many other parts of the county and the assessor and Council should attempt to keep valuations down. I was not present when the assessor's books were gone over and I did not even discuss the matter informally with the committee that did the work."

Mr. Hyde when called upon, simply said of the increase and how Mr. Cooley had informed him it was the Council that had seen fit to put on the $4,000.

"It is my intention to improve the property in that section," he said, "but as yet I have done nothing beyond cutting a road through and adding to macadamize Norwood avenue. It seems to me it is detrimental to my own interests to put roads through if I am to judge by this increased valuation."

Assessor Cooley was then asked to present his side of the case and he replied by saying:

"I have been accused of stating falsehoods. Under the circumstances I should first like to have it proved that I committed a falsehood before saying anything in defense."

This led to a statement from Mr. Arnold in which he declared that as he was going over the assessor's books in company with Councilmen VanArsdale and VanWinkle he noticed the $4,000 Hyde increase. When Mr. Cooley was asked about it he explained that up to that time the Hyde property had been taxed on Belmont avenue and that it had been transferred to Norwood avenue, the streets running parallel and but 150 feet apart. At this juncture Mr. VanArsdale said all three councilmen agreed on passing the assessment as it was set forth and Mr. Arnold then continued:

"The assessor is elected by the people to assess property and he should have the proper judgment to do it. It's his business and not ours and that is why I am willing to confirm."

Mr. Cooley then gave his explanation, which in brief was that Mr. Arnold had ordered the assessment on Norwood avenue because the borough had expended money in repairing it. In answer to a question put by Councillor Reed he said the $4,000 had been suggested by him after the councilmen had indicated where certain plots of ground should be increased in this aggregate. He exhibited his books and pointed out where the alterations from his original figures had been made. Continuing the explanation he told how Norwood and Belmont avenues were adjacent to each other and how it was that in previous years no Norwood avenue assessment had been made.

Mr. Lee's resolution ended further discussion but before adjourning Mayor Smalley said:

"I hope the assessor will try to keep down valuations in the borough as these increases are detrimental to property interests. Mr. Cooley's suggestion that the Council take exact note of all increases is a good one but at the same time, the elasticity of the assessment law admits of a wide range in value and it's all according to how it's being done. The law says it must be fixed on property at 100 per cent., but whether this is done depends on the assessor and in what part of the county he is."

AFTER TWENTY YEARS RETIRES FROM BUSINESS

JOHN H. DOANE TO DISPOSE OF HIS SHOE STOCK,

John H. Doane brother of Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, one of Plainfield's best known merchants, having been engaged in the shoe business here for himself for twenty years, has decided to retire for the present after he disposes of his stock at his store corner of West Front street and Madison avenue. A. E. & A. L. Gildea, formerly of Bound Brook, where they conducted a boot and shoe business, and for the last three years manufacturers of men's pants in this city, have leased Mr. Doane's store and they will take possession about January 1.

Mr. Doane does not know at present just what he will do after January 1, but he has several things in view. His idea is to engage in some business where he is not so closely confined as he has been troubled with insomnia and it has commenced to work on his nervous system. Mr. Doane will start his sale the last of next week and continue the same until the new firm takes possession the first of the year.

Golf Course Will be Open.

It is officially announced that the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club links will be kept open for play this winter. Except when the ground is very soft, the regular putting greens will be in commission. For the convenience of members, the caddy-house will be kept open and heated on Saturdays and legal holidays.

Extensive Improvements.

Extensive improvements are being made at the offices of the Sabbath Recorder on Madison avenue. The offices are to be thoroughly renovated, painted and papered and otherwise put in first-class condition.

CHURCH BAZAAR TO BE GIVEN AT PARK CLUB

EVENT PLANNED FOR EVENINGS OF DECEMBER 14 AND 15.

A bazaar is to be held at the Park Club on Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 14 and 15, the proceeds to go towards reducing the mortgage on the rectory of the Holy Cross church. A dinner is to be served both nights, consisting of three substantial courses. Mrs. Johnson, the club caterer, has charge of the kitchen, which insures a superior meal.

The general idea of the bazaar is to divide it up into booths; an art booth, fancy work, pillow booth, groceries, toys, candy, flowers, in fact everything that will interest Christmas shoppers. The stores in New York as well as those in Plainfield have, besides giving liberal donations, placed many attractive Christmas novelties to be sold on commission. A. A. Vantine is to have a booth entirely devoted to their beautiful Oriental things. Huyler's candies will be sold at one of the booths.

Forsyth will have a booth filled with latest styles of neckwear, collars, cuffs and gloves, which will appeal to men attending the bazaar. One of the leading importing wholesale houses of New York, has agreed to send an exhibit of Oriental rugs to be sold at unusually low prices. The bazaar is to have many attractions for amusements alone. The stage at the club is to be turned into a "Little Pike" with side shows, fake art gallery and very clever ventriloquist with his Punch and Judy show. Music has been secured for both nights and afternoon.

The bazaar will give every one in Plainfield an opportunity to do Christmas shopping easily, cheaply and help a good cause, besides having a good meal and a delightful time.

Faber's Entries Win Prizes.

Secretly Wed.

Miss Rose Divver and John Harkens, both of this city, were married quietly at St. Mary's church on Thanksgiving night. Father Egan officiated. They announced their secret Tuesday.

ARBITRATION PACT.

Anglo-American Peace Treaty Far Reaching.

NATIONS SHOCKED BY WAR'S HORRORS

Sir Thomas Barclay, Prominent English Worker For Peace, Gives His Views of Present Conditions.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—In discussing the prospect of the Anglo-American arbitration treaty Sir Thomas Barclay, who has been prominently identified with the work of promoting amity between nations, has stated as follows:

"It is quite possible that the treaty under consideration will be more far reaching than the Anglo-French treaty. The treaty of 1897 provided for the settlement of all difficulties between Great Britain and the United States without exception by arbitration. It need hardly be expected that the new treaty will be in exactly the same terms as that signed by the late Lord Pauncefote and Secretary Olney, but it is most desirable that a treaty between peoples speaking the same language and having practically the same form of procedure should go a step further than the Anglo-French treaty. A good loan from the treaty of 1897 would be the clause providing that if one of the parties raises the objection that national honor or vital interest is involved the arbitrators should consist of an equal number of the nationality of the parties involved and that if the decision is given by a bare majority it should become final if not protested within three months. The reference to arbitration of the Alaskan question showed that some such clause is quite workable.

"The treaty of 1897 was defeated by twenty-six senators, many of whom were influenced by Michael Davitt to believe that such a treaty would delay the solution of home rule for Ireland. Today no one can possibly couple the question of home rule with the question of adopting peaceful, businesslike methods for dealing with international difficulties. If the majority of the United States senate should thwart the progress of arbitration today, when the minds of all the parties involved are the horrors of the war in the far east and when all realize how indispensable it is to promote pacific methods of settlement of difficulties between nations, there would be an outcry throughout the world and the senate would be disgraced in the eyes of all mankind. I know positively that several senators who voted against the treaty of 1897 will now vote for the treaty of arbitration. I would cite the case of Senator Morgan of Alabama, who told me he had altered his views since 1897. I am perfectly sure that Senators Money and Bacon are now good friends of the treaty."

Burglars Blow Up Bank Safe.

METAMORA, Mich., Dec. 7.—With five heavy charges of nitroglycerin a party of six or eight burglars wrecked the safe in the Bank of Metamora. The explosion awakened citizens of the village, and a number of them rushed out armed with revolvers. Several of the robbers were on guard outside the bank, and as the citizens approached they gave the alarm and, with the men in the building, started for the railroad tracks. A number of shots were exchanged between the robbers and citizens, and one of the robbers is supposed to havebeen wounded, as a trail of blood was found along the route that followed the tracks. The men boarded a passing freight train and escaped. No money was secured.

Think They Have "Mr. Dove."

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The South Chicago police believe they have the mysterious Mr. Dove, or Hugg, supposed to be the slayer of Chauffeur Bate. William Knight and Marion Knute were arrested on a charge of stealing two automobiles, and it is said that Knight has not only the description of the man wanted for murder, but that he operates in the same manner. According to the police, Knight and Dove, or Hugg, are of the same height and weight and are alike in every respect save in clothes.

Roumanians Accept Peace Proposals.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Dec. 7.—Speaking in the senate, the foreign minister announced that the government had received from the United States with much sympathy an invitation to partake in a second peace conference at The Hague and that the Roumanian government only awaited details of the programme and the place and time of the meeting to give full adherence to the proposal.

Want a Million and a Half.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The estimates of appropriation submitted for the territory of Hawaii by Governor Carter and forwarded to congress by Secretary Shaw are as follows: Dredging Honolulu harbor, $250,000; refunds to terminal island, $17,000; federal building for Honolulu, $1,000,000; federal building at Hilo, $100,000.

Weasel Was Released.

FRANKLIN, N. H., Dec. 7.—Medical Referee A. B. Carr, who has been holding an inquest on the death of Mrs. Fannie A. Davis, whose body was taken from a burning tenement house here, has returned a verdict of death from natural causes. Bert Wescott, who has been held as a witness in the case, was released.

Arsenal Stores Gutted.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Dec. 7.—The stores of the Rock Island arsenal have been partly gutted by fire here. The loss is about $50,000.

THE CLIMAX NOT YET

Federal Officer Did Not See Andrew Carnegie.

MRS. CHADWICK LEAVES HER HOTEL

Mysterious Box Said to Have Arrived at New York Containing Securities Valued at $5,000,000—Lawyers Do Not Fear Arrest.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The expected has not happened in the Chadwick case and all predictions proved at fault when at a late hour it was announced that no conference between federal officers and Andrew Carnegie had been held at the latter's home.

This turn was surprising, for Mr. Carnegie had announced in the course of the day that he would be glad to receive a federal officer, and it was supposed that F. F. Oldham, representing the comptroller of the treasury, would meet him last night and that the matter of the Chadwick notes, alleged to have been given Ira Reynolds of Cleveland and said to bear the name of Andrew Carnegie, would be discussed.

Stories of a possible arrest in the case were still current this evening, but so far as known no warrant has been issued.

That the Chadwick case is rapidly nearing a climax is the conclusion reached by those interested, and new and startling developments are shortly expected. A dispatch from Elyria, O., says:

"Judge Washburn has called a special grand jury at the request of Prosecutor Lee Stroup of this (Lorain) county to inquire into the Oberlin bank failure. The jury will be drawn tomorrow morning. An effort will be made to discover if any crimes were committed which come within the jurisdiction of the court. It is reported that the action of Prosecutor Stroup was taken upon the request or complaint of Andrew Carnegie. Subpoenas have been issued for President Beckwith and Cashier Spear of the closed Oberlin bank to appear before the grand jury to testify."

There arrived in this city almost simultaneously Ira Reynolds, secretary and treasurer of the Wade Park Banking company of Cleveland, O.; Andrew Squire, a lawyer of Cleveland; Robert Lyons, receiver for the Citizens' National bank of Oberlin, O., and F. F. Oldham, an attorney connected with the government banking bureau.

Mr. Reynolds is supposed to have with him a mysterious box containing $5,000,000 in securities. He declined to talk regarding his mission. Mr. Lyons, it has been reported, has in his possession two notes, one for $500,000 and another for $250,000, alleged to bear the signature "Andrew Carnegie." He was noncommittal when asked if he intended to see Mr. Carnegie. Messrs. Reynolds and Lyons held an earnest consultation.

Mr. Lowery, counsel for H. B. Newton, the Brookline millionaire, who was to leave for Boston, has deferred his departure because of unexpected developments which he says have just taken place.

Edward W. Powers, Mrs. Chadwick's lawyer, spent an hour with his client at the Holland House and when asked later if he had ever seen the note for $500,000 said he signed "Andrew Carnegie" declined to answer.

He admitted he had been to Oberlin, O., with Mrs. Chadwick and that he knows C. T. Beckwith, president of the Citizens' National bank of that place, but declared he is not the New York lawyer referred to in Beckwith's confession.

Mr. Powers said he hadn't thought about Mrs. Chadwick's arrest. He said all her debts would be paid in full and that she has more than $1,000,000.

Beckwith says he was induced to give Mrs. Chadwick more than $500,000 on notes bearing the name of Andrew Carnegie.

Mr. Carnegie when seen reiterated his denial that he had signed any notes and added, "If any United States government official will come to see me he will receive a very courteous reception."

Mrs. Chadwick left her apartments at the Holland House at 10 o'clock last night and took up quarters at the New Amsterdam hotel, at Fourth avenue and Twenty-first street. She was closely followed by two secret service men. Her son and maid accompanied her. Apparently she was in good health.

George W. Ryall, also of the Newton counsel, returned to his home in Passaic, N. J., last night after a day of conferences with those interested in the case in New York. He said he had seen Mrs. Chadwick twice, but as to the subject of their talk he refused to make a statement.

He also said that he knew nothing regarding the notes bearing Andrew Carnegie's name nor of any conference in connection with them.

Mr. Ryall said that Mrs. Chadwick showed no apprehension of arrest or in regard to the outcome of her difficulties.

Frederick F. Oldham, representing the office of the comptroller of currency in the Chadwick case, returned to Washington last night from this city, where he spent the day in connection with the case. Mr. Oldham will make a report to Comptroller Ridgely today.

Denies Dissatisfaction at Awards.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 7.—In a reply to the letter of Thomas H. Carnes, president of the national world's fair commission, mailed last night, Major J. G. Pangborn, president of the United Exhibitors' association, declares that no dissatisfaction of importance with the findings of the juries on awards had come to his notice.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, of Norwood Avenue, Celebrate Event.

Together with a large number of friends and relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, of Norwood avenue, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding Thursday evening.

Shortly after the arrival of the guests a dinner was served, at the conclusion of which Mr. Bennett started the evening's programme with a humorous song. The remainder of the evening was spent with music, and recitations. Among those who took part was Miss Florence Bennett, the soprano soloist of Trinity church, who rendered several solos in a delightful manner. Mr. Young, a prominent tenor, also sang, while Mr. Hargraves' humorous recitations were most enjoyable.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett received many costly silver presents in token of the good wishes of their numerous guests.

MISS EDITH FISK'S DEBUT

Brilliant Reception in Honor of Mrs. Fisk's Daughter.

CHARMING FUNCTION

Lavish Profusion of Floral Decorations at Affair Attended by Exclusive Society Folk.

Miss Edith Fisk, daughter of Mrs. Chapman Fisk, was presented to society at a charming reception given Friday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock at the Fisk home on West Seventh street. It was the second society event of the season, closely following the brilliant coming out party for Miss Virginia Hegeman, at the Park Club. Yesterday's affair was largely attended by society folk from Plainfield and North Plainfield and many distant points who welcomed the fair debutante in hearty fashion.

The home was lavishly decorated with flowers, there being a profusion of roses, violets, orchids, carnations and smilax, all of which were attractively arranged and banked in the reception hall and dining room. Miss Fisk was the recipient of numerous floral gifts, many being American Beauty roses and violets.

Mrs. Fisk and her daughter were both gowned in white silk and assisting them in receiving were Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Charles Joel Fisk, Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Mrs. David H. Rowland, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Virginia Hegeman, Miss Grace Kaufman, Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Georgiana H. Smith, of this city; Miss Elizabeth Richmond, of Scranton, Pa., and Miss Regis Smith, of Philadelphia, all of whom were beautifully gowned.

During the hours for the reception Austin's orchestra, of Brooklyn, discoursed a fine programme of music.

Following the reception a dance was given at the Casino in honor of Miss Fisk, where even a large number of guests were present than at the afternoon affair. The assembly room was resplendent in decorations consisting of varied colored streamers suspended from the center of the hall, and beautiful flowers were banked about the stage. The flowers included roses, palms, orchids and carnations. Behind this bank of flowers was seated the orchestra which gave an attractive programme of music for the dances.

There were guests at the dance from New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Savannah, Boston and Woodstock, Vermont, besides those from this city and the borough. Altogether the affair was one of the most brilliant of the kind held here in several years, bringing together so many prominent society people. Miss Fisk is a favorite among the members of the younger society both here and in New York, as the honors bestowed yesterday afternoon and evening attested. A great many of those who attended Miss Hegeman's debut a week ago were numbered among the guests at yesterday's affair.

MISSIONARY WORKERS HEAR GOOD REPORTS

YOUNG WOMEN'S MISSION BAND OF TRINITY CHURCH MEETS.

Interesting reports were received at the monthly meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, held Friday afternoon, in the lecture room of the church. The committee on domestic missions stated that a box of useful articles, valued at $35, had been sent to a Sunday-school in Michigan.

Mrs. T. S. Cutler, chairman of the entertainment committee, reported the net proceeds from the supper recently given, to be $42. Mrs. H. F. Crawford, who was a delegate to the anniversary exercises of the Woman's Executive Committee of the Board of Domestic Missions, gave an excellent report on that meeting held in the Madison Avenue Reformed church, New York. Mrs. Cornelius Schenck supplemented Mrs. Crawford's report by a few remarks bearing on the meeting.

It was suggested that members of the band who are sending regularly magazines to missionaries, remember them at Christmas time with a letter or a souvenir card of Trinity Reformed church.

Funeral of Miss Webster.

The funeral of Miss Hannah Webster, who died Thursday, was held from her late home on West Second street Saturday afternoon. Miss Webster was one of the oldest and most faithful members of the First Baptist church, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Chambliss officiated. He spoke briefly of the noble, Christian life which Miss Webster had lived, and of her faithful regular attendance at church. At the conclusion of the service the body was interred in Evergreen cemetery.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Corner the Union, as Well as Its Limitations as Is Its Authorities."—Madison.

UNITED MISSIONARY WORK

Annual Union Praise Service at Crescent Avenue Church.

DR. MACKENZIE'S TALKS

Prominent Speaker Said Subject of Missions Should Not Be Divided.

That the subject of missions should not be divided, as widely as it commonly is, by the terms home and foreign, was the substance of Dr. Robert Mackenzie's talk at the annual Union Praise meeting of the missionary societies of the Crescent Avenue church yesterday afternoon. "Without foreign missions there could be no home missions," the speaker said, "and in actual work the two branches are closely allied and firmly united."

Yesterday's meeting is the only one in the year in which the two societies of the Crescent Avenue church unite in a Praise service, and it was largely attended by members of both the home and foreign departments as well as representatives from the First Presbyterian church. The meeting was opened with a short devotional service led by Mrs. Israel Pierson, the president of the Home Missionary Society. Following this service, Rev. Robert Mackenzie, D. D., of the Strangers' Presbyterian church, New York, was introduced as the speaker of the afternoon. Dr. Mackenzie, aside from being a delightful talker and a user of picturesque terms, is well equipped to speak on "Missions."

Dr. Mackenzie has had a great deal of experience in both fields and missionary work, and has studied character and conditions in many countries, especially in the west. His narration of western experiences was decidedly interesting and instructive, and he delivered his address with beautiful ease, and charming manner of expression.

In beginning his remarks, Dr. Mackenzie said that it was not his purpose to give a detailed account of the work of home and foreign missions, as he thought such topics were already familiar to the societies, but his aim was merely to excite interest in the great subject, not as two distinct forces working for good, but as a united body fulfilling the commandment, "Go ye into all the world, and preach."

Much of Dr. Mackenzie's address was historical, though the greater part was descriptive. He spoke of the fact that, though commonly distinguished by the terms "home and foreign fields," there are certain points in this country that are harder to reach, and farther away in period of time, than the heart of Africa. He also emphasized the fact that the tremendous immigration is an extensive opportunity for home missionary work, where the same nationalities are reached in this country in greater numbers than they are available in their own lands. The Greek bandits, Mr. Mackenzie said, are flocking to this country in greater forces than any other nationality, and many of them are the worst characters imaginable.

At the conclusion of Dr. Mackenzie's address a social hour was sent, and tea was served by Mrs. Jacob VanDeventer, Mrs. Frank Hyde and Mrs. Deane VanFleet. A contralto solo by Miss Mary Hubbell was much enjoyed.

CORPORATION TAXES.

State Board of Taxation Fixes Plainfield's Share Which Amounts to $10,825.60.

The apportionment of taxes from the various corporations as compiled by the State Board of Taxation, gives Plainfield the following: Public Service Corporation, street railway, $1,003 13; electric light system, $1,596 70. Total, $2,599 83. New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, $159.53; Plainfield Water Supply Company, $927.24; Postal Telegraph Company, 25. Total franchise tax, $3,686.84. This does not include tax paid by these corporations on real estate.

This tax is paid on the real estate: Public Service Corporation, on assessment of about $200,000, $5,092.53; Plainfield Water Supply Company, on assessment of $51,000, $2,046.94. The total amount received by the city from all these corporations is $10,825.60.

F. L. Montgomery Very Ill.

Francis L. Montgomery, of East Ninth street, worshipful master of Ancher Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., who ran on the Democratic ticket for Councilman a year ago, was taken suddenly ill at his office in New York Monday and was hurried to St. Francis Hospital. An operation was performed and though he rallied, his condition has since become critical.

WILL BUILD FLATS.

J. Fred MacDonald to Improve His Property on East Front Street.

J. Fred MacDonald, owner of the business property adjoining his residence on East Front street, which was partially destroyed by fire recently, has the work of improvement well underway. He has adopted plans for the building of two seven-room flats over the store which is occupied by John Brokaw, as a dairy.

A portion of the store front will be used for an entrance to the flats above, while Mr. MacDonald also proposes to place a vestibuled entrance to the store. The flats, which have already been rented, will contain all the modern improvements and will be an addition to the property interests in that neighborhood. The store entrance will be left where it is, the stairway to the flats being placed on the south side of the building.

C. J. BAXTER TELLS OF THE SCHOOL LAW

STATE SUPERINTENDENT EXPLAINS DIFFICULTIES TO ASSOCIATION.

Charles J. Baxter, formerly of this city, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, addressed the County Association of School Boards Monday at the Trenton court house. His subject was "Recent Decisions of the State Department of Public Instruction."

He stated that in the past the boards had had some difficulty in determining whether women had the right to petition a school board to hold a public meeting. Mr. Baxter said that in these instances the women had as much power as men.

He also referred to the misunderstanding existing among boards as to the duty of granting transfers to pupils who live in one district and want to go to a school in another. He said that when a pupil wanted to go to a school in district in which he did not live a transfer could not be granted. The non-resident pupil would have to pay tuition or the board would. The question of paying tuition is optional with the board.

Mr. Baxter said such a decision was made in order that all districts have good school facilities.

The speaker urged the boards to secure well qualified teachers, and after getting them to keep them. He advised them to pay better salaries in order to keep them. The meeting was not very well attended on account of the storm.

BATTLE FETE.

Wants Elizabeth to Have a Gala Celebration on June 8 Next.

General J. Madison Drake, commander of the Veteran Zouaves, of Elizabeth, has started a movement in that city in favor of a big celebration on June 8, which will be the 125th anniversary of the battle of Elizabethtown. On that day, the commissioners appointed by Governor Murphy, under an act appropriating $5,000 with which to mark certain historic places in New Jersey, will unveil a monument at Union Square, which is centrally located in Elizabeth.

This monument, which will probably be in the nature of a properly inscribed tablet, will mark the spot where, in the year 1780, a little band of Colonial troops resisted the advance of the British, under General Sterling, and caused the death of the latter. A tablet will also be unveiled on the spot where the new court house now stands, where there was once a building used for the confinement of prisoners during the Revolutionary War.

A petition will be circulated by General Drake and others interested in the proposed celebration, and the Mayor and the City Council will be asked to arrange for a parade and representation of the battle in the afternoon, with out-door speeches and fireworks in the evening.

Architect Not Engaged.

The Plainfield Trust Company has not yet engaged an architect to make plans for its handsome new building which is going to be erected at the corner of Park avenue and West Second street, neither has it decided on the style of structure to be erected. Nothing in the matter will probably be done until the first of the new year. Work on the building will not be started until spring.

F. J. Smith As Accompanist.

Frank J. Smith, of New York, for many years organist and director of music at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will be the accompanist at the Miller concert at the Casino tomorrow evening.

RICHARD HARDING KILLED

Former Plainfielder Met Accidental Death in Colorado.

DETAILS NOT GIVEN

Dead Man at One Time a Brakeman on the Jersey Central—Brothers Reside in This City.

In a telegraphic despatch from Chicago this morning, William and Edward Harding, of John street, received word of the accidental death of their brother, Richard Harding, a former well known Plainfielder, at Leadville, Col. The information came from another brother, John Harding, and gave no intimation of the cause. The chances are that he was killed in a wreck or by cars as he has been a conductor on a road running out of Denver.

Harding was the son of John Harding, formerly of South Second street, and was widely and popularly known throughout the city. During his early life he was a brakeman on one of the Jersey Central's local passenger trains running out of Dunellen and was about to be advanced to conductor when he decided to go West. His brother John had preceded him and was engaged in silver mining in Colorado and he joined him at a place near Pueblo. They continued together until a short time ago when John moved to Chicago and Richard went back to railroading.

The latter's last visit to Plainfield was made three years ago when he came on through the serious illness of Edward, his brother, remaining until he was fully restored to health. Richard was then a fine specimen of manhood and those who remembered him will feel the shock of his death more keenly. Besides the brothers mentioned, there is one sister surviving, Mrs. John Mitchell, who went from Plainfield to Denver a short time ago.

In his message to the brothers, John Harding announced that he would go to Leadville and have the body brought to this city for burial in the family plot.

FAIR AT HEAVENLY REST A FINANCIAL SUCCESS

WOMEN'S BAZAAR NETTED GOOD SUM FOR THE CHURCH BENEFIT.

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, a fair which was in every way a success was held yesterday afternoon at the parish house. Though the attendance was not as large as it might have been, the financial success of the bazaar is assured by the way in which the attractive articles sold.

The room presented a picturesque appearance, with the tastefully arranged tables, decorated with cut flowers. The fancy work table was the chief attraction, many useful and ornamental articles being contributed. Most of these were disposed of. Presiding over this table were Mrs. J. A. Babcock, Mrs. W. B. Grambatt and Mrs. Sergeson. Mrs. Foster, and the Misses Foster had charge of the candy table, which was another feature of the fair.

The cake table was in charge of Mrs. H. Farleigh, Mrs. Albert Brooks and Mrs. Ludgate. This table together with the ice cream and chocolate tables attracted many of the visitors. The chocolate table was in charge of Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Hawthorn and Mrs. Sutton, while Mrs. B. K. Burr presided over the ice cream. The general committee in charge of the fair was Mrs. O. C. Graves and Mrs. E. E. Brown.

Sensible Winter Conveyance.

Dr. G. W. Endicott, of Park avenue, has a unique arrangement for his buggy which he uses to make calls. The entire front of the carriage is enclosed with glass, while the side curtains are so placed as to make the conveyance almost air-tight. The glass front permits the doctor to always have full view of the roadway, while he is shut off entirely from the wind.

Borough Taxes.

The citizens of the borough are awakening to the fact that there are only a few days remaining before the evening of the 20th when taxes become delinquent and the collector reports that receipts are increasing daily.—Adv.

—Bear in mind that Neuman Brothers receive their vegetables fresh every day. Specials tomorrow: Boston head lettuce, green and wax beans, cauliflower and Brussels sprouts.

RAILROAD MEN SEE BROTHER MASON RAISED

VICE PRESIDENT BESLER AND OTHER CENTRAL OFFICIALS AT ANCHOR LODGE.

The conferring of the master mason degree on Fred T. Dickerson, of this city, by Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., at the communication of the lodge, last night, attracted a number of officials from the New Jersey Central, there being about fifteen visitors from Jersey City and delegations from Cranford and Somerville. Mr. Dickerson is chief clerk to W. G. Besler, of this city, who is vice president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, and among the officials present were Mr. Besler and William McIntosh, superintendent of motive power, together with a number of conductors and engineers.

After the work of the evening there was an informal musical programme, in which William N. Runyon and H. Wilson Derby sang solos, accompanied on the organ by William E. MacClymont. This was followed by a banquet.

CHARLES E. HEPBURN DIES IN THE WEST

FORMER PLAINFIELD DRUGGIST PASSES AWAY SUDDENLY AT TUCSON, ARIZ.

Word was received in Plainfield today of the sudden death at Tucson, Ariz., of Charles E. Hepburn, a former well known Plainfielder and original proprietor of the drug store at Park avenue and Second street, now conducted by Berthold J. Schreiner. He retired as usual last Tuesday night and in the morning his heavy breathing aroused Mrs. Hepburn. A physician was summoned and though everything was done for him, he passed away Wednesday night. The funeral and interment took place at Tucson.

Mr. Hepburn was a native of Canada but had lived in this city many years. Soon after establishing himself in the drug business locally his health failed him and he went west. He was located for a time in California and recently moved to Tucson. Surviving him are a widow and three children, William, Harold and Lucy Hepburn.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS MEET.

Quarterly Session at the First Baptist Church Last Night.

Reports from the various committees occupied most of the time at the quarterly meeting of the officers and teachers of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, held last night. These reports were encouraging and that of the treasurer showed a good balance on hand. The envelope system of giving was considered an excellent one, showing an increase in the contributions as well as attendance of the pupils.

The Christmas committee announced that it was decided to hold the annual entertainment on Thursday night, December 29. Thursday, July 20, was suggested for the annual excursion to Asbury Park and this date will probably be decided upon.

Announcement.

We beg to announce that Antenna Cream (cures pimples) is on sale with the leading druggists.

Mr. J. B. Hatfield, of No. 210 Watchung Avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says:

Nov. 15th, 1904

Antenna Specialties Co.,

Dear Sirs:—For over two years I have been troubled with inflamed and itching blotches on both feet. I have doctored and used any number of preparations which failed to cure. Antenna Cream immediately, after the first application, caused the soreness and itching to cease. After using two fifty cent jars I am cured. I cannot speak too highly of it and recommend it to my friends. Antenna Cream is a necessity in every household. Very truly, (Signed) J. B. Hatfield.

The above is but one of a number of bona fide testimonials received by us from people in Plainfield and in other cities of the United States. Antenna Cream is used for pimples, chapped hands and face, after shaving to stop irritation, inflamed burns and wounds, stings of insects, hives, tetter, saltrheume, acne, eczema, roseoea (red nose), scald-head, ring worm, barber's-itch and all skin eruptions. Two sizes, 25c and 50c. Antenna Specialties Co., Wholesale Department, Jersey City, N. J.

Mrs. Andrew Jennings, of North avenue, is able to be about after a severe illness.

FOR INAUGURATION TRIPS

Union Republicans to Go to Trenton and to Washington.

CO. COMMITTEE MEETS

The Most Imposing Delegation That Ever Left Union Co. Will See Roosevelt Take the Oath.

In addition to the execution of regular post-election business, at the meeting of the Republican County Committee last evening, former Assemblyman Codding, Newcorn and Meeker were appointed as a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of Assemblyman-elect Embree.

With regard to the probability of a special election, it was announced that the question had been submitted to Attorney-General Milton to decide whether the effect in the Legislature will warrant the expense of holding one.

A large delegation of Union County Republicans will go next month to Trenton to attend the inauguration of Edward C. Stokes as Governor. Had it not been for the extensive preparations being made by the Union County Republican leaders for attending the inauguration of President Roosevelt, there would be much greater interest displayed in the affair locally. It is probable that the delegation will be headed by a band of music, and that at least 100 stalwart Republicans will be in line.

The Roosevelt delegation will be the most imposing political turnout that ever left Union County to attend the inauguration of a President or a Governor.

BOROUGH SCHOOL PUPILS PRESENT FINE PROGRAMME

TWO SHORT SKETCHES AMONG THE FEATURES.

The pupils of the North Plainfield High School entertained a large gathering of their friends with a literary and dramatic programme in the assembly room last evening. The features were two short sketches, "The Magic Mirror" and "The Lamentable Tragedy of Julius Caesar," in both of which the participants acquitted themselves admirably. Those who took part in the former were Carl Steiner, Mabel Gano, Emma Van Zandt, Mabel Farise, Mabel Hamilton, Bertha Englehart, Agnes Cooley, Mary Robley, Mary Clark, Josephine Todd, Margaret Rickert, Marion Overton, Florence Fowler and Dorothy James. In the "Lamentable Tragedy" were Stanley Fisher, Laurence Milne, Clarence Haud, George Cubberley, William Bartis, Walter Wisbeth, Robin Hamilton, Arthur Dunning, Maud Emmons, Myra Emmons, Otto Mueck, Carl Steiner and Frank Webster.

Other numbers on the programme were: Violin solos, Frank Malin; vocal solos, Miss Winifred Carroll and Clarence Steiner, and singing by the pupils. Miss Alberta Waterbury acted as accompanist.

G. A. R. ELECTION.

Isaiah L. McVoy Chosen Commander of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73.

These officers for the ensuing year were elected at the regular encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held last night:

Commander, Isaiah L. McVoy; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice commander, William Hand; quartermaster, John Naylor; surgeon, Israel Compton; chaplain, M. C. Dobbins; officer of the day, William C. Smith; officer of the guard, William Day; trustees, William C. Smith, M. C. Dobbins, William Hand; delegates to Department Encampment, Andrew Cox and William Day; alternates, John Naylor and J. Worth Coddington. The officers will be installed at the first meeting in January.

Knights of Columbus Elect.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, elected the following officers at its meeting last evening: Grand knight, A. E. LaPorte; deputy grand knight, Thomas Meany; chancellor, Frank McInerny; recording secretary, Joseph W. Graham; financial secretary, John J. Hines; advocate, Frank Bisso; warden, John Fitzpatrick; physician, W. C. Boone; inside guard, R. H. Birmingham; outside guard, Thomas Carty; chaplain, Rev. J. T. Delghanty; trustees, John J. Kenney, John C. Traynor and Patrick Traynor.

SPINE NOT FRACTURED.

Steady Improvement Noted in Condition of Lineman John Dilts, of Flemington.

John Dilts, of Flemington, at one time employed as a lineman for the Public Service Corporation, and who sustained serious injuries to his back by a fall on East Front street last summer, is still at Muhlenberg Hospital under Dr. Endicott's care. There is slow but gradual improvement in his condition and his physician believes that he may be able to walk at some future time.

It was reported at the time of the accident that the man's spinal cord was fractured, but this does not now seem to be the case. The spinal cord was severely injured and for many weeks Dilts had no sense of feeling below his chest. He is now able to detect the slightest touch and this general sense of feeling is stronger each day.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT LOCAL Y. M. C. A. GYM.

BOYS' AND MEN'S CLASSES WILL GIVE EXHIBITIONS OF THEIR WORK.

Plans are rapidly being put into effect for one of the most elaborate and interesting physical work exhibitions which have ever been conducted under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. The affair will take place on New Year's day, and during both the morning and afternoon, the gymnasium will be opened for inspection, and an interesting programme will be arranged both for the boys' and for the men's classes.

On account of the fact that there will be a Star Course entertainment at the auditorium in the evening the men's class exhibition will be held in the afternoon, and will be one of the best which has been planned for many years. The object of the exhibitions will be to a great extent to show the nature of the daily work which is conducted at the gymnasium. There will be, however, special work and features appropriate to the occasion.

The boys' department exhibition in the morning, in addition to covering the regular class work, will be characterised by special apparatus exercises by the various class leaders, and a basketball game between two picked teams.

In the afternoon, the men's class will hold their regular drill and class work followed by a programme of special events, including mass running and several unique races. There will also be tumbling, and other individual exhibitions. It is expected that Walter MacNaughton, the champion high diver, will be present and will give an exhibition. A basketball game between two picked teams from the members of the men's class will conclude the programme.

ELECTED OFFICERS.

Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Monroe Ave. Church Chose Their Leaders.

The annual election of officers for the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, of Monroe Avenue church, was held yesterday afternoon at a meeting which was largely attended. It was the regular monthly meeting and aside from the election of the officers, a social afternoon was spent. Tea and light refreshments were served by the committee.

Representatives of both the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies were present, and the balloting was as follows: For the foreign society—President, Mrs. Joseph Pierson; vice president, Mrs. Robert L. Lee; treasurer, Mrs. Mansfield Smith; secretary, Mrs. Becker; for the home society—President, Mrs. George Mooney; vice president, Mrs. W. B. Grannell; treasurer, Miss May Brower; secretary, Miss Annie Stafford.

Christmas Cantata at P. H. S.

The pupils of the Plainfield High School have started practicing on the Christmas cantata entitled "The First Christmas," which will form an important feature of the exercises on Dec. 23. The words of this cantata are by Goetze and the music by Barnaby. Charles E. Lewis, the musical director of the Plainfield public schools, is training the pupils in the singing of the selection.

Warning Against Snowballing.

Led on by the result of snowballing in former years, and by accidents which have already occurred this season, Principal I. W. Travel, of the Plainfield High school, made an appropriate address yesterday morning at the chapel assembly, warning the pupils against the danger of throwing snowballs, and cautioning them to refrain from the practice at all times.

STOKES' JOB FOR CODDING

Opinion That Westfielder May Have the Clerkship.

BRIGGS FAVORS HIM

Popular Union County Republican Leader is Non-Committal—Voorhis Doesn't Want the Place.

The main talk in the corridor at the State Capital yesterday was concerning the Clerk in Chancery to succeed Governor-elect Stokes, who will resign before the first of the year. Rumors were thick and interesting. Some of the gossip was that everything was at sea. Those who took this view said that Mr. Stokes had been unable to determine on the man. According to this story, the Governor-elect had offered the place to several men, all of whom had declined. One of the member from Morris said Daniel W. Voorhis, chairman of the Republican Morris County Committee, could be named, but he would not take it. There were those who said that the clerkship had been tendered to Vivian Lewis, of Passaic, and Clinton E. Breckenridge, of Bergen. This was denied. In fact, there was a great deal of this vague sort of gossip.

Those who were not doing much talking, but were evidently pretty well posted, said that Charles N. Codding, of Union, who is the assistant clerk of the Supreme Court, could have the place if he would accept. It was only a week ago that Codding's name was mentioned in one of the Trenton newspapers. It was at once taken up by other papers, and since then there has been a regular Codding boom. One thing is certain, and that is that State Treasurer Briggs, who was chairman of the State committee during the recent campaign, is out and out for Codding. He believes, as do all Codding's friends, that he is in every way competent, and that his long experience and knowledge of State affairs qualify him to take the highest position in Governor Stokes's Cabinet, as it is now called. Whether Codding really desires the place is hard to state, because he modestly declines to express an opinion. In the minds of the old political observers, Codding has the inside track.

Yet, with due regard to all the rumors and reports, it is nearer the truth to say that the newly elected Governor has not yet made up his mind whom he will appoint, as his successor. Is may be Codding, it may be any one of half a dozen well known men, and it may be a man whose name has not been mentioned or thought of outside of Mr. Stokes himself.

SOMERVILLE BEGGING.

Its Public Library Directors Ask Carnegie to Help Pay Off Debt.

At its meeting yesterday the Board of Directors of the Somerville Public Library directed its president, John F. Heger, to write to Andrew Carnegie with a view of getting a gift from him so as to make the library free to all. At present the reading room is free, but those who take out books pay a yearly subscription. An appeal will also be made to citizens of the town to pay off the indebtedness on the library building erected some time since. This structure cost about $6,000 and there still is a mortgage of $1,300 on it. It is believed that with little effort on the part of the directors this can be wiped out.

The Somerville library contains about 6,000 volumes and new ones are constantly being added.

Dinner for Miss Hegeman.

Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Jr., of Stelle avenue, gave a dinner at her home last evening for Miss Virginia Hegeman, who recently made her debut at the Park Club, and among the guests was Miss Edith Fisk, another recent debutante. The decorations were pink, pink roses and American beauty roses being chiefly used on the table. Besides Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ladd, the guests were Miss Virginia Hegeman, Miss Mattie Wadsworth, Miss Edith Fisk, Miss Grace Kaufman, Miss Ursula Howland and J. Whitney Baker, Willard Wadsworth, Joseph Wadsworth, Dr. F. C. Ard; of this city, and Willis Wood, of New York.

No Report From P. S. C.

In speaking about the proposition to place an arc light at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue, Councilman Clarence L. Murphy stated yesterday that the Public Service Corporation has not yet given him the cost for such a light, although it was asked for some time ago. Mr. Murphy will probably present a full report on the matter at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council on Friday night, December 23.

BRAINS AND ENERGY.

A COMBINATION THAT NOTHING CAN KEEP DOWN.

It Enabled Alfred J. Davidson to Rise from a Small Station Agency to the Management of the Frisco System.

St. Louis Special.

Much has been said and written about the wonderful career of Benjamin L. Winchell, president of the Rock Island system, who began his career 20 years ago as junior clerk in the mechanical department of the Hannibal & St. Joseph road with a salary of ten dollars a month. Less known to the world, says G. Troy, a well-known correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, but not less unique is the career of Alfred J. Davidson, who was elected president of the Frisco system at the time Mr. Winchell came into his present position. The Frisco system is about the size of the Rock Island, over which Mr. Winchell formerly presided, and it now embraces the St. Louis & San Francisco, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Evansville & Terre Haute lines, including 7,000 miles of way and branching into 12 states and territories.

Mr. Davidson rose through the nerve-racking way of telegraph operator for many years to baggage master and to his present prominent position by earnest, persistent endeavor at all stages of his career.

He went into the railroad service in 1880 at the age of 16, taking the position of station baggage master on the Chicago & Alton line at Lexington, Ill. With time on his hands he seized his opportunity to master telegraphy. Perhaps he didn't realize it at the time, but he had taken his first step toward the thoroughfare to good luck. When the first vacancy occurred at the little station he stepped into the position as operator and agent. Here might have been a lifetime job, and many a young man would have hung to it with dogged tenacity. But the Cotton Belt offered him a place with a larger opportunity. Without hesitation the stone rolled from the secure little office position in 1884 and went to Cairo, taking a place as foreman on a freight transfer platform. A rushing business at that point furnished him an opportunity to show what he could do. Within a year he was transferred to one of the busiest points on the Cotton Belt line in Texas, where for three years he served in the capacity of operator, train dispatcher and clerk in the general freight office.

ALFRED J. DAVIDSON.
(Rose from Station Agent to Head of Big Railway System.)

The position of train dispatcher was a new one, with prospects. In 1885 Mr. Davidson came to the front in that profession, taking a position of chief train dispatcher for the San Antonio & Arkansas Pass railroad at San Antonio, Tex.

Serving in turn as chief dispatcher and trainmaster, he remained with this railroad for five years, thoroughly acquainting himself with the details of railroad business. When the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe company looked about for a new division superintendent at Fort Worth in 1893 it could find no man better equipped for the place than Mr. Davidson, and he accepted the appointment. From that time his promotion was rapid. On January 1, 1897, he became superintendent of transportation on the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad, on July 1, 1900, was made general superintendent of the same line; and on April 5, 1904, was elected president of the Frisco system.

Mr. Davidson is hard at work daily. He has an office in St. Louis and one in Chicago, and he divides his time between them. That he has made his rise in the short period of 25 years is remarkable; more partly it takes much longer to accomplish such results in railroading. Mr. Davidson is now only 41 years old. Always he has had unusual physical power and endurance; he has had the wisdom to preserve it; he has had the power of concentrating his native strength on his work, and he has kept a keen eye for the best interests of his companies.

A Thread-and-Needle Tree.

The wonders of botany are apparently inexhaustible. One of the most remarkable specimens is the Mexican maguey tree, which furnishes a needle and thread all ready for use. At the tip of each dark green leaf is a slender thorn, needle that must be carefully drawn from its sheath; at the same time it slowly unwinds the thread, a strong, smooth fiber attached to the needle and capable of being drawn out to a great length.

MILLINERY VAGARIES.

A Substitute For the Bandeau—Buttons That Are Fashionable.

An important innovation in winter millinery is a substitute for the bandeau which is worn underneath the brim of the fashionable hat. It is either placed at the back, at one side or around the entire crown, according to the shape trented and the style of the wearer. Now instead of the bandeau a few persons in the flight of fashion are wearing a kind of little lace cap consisting of a center of about three inches across of net or some soft material, with a rather thick quilling or ruching around the edge. The tiny construction is pinned on the hair, and over this the hat is tilted at a becoming angle.

Over a pretty and youthful face a dainty little lace cap or colored ruching coquettishly placed adds a certain charm to the wearer.

Buttons of velvet and cloth are included in the list of smart trimmings, and others with velvet centers and leather rims.

A charming demitoilet gown in white taffeta has a double row of small coral buttons decorating the waistcoat, two larger specimens being repeated on the basque at the back.

The charming hat in the cut is of pale blue beaver, with a band of darker velvet inserted, with embroidery encircling the double crown. Two shaded blue tips droop over the crown at the back, and a third falls over the hair under the brim.

FRILLS AND FRIPPERIES.

Ombre Effects Popular For Millinery. New Embroideries For Blouses.

One of the newest ideas both for gowns and millinery is to use rich colors in shaded effects. In some of the season's tones these are very effective, a new green being especially attractive.

Ombre velvet is made into the most charming blouses either in green, violet or rose shading from dark to pale.

YELLOW SILK TEA GOWN.

A lace yoke and front empiecement with cuffs make the necessary light relief.

In hat ribbons the ombre effects are much in evidence in some of the schemes, different colors even being introduced.

A white linon frock is delightful if it shades from palest pink to deep red at the hem. There is an infinite capacity for the expression of artistic and poetical ideas by means of these shaded effects.

Embroidery is playing such an important part in the world of dress that women who cannot afford to buy the expensive and elaborate embroideries so fashionable just now are making every effort to excel in the art of needlework. Silk embroideries and ribbon work decorate the fronts of muslin blouses, and Arabian work is very smart as a trimming worked in soft silks and gold threads on collars and revers for coats and blouses.

The tea gown illustrated is a stunning affair of yellow silk made with a deep gathered ruffle of white silk muslin strapped with cream lace. This lace forms a square trimming about the low Dutch neck and on the sleeves there is an insertion of the same. The embroidered straps are of red linen, and the girdle is of yellow velvet.

MODES FOR WEE FOLKS.

Brown a Favorite Color For Girls—Boys Will Wear Green.

The latest fashion in millinery for wee girls is the large white felt or colored beaver hat trimmed with clusters of velvet or silk roses. These roses match the color of the little silk pelisse or coat. This particular trimming fashion possesses a definite advantage, the roses being much easier to match than the headgear itself, while a single hat can be made by a change of flowers to do duty with two or three toilets.

Brown is much worn by the nursery folk, and smart little long, loose coats of onion color have shoulder capes of white cloth elaborately braided with black. The deep turned back cuffs are carried out in the same manner. The coat is lined with a soft white pean de soie or taffeta silk.

Little boys' brown hats are frequently trimmed with wide tartan ribbon. Leather is very much used on the small boy's costume, and a Russian blouse suit of hunter's green piped with tan suede is one of the season's favorite designs.

The little frock illustrated is for a girl of twelve years. It is carried out in a rather good sized checked material of a pale clear tan color. The skirt is very original, made up in alternate panels of box plaits with a contrasting one fashioned from a nounce of side plaits bordered and banded with stitched cloth. The waist is laid in three deep plaits running from neck to shoulder and blouses over a brown kid belt fastened with a dull gold buckle. Bullet buttons of gold fasten the waist up the center and meet a tiny chemisette and turned back collar of stitched brown cloth.

The sleeves have a deep cuff of the check and a small divided turned back one of the brown cloth. The neckband is of folded white mull.

FASHION'S FANCIES.

New Styles In Hats—The Corday Toque—Smart Velvet Blouses.

Charlotte Corday hats are a fashionable fad. They are exceedingly becoming to the right kind of model with their full plaited, undulating brims of soft silk or chiffon. The Tam-like crowns are usually of velvet tied about with a twist of ribbon finishing in a long, full bow in front.

Perhaps the newest Corday is a toque shape, the brim banded with velvet edged top and bottom with a narrow plaiting of silk. This trimming is a modish way of bringing a last season's toque up to date if the owner can stand the rather bizarre adornment.

A light felt tricorne may do duty beautifully for a theater hat if turned up with stiff roses or camellias.

Velvet blouses are very dressy and becoming to wear with fine face cloth skirts and are newer and more becoming than silk. The latest fancy is to trim them with straps of cloth. To be smart the blouse and skirt must match in color.

The simple blouse in the cut is fashioned from crepe de chine or soft silk. Corded shirrings form the deep, round yoke and make a pretty finish for the sleeve at the elbow, where a high, tight cuff fastens with small bullet buttons. Over the yoke is an empiecement of stitched material fastened down the yoke depth with buttons. The collar is a high double turnover.

MODISH CONCEITS.

A Hint as to Afternoon Gowns—Some Pretty Winter Petticoats.

A very charming afternoon "at home" toilet consists of a little velvet jacket in a pale shade of turquoise blue. It is tight fitting, with elbow sleeves of the leg of mutton variety, which are cut into tabs over frills of lace. The basque of the coat is cut in the same fashion, the fronts being exquisitely embroidered in a Japanese flower design in pale yellow, blue and orange. The skirt worn with it is of white mousseline de soie decorated with ruches of taffeta forming a kind of scroll pattern.

Some of the prettiest petticoats are of black taffeta with accordion plaited flounces of black chiffon adorned with a colored flower design. Others in burnt copper taffeta are toned down with embroidered motifs of black chiffon and lace.

Petticoats in subdued tartans are still to be seen, the brighter plaids being little used for this purpose.

The silver hat in the picture is of light tan mousseline laid in soft folds and edged about the brim with dark green velvet. A twist of the mousseline encircles the crown, at the top of which is another band of the green velvet. Under the brim is a wood colored rose, a most unnatural though artistic decoration. Through the crown at one side is stuck an exquisite long green plume.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Trimmings For Costumes—The New Muff—A Novelty in Velvet.

Very lovely evening gowns are made of black chiffon adorned with medallions of lace, which are further beautified with silver sequins. A pretty fancy is to outline the medallions with beads or paillettes, these latter laid on one over the other in a continuous circle.

Tucks in a variety of different widths from the minutest "pin tucks" are very much used on the gowns of today. The wide religieuse tuck is to be seen on a number of taffeta frocks, and in cases where the taffeta is changeable the tucks are cut on the cross and applied separately. This cutting gives them a different coloring from the rest of the dress, and the effect is very striking.

Some of the newest muffs are almost in the shape of a tea cosy, being very large and soft and quilted underneath, where the fur is lined with chiffon or satin. The muff itself is hidden behind bows of soft colored ribbon.

A novelty among the smartest silk velvets is an embossed satin spot about the size of a pea, which is of a darker shade than the groundwork. In some cases it is of quite a different color from the velvet and is outlined with a narrow rim of white.

The chic dancing dress pictured is of blue chiffon taffeta. About the skirt is a plaited ruffle, finished at the bottom with wide satin ribbon. Heading the ruffle is a band formed of tucked silk edged with black lace insertion. The banded effect is further emphasized by two graduated pieces of lace applied above the band. The baby waist is gathered in to a girdle and is sleeve at the elbow, where a high, tight cuff fastens with small bullet buttons. Over the yoke is an empiecement of stitched material fastened down the yoke depth with buttons. The collar is a high double turnover.

THE REDINGOTE AGAIN.

The Separate Coat in Fad of the Season—Peacock a Smart Color.

The return of the old fashioned redingote is the sartorial novelty of the season for out of door wraps. The old lines are preserved in most instances, with a few modified touches. The new redingote fits close to the figure in the back and at the sides, and a full basque is sewed on where the waist terminates instead of over the hips.

Velvet redingotes are exceedingly smart worn with cloth skirt that exactly matches. They usually have a fancy silk waistcoat of silk embroidered in elaborate sprays of flowers in shaded silks and wools or conventional designs of all descriptions.

The old superstition against peacock feathers is a thing of the past, and the evil omen which accompanied the plumage of the royal bird has had its day. Peacock blue cloth is being made into the most stunning costumes, and evening gowns of green and blue tulle are laid one over the other with charming effect.

The stunning redingote illustrated is carried out in fine black face cloth with thrown back revers of white cloth stitched with black braid each side of a fine line of pale blue. The same trimming is repeated on the cuffs. The skirt is just a little train and bears a series of narrow raw edged folds, a particularly good touch on a toilet of this kind.

INDOOR GOWNS.

Gray a Favorite For House Frocks. The New Quaker Waist.

One of the latest novelties for dinner and home dresses is the combination of mousseline de soie, cloth and fur, a fashion which lends itself particularly to the making over at home of several out of date gowns. The dress proper is made of thin mousseline, and the cloth is inserted in bands edged with the fur. The effect is decidedly new and pleasing.

For indoor dressy toilets nothing is daintier than a frock made of the new cashmere, and gray cashmere is an ideal material when it suits the wearer and if the exact shade is selected. It lends itself admirably to the Quaker style, adorned with very worldly embroidered lawn collar and cuffs.

The pretty house frock of the moment is laid in full plaits at the waist or gathered, as the wearer prefers. If worn over a silk petticoat, the froufrou at the feet is obtained. The blouse bodice is arranged in gathers at the neck, where it is finished with a collar and vest of transparent lawn inserted with embroidery. The bodice crosses slightly to one side, and around the waist is a panne band fastened at the back and boned into a deep point in front. The sleeves are puffed just above the elbow and have a long deep cuff coming over the hand and finished with dainty lawn appliques.

The charming blouse illustrated is of ivory liberty satin made with a shaped yoke formed of herringboning and a pointed smocked design. The high choker is of Irish guipure, and the cravat is of liberty.

NEW MATERIALS.

Printed Panne Velvet Very Smart. Blouses of White Flannel.

Printed panne is a material which is often seen in the realm of blouses as well as for trimming purposes. As a matter of fact, panne is increasing in favor as the season advances, one of the newest developments having almost invisible stripes in two shades running through it.

Exquisite printed satins for evening wear are also included among the new fabrics. The design usually consists of a flower pattern in several soft shades on white, cream or light colored ground.

Some of the new shirts and blouses of white cloth or flannel are piped with leather or suede in different colors and adorned with straps of the same. A very effective example is fastened down the front with little tabs piped with bronze leather and bronze buttons. The two small patch pockets on each side of the fronts have the same decoration.

Accordion plaiting is very much used on children's dresses this season. Many of the little party frocks are accordion plaited from the throat to the hem and have short puffed sleeves.

The hat illustrated is suitable for a girl of twelve. It has a plain brim of velvet and a high crown, the top of which is covered with drawn velvet, while soft puffings of glace silk very closely gathered encircle the crown. The silk should be chosen to match exactly the velvet, or the hat could be developed entirely in velvet, but in this case it would be rather heavy.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

STYLISH VEILS.

Works of Art, but Too Heavy to Enhance My Lady's Charms.

Mme. la Pompadour's influence has reached even the kingdom of veils, and the newest idea is for my lady to cover her face with a dainty tinted mesh worked over with exquisite little bunches of flowers scattered carelessly about its surface.

A modern celebrity, Mme. Melba, has made fashionable a stunning veil which looks like a lace footnote. It is of chantilly and of a circular shape, ornamented with a deep border. Some of these expensive chantilly face coverings have a border also at the top, which makes a pretty finish for the brim of a smart hat or will conceal the ravages of time on an old one.

The craze for floral effects which has invaded the entire world of dress fabrics has not skipped over the veil, and the latest chiffon "beautifiers" have scalloped edges and are appliqued all over with velvet daisies. Double veils are also a novelty. A medium shade with a lighter tone over it sheds a becoming glow over the face.

Changeable effects in veils are very smart, and this artistic scheme is carried out by means of two veils. The inner one is not noticeable except for the fascinating beauty note it gives to the features.

The charming gown in the cut is of soft gray panne. The folded bodice is very new and awarded with its ruched and braided cape effect about the shoulders and the pretty chemisette of lace trimmed with bands of cameo velvet. The wrinkled sleeves have elbow ruches of lace, velvet and tiny quillings. The skirt is gathered and ornamented at the feet with ruffles of panne held in position with braid. The folded belt of panne is set on the bodice.

THE BOWERY JOHNNY

UNIQUE PRODUCT OF NEW YORK CITY CIVILIZATION.

How He Meets His Juliet, What She Says to Him and He to Her—Laying the Foundation of a Love Affair.

The Bowery Johnnie, like most other New York institutions, is an original product. You see his like nowhere else. He came into existence with the advent of the traveling burlesque companies which have dominated the cheap variety theaters for the last ten years, and his development has been rapid.

Like his Broadway brother, says the New York Sun, the Bowery Johnnie may be of any age over 15. It all depends on the juvenility of his heart. He is just as likely to be a blue-eyed youth with hair parted in the middle, patent leather shoes and the Bowery's latest contrast and a pocketbook that needs replenishing as he is to be fat and bald-headed.

The female members of Bowery burlesque companies are not always devoid of talent or lacking a pretty face. But it is the well built girl who captivates the Johnnie's heart. To see her he waits in front of the theater where the women members of the company usually make their exit, or sits expectant in the cafe, if the theater has a cafe annex, as it usually has. In the latter case he invariably sits vis-a-vis with the object of his adoration waiting to invite her to have a drink.

Naturally, an easy method of introduction is to send the charmer a note, not a sloppy note, but usually very much to the point. A few years ago a midget pugilist whose reputation was based on the fact that he had defeated a man who was once the sparring partner of a boxer who was whipped by Terry McGovern, sent one of these notes to a chorus girl, who was mean enough to show it around. This is what it contained:

I saw de show to-night and wants to meet youse. I'm Mickey the Kid, pugilist and scrapper. If it is alright an youse are on de level I'll be at de stage door after de show. MICKEY THE KID, athlete.

But the average Bowery Johnnie eschews the formality of note writing if he can avoid it. Sometimes he sends news of his intentions to his idol by a stage hand.

"A friend of mine," says Cupid's ambassador, "would like to make a date wit' youse. He's all right. He's a good feller. Don't throw him down, 'cause he's me pal."

Of course, the girl may protest that she has a previous engagement or that she never goes out with strangers, or that she has promised to be home at a certain time. But it is current testimony that she rarely does. She appreciates an invitation to supper and a tryst is made in the theater cafe. The popular introductory phrase is: "What will you have?" and the lady is expected to say: "Beer," after which the conversation ranges to the weather, the show, etc.

"I'm glad I met you," Romeo will probably say after awhile, "and I hope I'll see you again after to-night."

"Of course I will be pleased to meet you once more," Juliet will reply. "I enjoyed your sociability very much, indeed I did, and that ain't no joke."

"I love the stage," says Romeo, with much earnestness, "and I wish I was an actor. Say, it must be lovely to be an actress."

"Oh, I don't know," answers Juliet. "There are other jobs as good. You see, I hate traveling and appearing in tights. But you know Lillian Russell and Pauline Hall and Lulu Glaser and all those Broadway soubrettes have appeared in tights. I don't say that I can set as good as they can, but I guess I have a better shape, haven't I?"

Which is the chance for which Romeo has been waiting.

"You can bet your life you have," he says with much feeling. "They didn't come no better than you."

And he feels then that the foundation of his love affair is well laid.

For suppers the Bowery Johnnie prefers the Chinese restaurants as centers of town gayety. He does not unfavorably expenditure on flowers. Them an up-to-date Bowery Johnnie think a the height of extravagance.

Wore Mustache After Death.

It is well known that human hair grows after death. This was convincingly demonstrated to a young widow in Liverpool. She attended a spiritualistic seance and in a dim light was shown the specter of her husband. She embraced the specter, found him to be rather warm and substantial for a ghost and rapturously kissed him. Then she made the discovery that although in life "her Jim" always had a closely shaven face, he now wore a luxuriant mustach.

STRANGE OLD HOUSE.

EVEN TRAMPS ARE SHUNNING ITS UNLOCKED DOORS.

For Two Years the Property Has Been Vacant and No One Has Come to Either Claim or Inhabit It.

A Hartford (Conn.) paper says there is standing in the western part of the town of Seymour, not far from the banks of the Housatonic river, a house that has been deserted almost two years, and yet, while there is a small colony of Italians living not far away and tramps roam through this region as they do in all parts of Connecticut, nothing in the house, apparently, has been molested, and it, with all its furniture and belongings, is just as it was left when the owner was taken away to the hospital to die, nearly two years ago. The beds in the house have their coverings in place, the kitchen and other furniture has not been touched, and the curtains at the windows are in place, even old muslin curtains, in addition to the regulation paper shades are found at some of the windows. The house is not locked, and has not been, and yet no one except a curiously hunter ever crosses the threshold, and tramps do not, as would naturally be expected, hold out there during the winter.

Last week a party of five young men and women camped out on the west bank of the river and occupied a log cabin. A woman from Bristol was the guest of one of the campers out for a day, and during her stay at the camp an excursion was made to the "haunted house," as it is called in that section. They were warned in broken English by an Italian living near by not to go near the house, but they persisted and found its condition as stated above. One of the women took away with her a book of an ancient date, and one of the men of the party secured an old-fashioned potato masher for use in the camp. When they were ready to return across the river four went in a large rowboat, while the Bristol woman was paddled across the river in a canoe. This woman and the man speculated much as to why the house was left desolate, as they did not know the story at the time, and they conceived the idea of frightening the other members of the party, who had preceded them, by palming off on them a story of a smallpox case.

POTATO MASHER SOUVENIR.

When they reached the shore they proceeded to carry out their plan, and the woman who had the book hurled it as far as her strength would allow, and the man sent the potato masher spinning toward the river. Seeing that their story was being taken for the truth, the perpetrators of it at once told the other members of the party that it was fiction; but the originators of the story, the more the matter was talked over, came before long to believe it with the rest. It was no probable an explanation that it was with feelings of anxiety that the advent of the owner of a steam launch that goes up and down the river was awaited that evening in order that the party might learn the truth about the deserted house. He said that the man who owned the place outlived most of his near relatives, and that a few years before his death he drove out of the place his only living relative, a stepson, and that the latter came back to die on the threshold of the house a few years later. The old man then lived alone in the house until a sore developed on his leg and he was taken by the town authorities to a New Haven hospital for an operation. At that time he expected to return to the house and it was left as any house would be. The operation was fatal, and the old man was buried in New Haven. Whether there are any heirs to the property, which, in any case, is not of much value, is not known, but it is certain that some kind of a ward of ghosts or hants has been started to keep the Italians and tramps away from the place.

Sponges on the English Coast.

Although the best sponges come from the Mediterranean, where divers bring them up from the rocks in the depths of the blue sea, a goodly number may be found on the shores of England lying about the beach washed up by the tide or covering rocks or sticking to shells it to which they have bored. The shore between the marks of high water and low water line has been called Sponge land. Within these limits sponges of many colors may be hunted for in the pools. They brighten the brown beach, these scarlet, orange, yellow, green, white, gray and black patches of sponge. The sponge one usually sees is the skeleton of the jelly-like living animal, and several of these skeletons make pretty ornaments.

FEW TAKE CARE OF RAZOR

Tonsorial Artist Gives Advice to Average Shaver—Lest Is Good for Instrument.

"The average man who shaves himself, doesn't know how to take care of his razor, despite all the advice that has been given him from time to time," said an expert barber to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat man.

"He will get a good razor, and use it day after day, then wonder why at the end of a short time it loses its edge, even though he strops it set carefully. A razor needs brief intervals of rest, or it will grow dull, no matter what efforts are made to keep it sharp. If you have a good razor, and it appears to be losing its edge, just try to rest it instead of having it sharpened up again. The chances are that when you put it into use again, at the expiration of three or four days, it will have its sharp edge as if it had been carefully honed. A man who shaves himself ought to have at least two razors, and use them on alternate mornings; then, if his razors are all right, he will have but little trouble with them. It is also possible to strop a razor too much. It should not be stropped for more than half a minute before shaving, and care should be taken never to bear heavily on the strop while doing this. Let the razor rest lightly on the leather and the best results will be gained. After finishing a shave, strop the razor once more for a few seconds and this will insure a much better condition for it."

DEEP SEA LEVEL RISES.

Changes Observed from Several Points Along Mediterannean Show Increase in Depth.

Changes in the level of the sea are well shown in the case of the Mediterranean. M. Ph. Negris, in a recent lecture presented to the Academy of Science, furnishes interesting information on this point. It is plainly apparent that the sea has greatly increased in depth as compared to ancient times. Formerly a bridge 3,000 feet long united Leucate to the continent. To-day it is submerged, but the foundations of the work were discovered 11 feet beneath the surface. It may, therefore, be concluded that since the construction of the bridge the sea has risen at this point over nine feet. In the bay of Amphissa, Greece, there has been observed a mole that is also over nine feet beneath the surface. At Rhenee there has been found a completely submerged dock, evidently of Roman construction, the depth of the sea above the dock being more than nine feet. From all of these facts one may conclude that there has taken place an important increase in the depth of the sea since the Roman period, the Mediterranean having risen at least nine feet in about 2,000 years.

HORSE HAS A HAPPY FACE.

Chicago Equine Driven to Grocery Wagon Is Dear Friend of Numerous School Children.

Said the man whose equine acquaintances outnumber the humans he knows intimately, and who seems glad of it according to the Chicago Inter Ocean:

"There is a wise old horse belonging to a grocer in Wentworth avenue, and he might appropriately be called the children's friend. The store is close to a schoolhouse, and this horse friend of mine spends much of his time standing in front of the store when his wagon is not in commission. He has a habit of standing with his forefeet on the sidewalk going into the store. At such times the children fairly swarm on him. They jump into the wagon and hold the reins; they climb on top of and walk underneath the lofty animal, and he looks benignantly down upon them, and is often rewarded for his good nature with bits of sugar and candy and other things that horses like. There are few happier faces in town, if you know how to read them, than this of my four-legged friend. May he live long and always be as happy."

EASY TO BE EXPERT SHOT

Cavalry Captain Tells How One May Become a Crack with Pistol in a Short Time.

"Any man with ordinary nerve can become a fair shot with a revolver from the saddle with a few weeks' practice. I believe in a short time a man can become sufficiently expert to make 95 out of 100 shots," says an army officer. "You see, it is all in learning when to shoot. The aiming is a small part of pistol and revolver shooting. The aiming is just like pointing your finger. A man naturally can point his finger at an object accurately. If he can do that he can aim a gun by simply throwing it out in the same way. The reason an unpracticed person shoots so markedly all is that he stops to aim and gets off the mark or becomes unsteady in pulling the trigger. He must learn his gun, so he will know the exact instant when it goes off, just how much and how long a pull he must make to snap the trigger. When he learns so that it is second nature to shoot just as he points the gun, he will hit any ordinary mark within reasonable range."

Food of the Future.

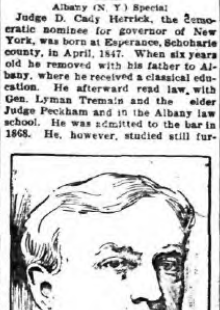
"Man will eat 200 or 300 more foods in the year 2000 than he eats now," said a chemist. "A movement is on foot among the world's governments to increase the varieties of our foods, and every week from somewhere or other a new vegetable or fruit or nut is added to the international bill of fare."

JUDGE D. CADY HERRICK.

Democratic Nominee for Governor of New York Has a Creditable Record as a Jurist.

Albany (N. Y.) Special.

Judge D. Cady Herrick, the Democratic nominee for governor of New York, was born at Esperance, Schoharie county, in April, 1847. When six years old he removed with his father to Albany, where he received a classical education. He afterward read law with Gen. Lyman Tremain and the elder Judge Peckham and in the Albany law school. He was admitted to the bar in 1868. He, however, studied still further after admission, in order to fully qualify himself for a successful career.



JUDGE D. CADY HERRICK.
(Nominated for Governor by the Democrats of New York.)

After having thus spent over a year with Hungerford & Hotaling young Herrick commenced the practice of law in 1870. He very soon exhibited the result of ample preparation and full study by the skill and ability he displayed, though his income was for a time not embarrassing in its magnitude. He had the experience in the early days of his profession of some celebrated cases, and made an energetic though necessarily unsuccessful defense of Emil Lowenstein for the murder of John D. Weston.

Judge Herrick ran for district attorney in 1877, but was defeated. He succeeded, however, in reaching that office in 1880, and was reelected in 1883. He was afterward appointed corporation counsel by Mayor Thacher, and in the fall of 1891 was elected to the supreme court, third department.

Judge Herrick supported Bryan and the democratic platform in 1896. When Senator McCarren was chairman of the special committee appointed in Saratoga to carry out the preliminary work of the state campaign in 1898 Judge Herrick was mentioned as a candidate for the governorship, and it was said David B. Hill was in favor of his candidacy and that he would also have the support of the Croker-Murphy combination of that period.

PLANT BREEDERS AT WORK

Government Experts Desire to Produce an Orange Tree That Will Thrive in the North.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

It is the hope of botanists in the employ of the government of the United States that they may bring into being an orange tree which shall be as hardy as the apple tree; which in December shall bear its wreaths of snow and in May its garlands of bloom, and which when summer comes shall yield fruit as good as that sweetened and gilded in the south sun. Botanists not only hope to do this; they believe they will do it.

This does not involve the doing of aught against nature, but looks to the correction of some unnatural incapacity or incompleteness in the plant which bears the dessert orange. It is an effort to make the citrus tree from which is obtained the most gracious orange as hardy and as insensitive to cold as the citrus tree from which is obtained the least gracious orange. By crossing a citrus tree which grows in the north, and which bears the inedible fruit, with a citrus tree of the south, it is sought to breed a plant in which shall be combined what is good in each.

That form of citrus which grows farthest north is a Japanese shrub, citrus trifoliata. It may be seen in the United States as far north as Massachusetts. Its use is only ornamental. Its fruit, under favoring conditions attains the size of a wild persimmon and is globular in figure, tawny and bitter. It is sought to breed a plant in which shall be combined with the commercial orange might be surprised by a man strongly suspicious, but not otherwise.

THE SACRED LAMAS

THEY HAVE ABSOLUTE POWER IN THE FORBIDDEN LAND.

The Various Orders of the Priesthood Are Exceedingly Rich—A Modern Day Mystery to Be Solved.

In a most high place of the earth dwells that high personage, the lama, for Lhassa, the abode of the Dalai Lama, is up some 11,000 feet above sea level. In the mysterious country of Thibet, the "Forbiden Land," inhabited by people of Mongolian race, flourishes that corrupt form of Buddhism known as lamaism.

And until recently here flourished the great Dalai Lama, all his life reverenced as a god, a most wonderful Holiness. But alas for pomp and pride, the Dalai Lama was first brought to book by the aggressive, commanding English; and then the Chinese emperor, over-lord of Thibet, neglectful of the divinity hedging the priest-king, deposed the Dalai Lama and substituted in his place the Teshu Lama.

What of this summary dealing with sacred things will have upon the Thibetans remains to be seen. It is whispered among Mongolian merchants in that corner of eastern Russia where white man and yellow man come together in the market place, that the Dalai Lama is not in hiding, but is dead; has been put to death by some lama monks. To support this theory is the fact that for some time previous to Col. Younghusband's victory over the Dalai, the latter was harassed by the attitude of not a few of his subordinates; he had to indulge in wholesale deposings of his ministers, and was kept busy trying to put down murmurings in the great monasteries, or lamaseries.

State and church are most closely allied in Thibet, lamaism combining a corruption of the Buddhist religion with the control of the government, Thibet being a hierarchy under two ecclesiastical-political sovereigns, called lamas. A French writer, M. L. de Milloue, says that since the beginning of the ninth century the history of Thibet has been merely the history of the clergy, who have almost absolute power over the people. In the matter of things religious, lamaism is characterized by elaborate ceremonials of worship, and the devotees have a host of deities and saints to whom to pay reverence. Chief pontiff is the Dalai Lama, a race of priest-kings that has ruled over Thibetan affairs 700 years. The Dalai Lama is supposed to have an immortal soul, successively transmigrated from one body to another. The lately deposed Dalai Lama traced his line back to a very mythical beginning, appeared to his people the incarnation of Buddha.

The question now is, not where the Lama's soul has flown, but what has become of his body. Could the mysterious monasteries tell if they would? Has one of their "executioners" set free the soul from his last known body? Dreadful tales are repeated of the dark doings that sometimes go on within the doors of the lamaseries, and it takes no great stretch of the imagination to think of the lamas as regicides.

A RED LAMA.

Let us glance for a moment at the working of these institutions. The monasteries generally are very rich, the Thibetans being a religious people and giving to the priesthood unstintingly. There are different sects of lamas—red, yellow, black and white lamas. Most numerous are the yellow lamas, and equally powerful but not of such number, all is that he stops to aim and gets off the mark or becomes unsteady in pulling the trigger. He must learn his gun, so he will know the exact instant when it goes off, just how much and how long a pull he must make to snap the trigger. When he learns so that it is second nature to shoot just as he points the gun, he will hit any ordinary mark within reasonable range."

CHICAGO LIKES PICKLE DIET

Western Metropolis Has Become the Largest Consumer in the United States.

That Chicago is becoming the greatest pickle eating community in the United States is a claim made by the Tribune. It is said that inside the city limits is one of the most extensive pickle works in the world, that in the matter of acres in cucumbers and onions, the number of hands employed and the variety of goods of this character there is nothing to beat it. But the country districts are fast gaining in this business, especially in the growth of cucumbers. Some of the big wholesale grocers of the city are establishing pickle houses in many different sections of Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. They make contracts with the farmers to plow a certain number of acres, agreeing to take the entire product at stipulated prices. A large building is erected in such a community and the work of pickling is carried on in it. Farmers find cucumbers a profitable crop. Last year a pickle factory was established at Sycamore, Ill., and the first crop has been an entire success. One man took at one picking from an acre and a half cucumbers that netted him $250. It is estimated that there are from 15 to 20 pickings, so that if the balance of the crop turns out in proportion to the first picking, the land will be found to be profitably employed. The city of Chicago and its suburbs is the big market for this product, which shows that our people have a tooth for sour things as well as for sweets.

STIFF SHIRT IN DISFAVOR.

Soft-Bosomed Article Gains in Popularity and Manufactories Are Heavy Losers.

All the shirt manufactories of the country are heavy losers on account of the latest whim of American shirt wearers, according to the statement of a Glens Falls (N. Y.) agent, who represents one of the large concerns. He says that in the last year and one-half the stiff-bosomed shirt has gone into decided disfavor. Large numbers of men who have never worn anything but stiff-bosomed shirts now insist on having soft shirts for both winter and summer.

"It is utterly unaccountable," said the agent. "The stiff shirt is a businesslike garment. It wears well and looks well. But the men of the country will not have them any more. The result is that shirtmakers have their business reduced practically one season. It used to be that stiff shirts were sold for winter and soft shirts for summer, but it is so no longer. Of course there will always be a sale of stiff shirts, but it has become so limited with such suddenness that the makers have lost money."

MANY DESERTIONS IN NAVY

Navigation Authorities Astonished at Number Who Take French Leave of Service.

Desertions in the navy are increasing to such an extent as to give the naval authorities the gravest concern. The condition is not confined to the bureau of navigation, but the reports received there from the ships on home and foreign stations contain statistics of desertions that are of alarming proportions. No one is able to understand why there should be such illegal withdrawals of the men from the service. It is all the more surprising when it is considered that the payment and privileges of the enlisted men have been made as attractive as possible by the authorities, and all for the purpose of creating contentment among the bluejackets. One reason given is that the punishment of the culprits who are apprehended is altogether inadequate and amounts to an easier existence than that of those who do their duty. The situation is so menacing that the authorities are devising some means of keeping the enlisted force up to its required strength.

SOME HARMLESS OATHS.

"Tinker's Dam" and "Twopenny Dam" May Be Used in Select Circles Without a Qualm.

In the United States it is common to say that you "don't give a tinker's dam" for something or other. Our English cousins, in similar circumstances, say "a twopenny dam." Each of these apparent oaths is harmless, and may be used in polite society without a qualm. Rear Admiral Casey, noticing a look of surprise on the face of a friend when he said "tinker's dam," observed: "I guess you think I'm swearing, but I'm not. A dam is a contrivance resorted to by all tinkers in their work." The phrase "twopenny dam" was first used by the great duke of Wellington. His administration of the British army was attacked, and he astonished the house of lords by replying:

"I don't care, and the British army don't care a twopenny dam for any of these criticisms." Then he explained that "a twopenny dam" an Indian coin of the value of twopence."

BAD BOY IS CHECKMATED

How a Wise Old Bachelor Persuaded His Squalling Nephew to Shut His Mouth.

A bachelor is not usually credited with a knowledge of the proper treatment of children, but sometimes, says the Chicago Inter Ocean, they step in where angels fear to tread. A confirmed specimen, who is pretty well on in years and not very fond of children went to see a married sister the other day, and found her trying to amuse her little boy, aged five years.

Not long after he arrived she stepped out of the room to attend to some household duty of other, leaving him alone with the child. The latter eyed him dubiously for some minutes. He was a spoiled child if ever there was one, and had no idea of making promiscuous acquaintances. The bachelor tried to make the little one laugh, but all he got for his antics was a sour look.

Finally, without any warning, the child burst out crying. Here was a quandary, to be sure. He didn't dare to pick the boy up and soothe him. His attempts in a verbal line were dismal failures. What should he do? Finally a thought struck him. He looked at the crying youngster, and the crying youngster looked at him through his tears. He was evidently much pleased with the impression he was making.

"Cry louder," said he.

The child obeyed.

"Louder yet," urged the bachelor.

A yell went up that would have done credit to an Indian.

"Cry louder still," insisted the man, and the boy did his best to obey.

"Louder!" fairly howled his uncle.

"I won't!" snapped the infant, and he shut his mouth with a click and was quiet for the rest of the day.

THE BLUFF THAT FAILED.

Mr. Staylate Attempts to Fool His Better Half, But Instead Is Fooled Himself.

A clock in a near-by tower had just tolled off the hour of 4 as he arose unsteadily from the card table, where he had sat for three hours, stretched his weary limbs, bade his comrades goodnight and started in the direction of his home.

After a half hour's walk, in which all the lamp post and telegraph poles insisted on getting in his way, he arrived at his home, took out his bunch of keys, at last found the elusive keyhole and deftly opening the door and discarding his shoes at the foot of the stairs, climbed heavenward on all fours. With cat-like footsteps he crept across the threshold of his bedroom and proceeded to undress. He heard his wife move restlessly, which made him hurry, and in doing so he upset a chair. Stepping quickly over to the cradle in the corner he commenced to rock it violently.

"Is that you, John?" came his wife's voice from the bed.

"Yes, dear," he replied.

"Well, what in the world are you doing?" she asked.

"Why, I'm rocking this blamed kid to sleep.

"How long have you been there?"

"Since 11:30."

"Well, John, I think you had better get right into bed, as I have the child in here beside me, and, moreover, I've had him here ever since 11 o'clock last night."

HAS HAD RAPID RISE

FRANK W. HIGGINS STARTED IN BUSINESS AS A BOY.

Career of Possible Governor of New York Shaped by Chicago Girl Who Induced Him to Come to the West.

New York Special.

Frank W. Higgins, republican candidate for governor of New York, was born in Rushford, Alleghany county, August 18, 1856, and was educated at Pike seminary and at the Riverview military academy on the Hudson. He became engaged in business at the early age of 19 years at Stanton, Mich. For the last 15 years he has been interested in pine lands in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota and also in iron mines. He has a business office in Duluth, Minn., and also in Ocean, where he resides.

Mr. Higgins has always been a republican since he began voting. He was a delegate to the republican national convention of 1888 held at Chicago, and a republican candidate for senator in 1892 he received 19,346 votes, and had a majority of 8,346 over Urban Prescott, who had the support of the populists, socialists, democrats and progressive republicans. In 1894 and 1896 he was chairman of the committee on taxation and retrenchment, of the committee on grievances, of the committee on joint library and was also a member of the committee on finance and the committee on insurance. Two years ago he was elected lieutenant governor of the state.

Rumor has it that the influence of a young and pretty Chicago girl proves to have been the leading factor in shaping Mr. Higgins' career.

The young woman in the case was Miss Kate C. Noble, and when she first met Mr. Higgins he was only a boy and she was still younger.

She went to visit some friends in Olean, where young Higgins was a clerk in his father's general store.

Miss Noble told him what a lively place Chicago was and how the great west was the place to go and make a fortune.

Young Higgins was undecided until the young woman ended her visit in Olean and went back to Chicago. Then he was sure Chicago was the only place for him to go.

He resigned his place in his father's general store at Olean and went to Chicago.

It speaks well for the youngster's energy, address and power to convince others of his business ability that, although he was only 15, he secured the western agency of the Binghamton Refining company, which was one of three concerns that were undertaking to make lubricating oil out of petroleum.

He established headquarters in Chicago, where he could attend both to lubricating oil and love making; and at 21 he married the Chicago girl. Higgins stayed out west for a few years, going to Denver for awhile, and then going into business for himself at Stanton, Mich.

Then his rowing days were over for life and at 23 he went back to Olean and started to grow into a solid business man of that section.

Thanks to the freedom of the west, which he absorbed when he was young, the man who may be governor of the Empire state is an agreeable man to meet. There is an unaffected simplicity about him that puts his visitors instantaneously at ease and formality in the conversation is out of the question.

He is a little man and he is as plump as a partridge. He could not be called roly poly in shape, but he resembles an egg.

Mrs. Higgins can be depended upon to carry off the honors of the executive mansion if her husband is elected.

Boy Chopped Off His Finger.

Master Henry Hall, the little son of Matthew Hall, who lives near Nashville, Tenn., took heroic measures to prevent disaster from the bite of a bigarrilesnake which had crawled into his bed and bit him on the finger just after he had retired. The fangs of the reptile were driven into the middle finger of the right hand. As soon as he realized what had happened the lad jumped from the bed, and, grabbing a chop ax, cut the finger off above the bite. He lost some blood from the gruesome operation, but has suffered no injury as a result of the snake bite. It is supposed the snake came in through the door in the afternoon while the family was busy in the fields. It crawled under the top cover of the bed, and was not seen when the family went to retire. Young Hall tumbled into bed in much the same manner as all youngsters do, and threw his hand over the snake, making it mad and causing it to strike at once. The fangs were buried in the flesh of the finger.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Dec. 15, 1904.

Attracting attention isn't necessarily attracting trade. The claims that clinch the bargain—the talk that sells because of its earnestness is the quality that counts. The ad that forges cleverness; forgets the greatness of the firm name; forgets everything but the merit of the goods is proclaims, is the ad that fills its mission.—Ex.

It may not be amiss at this time to call the attention of Congressman Fowler to the fact that Plainfield needs a suitable postoffice building. Senator Kean has introduced a bill at the last session asking for an appropriation of $100,000 for the erection of a government building here. His Plainfield constituents expect him to use due diligence in bringing up the measure at an early date and it is to be hoped that Congressman Fowler will interest himself in the matter.

Bird S. Coler, president of New York's civil service commission, is quoted for men on the city's pay-roll who live in Yaryet, taking the stand that "it does not seem exactly right for a man to draw his pay from the people of the city of New York and spend it all in New Jersey." His first move was to give two city engineers who had removed to Elizabeth the alternative of establishing their residence again in New York or get out. They resigned. Now the former Controller is making an investigation. He declares that "there should be some regulation providing that a city employe must maintain a bona fide residence in New York." This seems but reasonable but if it is insisted upon, Jersey is going to lose a lot of good citizens. There are a number of them in this city and in surrounding towns and they compose a class of men desirable as residents in every way.

Other cities in the State have already taken steps to follow the example set by Plainfield in increasing its liquor license fees and everywhere in New Jersey praise is given the Common Council for its action. Widespread attention is also given the proposition presented by Councilman Tyler to limit the territory in which liquor may be sold. The Newark Evening News, the leading paper of the State, said editorially on the subject Saturday:

The city of Plainfield, which recently adopted an ordinance raising the license fee from $700 to $1,000, has now under consideration another measure designed to regulate the liquor traffic within the city limits. It is an ordinance designed to limit and restrict the district in which saloons and drinking places may be located. The ordinance, if adopted, will confine all saloons to the business part of the city and allow none outside of designated area. It will prevent the locating and licensing of saloons in districts where they are not wanted and will set at rest a great deal of uncertainty as to what Council may or may not do. Last year there was a long and bitter contest over an effort to locate a new saloon in a certain street. Council was divided over the issue, politics entered into the struggle; motives of both citizens and officials were impugned and the fight ended only by the defeat of the scheme. Plainfield does not, it would seem, intend to go through another such experience. It is certainly refreshing to find one city in New Jersey that is courageous enough, intelligent enough and determined enough to actually restrict the sale of liquor traffic. The fourteen saloons of that city can, in the first place, be easily watched. Their proximity to the police station places, are very careful not to violate the laws, lest they lose their licenses for which they have paid heavily. Compare with a "speakeasy" opens for a time, but its career is brief. Plainfield seems to have solved the question of the regulation of the traffic about as well as it can be solved under a license system.

Pythians' District Meeting.

Under the direction of District Deputy Jeremiah VanWinkle a district meeting of Knights of Pythias will be held this evening in the rooms of Unity Lodge, No. 103, K. of P. The Grand Lodge officers will be present and a recommendation will be made regarding the selection of a deputy to succeed Mr. VanWinkle. An important feature of the meeting will be the working of the Grand Lodge Degree by the officers under the direction of Grand Chancellor John W. Lass, of Jersey City. In addition to Perseverance and Ogden Gate Lodges, there will be present lodges from nearby towns.

For State Teachers' Certificates.

Twenty-eight candidates for State teachers' certificates presented themselves at the opening of the examinations at the State house at Trenton Thursday. There are in all about 150 appointed candidates. The examinations are for first, second and third grades and special certificates. The subjects taken up were plain and solid geometry, chemistry, botany and literature.

AMUSEMENTS.

Lyric Theatre, 43d street, west of Broadway—James K. Hackett, in the romantic melodrama "The Fortunes of the King" Matinee Saturday.

Princess Theatre, Broadway and 29th street—Robert B. Mantell in "Richard III." Matinee Thursday.

Casino, Broadway and 39th street—"The Baroness Fiddlestick." Matinee today.

Robert B. Mantell playing "Richard III" to packed houses as the Princess and his interpretation of the title roll in this famous Shakespearian production compares favorably with that done by great actors of the past. Later he will play "Othello" at the same theatre. James K. Hackett is appearing in "The Fortunes of the King," a powerful melodrama, produced under the management of Hubert Brothers at the Lyric. "The Baroness Fiddlestick" is still holding popular favor at the Casino.

Ethel Barrymore has scored the triumph of her career in "Sunday," the new play in which she is now appearing at the Hudson Theatre, New York. She has surpassed all her previous records for New York business, and she has succeeded also in making the heroine of the picturesque melodrama, whose love story is so charmingly and convincingly told, take place by the side of the most popular of her previous stage creations. "Sunday," as portrayed by Miss Barrymore, appeals in the strongest way to her audiences, being a very human and winsome girl of the far Western type; breezy, slangy, courageous and ready for every emergency that arises, but with all as sweet and wholesome a young creature as ever stepped out of a border romance. Miss Barrymore employs her exquisite art most effectively in presenting this character and she deserves the great triumph she is achieving in it.

Following the engagement of "The Other Girl" the attraction at the Grand is B. C. Whitney's piquant musical mixture, "The Isle of Spice," one of the conspicuous successes of the season in New York. "The Isle of Spice" is a clever concoction of wit and fancy, dealing as it does with the adventures of two jolly tars dropped from a balloon on a mythical island in the Indian Ocean. The inhabitants take them for two mighty foreign potentates and due homage is rendered them. The search for the two supposedly lost sailors by the officers of the U. S. battleship, from which they went signaling in the balloon, is rendered doubly comic by the love scenes constantly in progress between them with the guileless maidens of the newly discovered land of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg. There is also a comic king called Bompoka, whose matrimonial experiences and methods of financing add to the general hilarity. Complications of a screamingly diverting order constantly occur, and thanks to a clever composer, whenever the audience is not convulsed with the efforts of the librettist, it is kept in a state of delight by a score of the prettiest numbers recently heard in musical comedy. Mr. Whitney has secured a capable company of clever comedians and singers to interpret "The Isle of Spice," and the evolutions of the chorus promise to be a revelation in agility and grace, without mentioning the captivating beauty of the young women termed "broilers."

Y. M. C. A. Fair Receipts $1,000.

Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, chairman of the general committee having in charge the recent fair held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., states that the total receipts were $1,000. The net proceeds cannot yet be ascertained as all the bills are not in yet. One attractive feature of the fair was the silver table furnished by the W. H. Rogers' Silver Company, of this city.

Mother Church Sends Delegates.

The antiquity of the organization of the Baptist church at Scotch Plains was brought to mind on Sunday last when delegates from that church, styled the "mother church," were sent with their congregations to the First Baptist church at Broadway and Seventy-ninth street, New York. The occasion was the observance of the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the church organization.

GAME BOARD LIKELY TO REMIT A $20 FINE

SECRETARY JOHNSON SO WROTE REGARDING MARTIN CASE.

In a letter received by former Senator Charles A. Reed from Percy H. Johnson, secretary of the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission, it is explained that without doubt a resolution will be passed by the board at its next regular meeting remitting the fine of $20 imposed on Mr. Reed's client, Theodore J. Martin, for keeping in captivity three squirrels.

Mr. Johnson's letter also included a declaration concerning L. C. Wyckoff, of this place, who, as deputy fish and game warden, had arrested Martin for keeping the squirrels. Wyckoff, at a later date, had caused to be published a story that he was tired of serving as a deputy and had tried to resign, but could not get Warden Charles M. Hawkins to accept his resignation. Wyckoff said he wanted to give public notice that he would no longer act as an officer.

In referring to his claim, Mr. Johnson, in his letter to Mr. Reed, said that Wyckoff never sent his resignation to Hawkins, and that Wyckoff's commission had been revoked by the commission. Mr. Johnson referred to the arrest of Martin in an uncomplimentary manner, so far as Wyckoff was concerned in it.

The criticism, it is believed, was due to the fact that half the fine imposed upon prisoners goes to the deputy making the arrest. Martin, it appears, got the pet squirrels from Mrs. James Negley. Martin knew of the law against keeping them, and thinking that the change of ownership removed the immunity from the law's provisions, consulted Mr. Reed, who advised him that the law was not aimed to cover his case. It was then that Wyckoff arrested Martin.

WOMEN OF ST. STEPHEN'S GIVE A UNIQUE FAIR

BAZAAR HELD AT THE HOME OF MRS. H. R. KNOX SATURDAY.

Under the auspices of the women of St. Stephen's church, an unique and attractive fair was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. R. Knox, of Webster place. All during the afternoon the rooms of the house, which were tastefully decorated, were well filled, and the articles sold remarkably well. In addition to its financial success, the fair proved an enjoyable social event.

The booths and tables were attractively arranged in the reception hall, parlor and dining rooms, and were draped in red and black. This effect was prettily brought about by festoons of paper hung from the ceilings and around the walls.

Directly upon entering the hall, the visitors were confronted by the Ladies' Home Journal booth, which was presided over by Miss Gahagan and Miss Currier. A feature of the fair was the Gypsy Queen, who occupied a booth picturesque with oriental hangings, in the rear of the dining room. She was portrayed by Miss Catherine Knox, uniquely costumed in a gypsy dress, who displayed her skill at fortune telling. At the fancy work table, Mrs. D. Cole was in charge, assisted by Miss Walshe and Miss Edna Willis. Mrs. Walter Platt was in charge of the candy table, while Mrs. A. C. Hill had charge of the doll display, which was one of the best of the attractions. Coffee was sold by Mrs. Albert Bird and Mrs. George Dupee poured tea. The waitresses were Miss Sullivant, Miss Mattox and Miss Bowe.

New Parish Magazine.

"The Messenger," the new paper published by the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church each week under the editorship of William D. Murray, made its first appearance on Sunday. It is a creditable issue and contains news of interest to the members about the various societies in the church. No advertisements are published, the editor explaining that no such imposition will be practiced.

F. H. S. Graduate a Professor.

At the recent celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of Columbia College, among the chairs established was that of Lieber professorship of History and Political Science, which will be occupied by Dr. William A. Dunning, who was a graduate of the class of 1874 of the Plainfield High School.

To Issue Formal Call.

The congregation of the Scotch Plains Baptist church will meet next Sunday morning after the regular preaching service and extend a formal call to Rev. Moore Smith to become its pastor. The call previously extended was in the nature of a request from the officers of the church asking him to consider the pastorate.

Athletes May Give Circus.

There has been some talk on the part of the members of the evening class at the Y. M. C. A. of giving a circus on the gymnasium floor for the benefit of the gymnasium fund, which is used for repairs. There is considerable talent among the members of the class, a slack wire performer, a tumbler, a contortionist, and a clown being attainable. With the help of a few other professionals, a good entertainment could be arranged, and there is little doubt that the subject will be favorably considered.

For the holiday trade, Henry Eggerding, the Park avenue cigar maker, has any number of novelties that will delight smokers. A box of his cigars would make an appropriate gift.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB'S GALLOP OVER THE SNOW

RIDE OF EIGHT MILES PROVED AN ENJOYABLE ONE.

The cold wind of Saturday afternoon had no terrors for the members of the Watchung Hunt Club, and those who went on the eight-mile chase enjoyed a most delightful time, and one of the best rides which the club has yet taken. The start was from John L. Holly's farm, on Park avenue, and the gayly attired huntsmen made a picturesque appearance as they started over the snow clad meadows toward Metuchen.

The first check was made near Metuchen, the party disbanding in the neighborhood of Oak Tree. From Metuchen the riders galloped off in the direction of Rahway, meeting none but good meadows and favorable omens. The hounds ran well and the fences were all well taken.

Next week the start will be at Westfield, and one of the largest fields of the season is anticipated. Among those who rode Saturday afternoon were these members of the club: Miss Holly, Miss Noe, of Westfield; Charles Ismay, Hugh Baldwin, W. Webster, C. E. S. Bellows, R. A. Chebbeare and Dr. M. O'M. Knott.

MISS MOLLY TAUB IS NOW MRS. HENRY LEVINE

MARRIAGE TOOK PLACE LAST NIGHT AT JEWISH SYNAGOGUE.

Miss Molly Taub, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Taub, of Somerset street, was made the wife of Henry Levine, also of this city, at the Synagogue Sunday. Miss Taub was brought under an large American flag, which was placed at the front of the Synagogue, by Mrs. Samuel Taub and Mrs. Goldstein, while Mr. Taub and Mr. Goldstein escorted Mr. Levine before the minister, who was Mr. Davison, of this city. The bridesmaids were the Misses Flora Levine, a sister of the groom, Rosie Rodstein and Annie Schwartz. Max Goldstein was the best man. The ushers were Max Gilman and Aaron Levine, the groom's brother.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the 300 guests assembled at the Company K armory, where an elaborate supper was served, and the evening was spent in dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Levine will make their home with the bride's parents on Somerset street.

QUIETLY MARRIED.

Mrs. Isabelle Simonson and J. Worth Coddington Surprise Their Friends.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Isabelle Simonson, of User street, and J. Worth Coddington, of Somerset street, which was celebrated Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Simonson's cousin on Staten Island. Immediately after the wedding the bride and groom left for the South, where they will spend a month.

The couple is well-known in the borough. Mrs. Coddington was the widow of Albert Simonson. Her daughter, Miss Evelyn Simonson, was one of the victims of the Westfield wreck on January 27, 1903, and her death occurred a few months ago. Mr. Coddington is a brother of Former Councilman Harrison Coddington, is a veteran of the Civil War and a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 78, G. A. R.

NEW LUMBER BUILDING.

McDonough Brothers to Erect Structure.

McDonough Brothers, the coal dealers, of Madison avenue, have plans under consideration for the erection of a building and barn on their recently purchased property on West Third street, opposite their coal yards. The property extends from the Rogers' Silver Corporation property to that of Mrs. Carney, corner of West Third street and Central avenue, a portion of which is now occupied by John Lannon, the stone dealer. The new owners will, however, do nothing on the large building until spring, although the barn may be erected sooner.

Ever since the firm started in the coal business it had planned to engage in the lumber business some day, and it is proposed to do so on a moderate scale. Builders' materials will also be handled. Just the kind of a building to be erected has not yet been decided upon, but it will undoubtedly be a steel structure.

The barn and wagon shed to be erected will be with a view to keeping the firm's horses and wagons in one place, instead of having some here and some at South Plainfield, where its supply of ice is gathered and a coal business is carried on.

Sagamore Club to Play.
The entertainment to be given at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening, under the auspices of the boys' entertainment course, will be an exceptionally good one, particularly for the fact that part of the talent will be local. An attractive programme of musical selections has been arranged by the Sagamore Musical Club, of this city, and Lindsley Addison Lucious Perry Hill, a prominent New York entertainer and humorous, has a place on the programme.

Dudley Miller, the Park avenue druggist, has received for the holiday trade a large line of desirable goods, including perfumery, toilet articles and the best confections.

CHURCH FREE FROM DEBT

Baptist Congregation Hears Welcome Announcements.

Dr. CHAMBLISS REMAINS

Consents to Continue His Pastorate Without the Time Limit Placed by Himself.

Following the morning service at the First Baptist church, Sunday, two very important and interesting announcements were made by L. V. F. Randolph, of the Board of Trustees. The first was that the entire church indebtedness had been paid and the second was that Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, who was engaged as a pastor for one year, has been re-engaged without the restriction of time limit as specified in the first instance.

In the few remarks made by Mr. Randolph, who was speaking for the trustees, said that he was pleased to say at the time of year approached for the observance of the feast of glad tidings that the debt which had been carried for several years had been paid, including expenses incurred during the past two years for improvements and that the last note and formal obligation had been discharged, leaving the church more than ever a free organization.

Referring to Dr. Chambliss, he said that a year ago he came to the church and at that time was not willing to engage himself as pastor for more than one year. Since then the congregation had had great comfort in his preaching and ministrations and today pastor and people are closely united. He added that Dr. Chambliss had consented to continue his pastorate without time-limit and that this was the cause for great rejoicing among the members of the church and congregation who are united in their love for their pastor. Mr. Randolph then paid deserving tribute to Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus, and said that he would continue to serve in his capacity he hoped for many years and that he and his family would still be held in the love and esteem which has been extended during the many years of service of the venerable pastor.

Mr. Randolph stated that the arrangement with Dr. Chambliss and the consideration of Dr. Yerkes as pastor-emeritus, had been made with the Board of Trustees.

He requested that everyone give expression of their feeling of appreciation that the indebtedness had been cleared and that Dr. Chambliss would continue as pastor by rising. The request was heartily complied with.

Dr. Chambliss in a very few words gave expression to his feelings by thanking all for the kind renewal of expression of their confidence, adding that he would continue to do his best and be asked for the united love and prayers of his people.

The thought expressed by Mr. Randolph that the church was never more united than at present was attested by the many kind words spoken by all to the pastor after the service. During the one year of service of the pastor the congregation has steadily increased and the membership has grown, there having been a great many baptisms during the past twelve months, although owing to illness the pastor was obliged to be away for several months. He is now perfectly well and enters upon his permanent pastorate with renewed energy and zeal.

SALE OF FAIR EFFECTS BRINGS TOTAL OF $43,951

MONEY TO BE DIVIDED AMONG THE LOCAL HEIRS.

The sale of the personal effects of Mrs. Charles L. Fair, which began in New York on Friday, ended Saturday evening, and 300 articles of furs and jewelry were sold for a total of $43,951. The Knickerbocker Art Galleries, at 7 West Twenty-ninth street, were crowded with women and dealers in jewelry, and the bidding at times was lively, although the advances were small.

Low prices as a rule prevailed. A four-carat diamond of unusual brilliancy brought only $350. A Russian sable muff and stole, which the auctioneer said had been appraised by the Custom House authorities at $2,000, were sold for $85. The highest price of the sale, $7,100, was paid by Henry Breidenbach for a diamond necklace, containing fifty-two diamonds.

Mrs. McKee bought a collarette made up of 900 pearls and 185 diamonds for $5,150, and Dr. Schnerr paid $2,700 for a diamond collar weighing 70 carats. The proceeds are to be divided among Mrs. Fair's relatives, who include Mrs. Hannah Nelson, Abram G. Nelson and William B. Smith, of New Market, and Mrs. George Whitley, of Essex street.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS FOR HOLIDAY DECORATING

CHIEF DOANE WARNS AGAINST USE OF FLIMSY MATERIALS.

While preparations are being made by merchants, churches and householder to put up decorations appropriate to the holidays, timely advice on the subject is offered by Chief T. U. Doane, of the city fire department. A little care in placing flimsy materials generally selected for the purpose, or better still, their non-use entirely, will often be the means of preventing a fire. One such blaze has already been started this season in Plainfield through the use of cotton and a strict observance to the following suggestions made by Chief Doane may save many dollars worth of property:

"Christmas is approaching, churches, stores and dwellings will be decorated. This is as it should be, but a little care and forethought may save many lives, not to speak of much valuable property. In decorating Christmas trees, candles should not be used, or at least not lighted, as the trees are very inflammable and candles are great spurters. The least spark falling in the foliage puts the tree in a blaze instantly. In decorating, a snow effect is desired, mineral wool is a good substitute, and is absolutely fire proof. If children or older persons are to be dressed to represent Santa Claus, or other Christmas characters, all clothing may be made inflammable at a few cents cost. Be very careful in decorating around or near electric lights; if bulbs are to be covered, inflammable decorations can be obtained at a very small cost. No article of wool, cotton, paper, or drapery of any description should be allowed to touch or come close to an electric light. Use particular care with articles made of celluloid, as it is very inflammable, and the slightest spark, or too close contact with heat, will cause it to flame, and when on fire it is almost impossible to extinguish it."

THE CENTURY'S ART FEATURES.

A Number of Agreeable Surprises in the Field of Colored Work Promised Soon.

During the past months many pictures in color have appeared in the pages of The Century, notably: Maxfield Parrish's exquisite paintings for the articles on "Italian Villas and Their Gardens;" Miss Betts's charming pictures of the days of our fathers; the paintings by Frederick W. Stokes illustrating remarkable sky effects; Charles R. Knight's animal studies; Miss Violet Oakley's imaginative studies; Mr. Tobin's portraits of Pope Pius X.; reproductions of J. Wells Champney's pastels; Miss Ellen Bernard Thompson's studies of children; reproductions of paintings by George de Forest Brush, William M. Chase, Laura C. Hills, and others. It is the aim of The Century to confine is experiments in the field of color work to subjects which have uniqueness and an important reason for color treatment. Miss Betts will contribute several other groups typical of the same period, among them "The Christmas Callers," "St Valentine's Day," and "The Serenaders." Mr. Parrish has made a beautiful illustration for a story "The Princess and the Boy;" and the coming year of The Century will contain a number of agreeable surprises in the field of color work.

The Century will continue to print beautiful and representative examples of work by American painters and sculptors. It will have articles on men who are coming to the front in art abroad, including Mucha, Zuloaga, and the German secessionists. An article on "Children's Costumes in the Nineteenth Century" will have exquisite illustrations by Maurice Boutet de Monvel. The late J. L. Gerome will be the subject of reminiscences which will be accompanied by interesting illustrative material. A paper on the Art Influence of Philadelphia by Harrison S. Morris will soon appear.

Other specialty years Timothy Cole, the acknowledged master of wood-engraving of the world, has been in Europe for The Century reproducing the masterpieces of art for the pages of the magazine. Here have appeared the greatest works of the masters of the Italian, Flemish, Dutch and English schools. Mr. Cole is now engaged in reproducing the work of the Spanish masters, and superb examples of their art will appear from time to time. The artists whose work will appear in The Century during 1905 include all the notable illustrators of the present day.

Vaudeville Or Tragedy?

Plainfield is agitating for a new theatre. The city needs it, too, with Charles A. Reed, Mayor Smalley, James E. Martine, Dr. Anderson, Andrew McCardell and "Boss" MacMurray constantly insisting on occupying the centre of the stage.—Newark News.

SUIT FOR HER AFFECTIONS

W. C. Emery Wants Damages From D. Taylor, of Lincoln.

HE ASKS FOR $10,000

Trial Set for Tuesday, December 27, in the Essex County Court.

The Essex County Court opened today at Newark, and included in the long list of cases on the calendar are three of interest to Plainfielders. One of these cases is that of Watson C. Emory, formely of this city, against David Taylor, of Lincoln, whom he sues for $10,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections. Mrs. Emery is now said to be the housekeeper for Mr. Taylor. Robert M. Clark, Esq., represents the plaintiff and George W. Anderson, Esq., assisted by Winfield S. Angleman, Esq., represents the defendant.

This case, which is set down for Tuesday, December 27, promises to be of unusual interest. Several times Mrs. Emory has left her husband, it is said, and for some time has been living at David Talyor's hotel at Lincoln. Mr. and Mrs. Emory at one time lived here and afterward moved to Dunellen. The husband was engaged in the fruit and vegetable business.

Another case ready for trial is that of Alexander Kuskie against the Somerville Woolen Mills, who is suing for the loss of a hand while at work in the mills. Isaac P. Runyon, Esq., assisted by Winfield S. Angleman, Esq., represents the plaintiff and Lindabury, Depue & Faiks the defendant.

The third case is that of Frank A. Champlain, of Newark, against Abram W. Cadmus, of this city, the suit being for the loss of profit on a car of grain sold to the defendant and which he refused to accept, claiming that it was not in the best condition. Brown & Beecher represent the plaintiff and James P. Powers, Esq., the defendant.

LIGENS GOFF MAY BE GRANTED NOW

REPORT THAT COMMON COUNCIL MAY ACT FAVORABLY.

There is every indication that John Goff, of West Front street, will renew his application for a liquor license for his hotel with fair prospects of getting it. Certain influences have been at work, it is said, in his behalf and some believe that he will get the necessary six votes in the Common Council when the application is presented the first of the year.

It has been reported that H. D. Hibbard, the new member from the Second ward, who is a member of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, was one of those who petitioned against the granting of this license a year ago, owing to the proximity of the place to the safe works. This story is now denied and a man well-posted in city affairs says that he would not be surprised to see Mr. Hibbard favor the application, if presented. It is also said that Councilman Charles C. Randolph, the new member from the Fourth ward, is also inclined to favor it. Others who might be counted in favor of it are Frank DeW. Randolph, Stephen Higham, W. L. Gloak, and President Telles, the last named expressing an opinion that he did not believe it to be within the province of the Common Council to compel a man to go two or three miles to get a drink if he wants it. This would give six votes for the license application if the opinion of those who are posted in municipal affairs count for anything.

No doubt influence will be used to defeat Mr. Goff in his efforts to get a license, as there was a year ago, when so many remonstrants in the West End, the city, as well as members of Manroe Avenue church, championed by the pastor, Rev. John McMurray, took such a stand against the license. As the local "machine" seems to be out of favor with some of those in authority, it may be impossible for the members of it to secure many favors during the coming year.

Parish Men's Club.

Following several preliminary meetings it has been decided by the men of Grace church to form a Men's Club. A reception will be given by the club at Truell Court on Wednesday evening, January 4, at 8:15 o'clock and it is hoped that all men of Grace church parish will be present. At this meeting the objects of the club will be explained and the organization completed. The reception will be an informal one.

J. E. Dunn, secretary of the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, has just returned from an extended trip in the South and West. While away he visited some of the largest lumber mills and other business centres.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION IN SUIT AGAINST ENDRESS

CONTINENTAL PAPER BAG CO. MAY APPEAL TO HIGHER COURT.

No cause for action was the verdict brought by the jury of twelve men at Justice Hoff's court Monday afternoon in the contract case of the Continental Paper Bag Company against Fred Endress, of this city. Codington & Swackhamer represented the defendant in the case and H. C. Runyon appeared for the plaintiff. Though no definite action has been taken the case may be appealed by the Continental Paper Bag Company.

The suit was brought for the sum of $60, which the plaintiffs claimed was due for an assignment of goods. Though other business had been transacted between Endress and the Continental Paper Bag Company, the former proved that according to the law no contract was made in the case in question yesterday afternoon, and that though the company wrote saying that certain goods would be shipped, the order was not valid without his signature, which the company was unable to produce.

Both Mr. Endress and his cashier testified in the defense, their statements supporting the assertion that the goods were not ordered. For the plaintiff, as agent of the company and one of the employes in the correspondence department were the witnesses.

After consideration for about twenty minutes, the jury brought in the verdict, in favor of the defendant, that there was no cause for action. The members of the jury were Robert Cook, John Ross, J. Newton Wycoff, Frank Dunham, William Westphal, Jonathan Smith, John A. McKeon, W. H. Brokaw, James D. Smith, David Rogers and Augustus Jenkins.

BELIEVES IN INCREASE OF ASSESSORS' SALARIES

ELSTON M. FRENCH DECLARES THE PRESENT WORK JUSTIFIES IT.

In a recent interview with Elston M. French, who was for six years assessor of the borough of North Plainfield, on the petition which is before the Common Council for an increase in the salary of the city assessors, expressed himself decidedly in favor of the raise.

"The work of the assessors," Mr. French said, "is much harder than many persons suppose. There is a vast amount of figuring to be done in making out the various percentages, which are considerable time." Mr. French furthermore said that as a person entirely disinterested from any personal motive in the proposed raise in salary, he considers it in every way just and reasonable. "Under the new tax law," he said, "the work is made even harder than it was last year, and the different method of making assessments which is prescribed in this law, increases the assessor's duties and also upon his time to a considerable degree."

The petition has been referred to a committee, and will probably be acted upon near the first of the new year.

HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS TO PLAY "THE PRINCESS"

ALFRED TENNYSON'S POEM TO BE PRODUCED AFTER NEW YEAR'S.

The cast for the production of "The Princess" by the members of the junior class at the Plainfield High School has been selected, and it is holding regular rehearsals under the direction of Samuel B. Howe, Jr., of the faculty. The play, as it will be produced, has been dramatized by Miss Elizabeth Winter, a member of the class.

The members of the cast will be Antoinette Ashlom, Edith Hanaford, Louise Klein, Sadie Coyle, A. I. Aldrich, Mary Conover, Bessie Dunham, Cora Ricketts, Mabel Pound, Margaret Demarest, Rose Droll, May Hallett, Gertrude Hunter, Ruth Thompson, Ella Ulrich, Emma Yaegar, Ethel Beloe, Bertha Hill and Elizabeth Winter; Stuart Freeman, Samuel Bogart, Malcolm Davis, Hudson Barr, Jerome Cline, Howard Freeman; accompanists, Blanche Heidelolf; stage manager, Arthur Whitney; business manager, Leslie Palmer.

The date for this entertainment has not yet been set, but will take place after New Year's in Franklin Hall.

Christmas goods, varied and extensive, in all kinds of china ware, lamps, pottery, bronze figures, and bisque ornaments, are at Gavett's. Give your husband a desk electric lamp stand or some attractive oriental ornament. Gavett has them.

EQUAL SUFFRAGISTS MEET

Mrs. F. H. Hall Explains Protest Against Oklohoma Bill.

ENTHUSIASTIC SESSION

Women Object to Statehood Measure Because It Denies Them the Right to Vote.

The members of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield were greatly disappointed in not having the pleasure of hearing Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell as their meeting, held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William H. Riley, of No. 11 Myrtle avenue. Word was received that illness prevented her from coming here. It is hoped to have her speak before the league in the near future.

Despite the storm, there was a good attendance of members yesterday and all were interested in a report given by Mrs. Riley of the recent suffrage convention held at Jersey City. One thing that impressed her the most was the unusually friendly relationship shown between the various clubs, as well as those who are not directly identified with the movement. Mrs. Riley believed that the convention had resulted in advancing the cause of equal suffrage very much.

Mrs. Florence Hewn Hall, president of the league, who presided at the meeting, called the members' attention to the protest that is being entered against the admission of Oklohoma and Indian Territory as one State into the Union and denying the women the right of suffrage. There is now a bill in Congress to unite these two places under the name of Oklohoma and admit it to the Union, but the thing objected to by the women is that which denies them the right to vote and take part in the government of the State.

Circulars have been printed and circulated among the equal suffragists generally throughout the United States and protests are being sent to Washington in large numbers. The protest was unanimously adopted at the meeting yesterday and the sense of the members will be forwarded to the members of Congress.

The protest also says that "the women of the country should now protest against the women of the Southwest being ranked with the classes justly disfranchised, any other member of which may by effort, behavior or lapse of time, achieve enfranchisement."

Before adjournment the league decided to meet on Wednesday, Jan. 4.

WHITTIER PUPILS SET DATE FOR PRODUCTION

"KORONATION OF KRIS KRINGLE" WILL BE GIVEN DECEMBER 22.

The date for the Whittier School production of "The Koronation of Kris Kringle," a musical entertainment combining solos, recitations and choruses, has been set for Thursday evening, December 22. It will be given in full costume at the Franklin School hall. Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music at the public schools, and Miss Addie Parker Jackson are training the pupils for this production, which will be the most extensive wich any grammar or primary school in the city has ever attempted.

Those who will take part in the entertainment are Monroe Staats, Russel Abbott, William P. Westphal, LeRoy Woodhull, Charles Loizeaux, Herbert Grant, Guion Fountain, Karl Oakley, John Yoss, Elmer Bohan, John Rittenhouse, Harold Miller, John Hopewell, and the Misses Ella Case, Marion Mann, Bessie Alpaugh, Irene Dunham, Ethel Van Winkle, Helen Rogers, Lulu Ormsbee, Frances Rittenhouse and Florence Dickerson.

The above are those who have prominent parts in the cast either in solos or recitations, while the entire school will take part in the choruses of the cantata, which are four in number. There will be nineteen solos by members of the cast in addition to the recitations and dialogues with which the little play abounds.

Besides getting the best quality of groceries and meats at S. Schauer & Co.'s store on West Front street, you will receive a liberal supply of trading stamps with every purchase. These are valuable and can be redeemed for useful articles with which to furnish your home.

TO ENJOIN MUNICIPALITY

Residents May Try to Prevent Disposal Plant Operations.

OBJECT TO ODORS

Law Favorable to City, the Sewage Disposal Plant Case Being Cited As a Precedent.

There is a report in the West End that in case the Common Council adopts the municipal system of the collection of garbage and attempts to burn the refuse matter in the old Plainfield Sanitary Company plant, recently purchased by the city and located on DeKalb avenue, steps will be taken to stop such action and legal redress will be sought if the Common Council denies the request of the residents in the vicinity of the town.

That the city intends to make use of this plant is almost a foregone conclusion. The expenditure of $9,100 for the plant, and the publicity given through a discussion of the subject early in the year, leads those in a position to know that next year an effort will be made to introduce the municipal system of the collection and disposal of garbage. The Board of Health, as well as nearly every physician in the city, favors the system, and a majority of the physicians took an active part in the movement to secure its adoption this year. A lack of funds for the purpose defeated the measure.

The Board of Health has not by any means dropped the subject and just as soon as the members see their way clear to advocate its adoption they will do so. However, the ground for the petition of the residents of the West End against burning garbage there cannot be denied. When the plant was operated by the Plainfield Sanitary Company there was constant objection to the smell, and there are a number of citizens who claim that no matter what improvements are made the plant will not work satisfactorily. They point to the fact that other cities much larger than Plainfield have given up the cremation system, because it could not be worked successfully.

To put the plan in working order a considerable sum will have to be expended and there are persons interested in the system who claim that garbage can be burned and not throw off any undesirable odor. The West End residents naturally have a grievance against the city for locating the sewage disposal plant in that section, and they think it is manifestly unfair to operate a crematory plant for garbage disposal there, saying that it is adding insult to injury.

If the city decides to operate this plant, it will no doubt have the law on its side, as in the case of the sewage disposal beds. Mrs. Milliken made a test case against the city claiming personal injury, but the courts upheld the city in a long fight and this would no doubt be true if any action is brought against the city for the operation of the garbage disposal plant.

Those who are against the proposed system refer to an offer made the city by David Hand, of Nesberwood, in which he agreed to take the garbage and pay a price for it, if delivered to him. This would appear to be a more desirable way of disposing of the garbage.

CRACK SHOTS CONTEST IN GUN CLUB TOURNAMENT

H. KELLER AND WILLIAMS DEFEAT T. H. KELLER, JR., AND VOSSELLER.

In what might be termed a small blizzard, with the snow falling fast and a howling wind from West by North, members of the Plainfield Gun Club and experts from New York and other places had a fairly successful shoot at the traps Saturday afternoon. There were fourteen contestants.

Among the experts in attendance were "Wild Bert" Williams, Harry Welles, Jack Fanning, T. H. Keller, Jr., and "Sim" Glover. Keller shot fairly well, making an average of 70 per cent., the best of the day. An interesting fifty-bird match took place between Keller and H. P. Vosseler, the latter a member of the club, and Harold Keller and "Wild Bert" Williams. The latter team won easily. Welles and Fanning competed with seventy birds, the former breaking sixty-three to his opponent's sixty-two. Glover had an off day and for that reason did not do any match shooting.

Wagon at Fault.

The accident to the Holland automobile Saturday, was not caused by the exploding of a tire as first stated, but to the efforts of the chauffeur to avoid striking a carriage which pulled in front of him during his warning. The front wheel of the machine struck a curb projection and the tire explosion followed. Mrs. Holland was in the auto but suffered no injury.

STATE'S NATIONAL GUARD

Jersey Figures Prominently in Secretary of War's Report.

STRENGTH IS 4,335

State Gets $23,937.24 of the $1,000,000 Provided As Military Fund for the States.

New Jersey figures rather conspicuously in the annual report of the Secretary of War. Estimates for the road to Fort Mott, N. J., for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, amount to $10,000.

The strength of the organized militia of New Jersey is as follows: General officers, one; general staff officers, thirty-nine; regimental officers, eighty-five; company officers, 179; total commissioned officers, 304; non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates, 4,335, aggregating a total strength of 4,639.

New Jersey gets $23,937.24 of the $1,0000,000 provided as an appropriation for the militia and apportioned to the States, Territories and District of Columbia, and also a representation of twelve out of a total representation of 476.

Under the provisions of Section 6 and 18 of the militia act of January 21, 1903, there has been issued to each of the States and Territories a sufficient number of magazine arms and equipments pertaining thereto to fully arm the organized militia of the State or Territory, according to the strength of that militia on the date of the approval of the militia law. New Jersey has received 4,860 rifles and 306 carbines.

The great benefit already derived from the application of the provisions of the militia law can be understood when it is noticed that since September 1, 1903, number of States and Territories have drawn upon the government for funds from the annual appropriation provided by the revised statutes, as amended, for the purpose of paying either in whole or in part the expenses of pay, subsistence and transportation of such portions of their organized militia as were designated to participate in actual field or camp service for instruction. In several cases the funds so obtained were utilized for the purpose of paying the expenses of State and Territorial rifle teams, which participated in matches at Sea Girt and other places. New Jersey drew funds for encampment purposes in 1904 as well as for the expenses for State rifle teams.

The number of officers and enlisted men in New Jersey present at and absent from the special inspection of the militia organizations were as follows: Present, 356 officers and 3,911 enlisted men; absent, thirteen officers and 305 enlisted men. This was a percentage in absenteeism of 7.09 in 1904 as against a percentage of 8.49 in 1903. Only three States made a better showing in attendance last year than New Jersey, namely: Rhode Island, New York and Minnesota. Colorado made the banner record in absenteeism, 45.21 per cent. of men and officers failing to answer roll call.

The appropriations in New Jersey for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, are as follows: For a powder depot at Dover, $55,985 43; for proving grounds, Sandy Hook, $223,386; for sea walls at Sandy Hook, $74,000.

KEAN WANTS ANOTHER U. S. JUDGESHIP FOR N. J.

BILL INTRODUCED IN CONGRESS FOR A SECOND JURIST.

Senator Kean has introduced a bill providing for an additional judge of the District Court of the United States for the district of New Jersey. It has, for some time, been felt that the volume of business in that district is so large that one judge cannot properly attend to it, hence the provision for the second judge.

The President last week sent to the Senate the name of James Johnston, of New Jersey, to be Consul-General at Hankow, China.

Representative Ira W. Wood, of the Fourth district, introduced a bill appropriating $100,000 for the enlargement of the postoffice building at Trenton.

COLD in HEAD

BOOK NEWS.

The Library's Periodicals.

The Public Library has just brought out in its series of class lists an important list of its periodical publications. This is provided with an index showing just what periodical literature the Library contains on a given subject. An idea of the extent of the Library's resources in this line is gained by a brief examination of this list, which shows that 107 subjects are covered by 395 periodicals. Of these 171 are currently received, an unusually large number for a town library of this size.

Further examination brings out that though many sets are incomplete, there is an excellent proportion of completed sets, of which many are of great value. Thus the Library not only has complete set of the more popular magazines as Atlantic, Century, Cosmopolitan, etc., but others which are becomingly increasingly valuable and difficult to procure, as for example Nature, Popular Science Monthly, Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and of Mining Engineers, American Journal of Science and Arts (which begun in 1818), American Society of Civil Engineers, and of Mechanical Engineers, British Association for the Advancement of Science, Cassier's Magazine, Forum, Journal of the Franklin Institute, Journal of the Iron and Steel Institute, Mineral Industry, Political Science Quarterly, and many others which might be mentioned. Many of these are not to be found except in the very large city libraries, or in libraries of special subjects.

As not only much of current interest appears in the periodical form, but also much of the greatest scientific value appears practically only in that form, it is very necessary that the modern library should carry a large subscription list, while many of the sets being indexed in periodical indexes these files make additions of permanent value to the reference department.

Not only are the wants of the general reader considered by the supply of such periodicals as the Century, Scribner, Atlantic, Harper, etc., but attention is also paid to those of the professional man or woman, the teacher, the bookish reader or the lover of art or social worker as is shown by the names of such periodicals as American Architect, Lancet, Educational Review, Athenaeum, Dial, Journal of School Geography, American Chemical Journal, Engineering and Mining Journal, Art Journal, Municipal Times, Publications of the American Economic Association, etc.

These are but a few of the instances of the Library's efforts to supply the best periodical literature on the subjects for which there is demand.

Of especial interest and value to engineers, is the Library's rich collection on the subject of Engineering, a collection made possible by the Babcock bequest. This collection exceeds in importance that of any other public library in the State.

But while the Library has cause to congratulate itself on both the quality and quantity of its periodical literature, as the list show here is yet much to be done in the way of completing sets.

To those known to be interested in the Library, and to others making application, copies of these lists will be given, and those receiving them it is hoped will give some examination to the list with a view of assisting the Library in the completion of its sets.

It should be said here, that of the popular illustrated magazines the Library can often make use of several copies, so although these may not be noted as wanting, they will nevertheless be very acceptable, and if the Library should be overstocked with these, it is in the way of knowing of other institutions which would care for them.

Many instances have been brought to the attention of the Librarian of periodicals and books being given where they would be of little or no value, and of their being destroyed, because their perplexed owners have not known what to do with an ever increasing and space consuming collection of periodicals.

The Library is already greatly indebted to its many friends who have from time to time made additions of value to its periodical collection. Among these may be noted, in addition to the various societies the following persons: Miss L. S. Hinchard, Miss Laura Boorman, W. R. Cook, Andrew Gavett, Hugh Hastings, A. V. D. Honeyman, Miss M. L. Hotchkiss, E. S. Hyatt, Mrs. M. L. Kellogg, Rev. K. P. Ketcham, Mrs. R. C. Leonard, Mrs. E. Milliken, Appleton Morgan, J. K. Morse, Rev. T. L. Murphy, Dr. W. H. Murray, F. B. O'Connor, C. F. Opdyke, C. O. Osgood, Miss Louise Patten, E. C. Pearson, Mrs. R. H. Radford, W. L. Saunders, Col. Julian Scott, Miss Julia Scribner, Miss Mary and Miss Florence Tweedy, Mason W. Tyler and Miss L. Vaughan.

Notice. The Library notes will appear in the Monday issue of The Daily Times hereafter, instead of the Thursday issue, as heretofore.

DRAWS SNUG SALARY

HEAD OF ENGLISH CHURCH NEED NEVER GO BEGGING.

Receives $75,000 Per Year and Lives in a Gorgeous Palace—Now on a Visit to United States and Canada.

New York Special.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Randall Thomas Davidson, archbishop of Canterbury, is now on a visit to the United States, the first official visit ever made overseas by an archbishop of Canterbury during his term of office.

Mr. Davidson is the ninety-fifth archbishop of Canterbury, dating from the foundation of the see, in A. D. 597. He was born in Edinburgh on April 7, 1848. His parents were pure Scotch, and on his mother's side Dr. Davidson descended from King Robert III. of Scotland. His father was a professional man in moderate circumstances, and the son was sent to Harrow. From Harrow he went to Trinity college, Oxford, where he was graduated in 1871. He was ordained in 1874 and for three years was curate of a small church at Dartford, in Kent. Shortly after leaving college Dr. Davidson was accidentally shot while hunting, an accident that threatened to cut short his career, but which, as it proved, however, to be a happy accident. The young man's misfortune aroused the sympathy of Archbishop Tait, of Canterbury, and he was invited to become the archbishop's chaplain and private secretary. In 1878 the young chaplain married Miss Edith Tait, the primate's daughter. Archbishop Tait died in 1882, when Dr. Davidson received from Queen Victoria the appointment of dean of Windsor. He was a great favorite with Queen Victoria, and when Archbishop Benson died she expressed the wish that Dr. Davidson should become his successor. Dr. Davidson, however, requested permission to decline the honor, and Dr. Temple was nominated to the see of Canterbury. In 1889 Dr. Davidson was appointed to the see of Rochester, and in 1895, his health being poor, he accepted the see of Winchester, where his residence was in Farnham castle, situated in one of the most beautiful and salubrious spots in England. On the death of Archbishop Temple, Dr. Davidson was again offered the see of Canterbury, and this time accepted.

The salary of the archbishop of Canterbury is $75,000 per year. This salary is derived from the treasury of the church, the income of which is estimated at $40,000,000. The archbishop's official residence is at "Lambeth Place," which is situated on the banks of the Thames, almost opposite the houses of parliament in Westminster, but this palace the archbishop entertains in great state during the London season. Dr. Davidson is described as a "plain-looking man, neither decorative nor impressive." He is said to have a keen sense of humor, and, like all men of humor, he is exceptionally broad-minded, which is shown by his intimate friendship with the clergy of different religious denominations. The archbishop of Canterbury enjoys many prerogatives. The most important is the right of heading the commission of dignitaries of the realm who form a council of regency in the event of an interregnum. The last occasion on which the primate of all England was called upon to fill this office was on the death of Queen Anne. Several days elapsed before her successor, George I., reached England from Hanover. The archbishop also enjoys the privilege of ranking next to royalty, and on all state occasions he takes precedence over all others in the king's domain. Curiously enough, the wife of the archbishop of Canterbury has no official rank whatever, and is addressed the same as any lady in private life.

Defies God and Falls Dead.

Consternation reigned in the little town of Allen, in southern Maryland, when the strange death of Walter M. Whitney, a townsman of Allen, but one of the most popular residents of the place. One Sunday night Whitney was conversing with some friends, when he suddenly exclaimed: "I defy the Almighty to strike me dead." Instantly Whitney fell to the floor, and when those about him picked him up, he was dead. The tragic manner of Whitney's death not only cast a gloom over the community, but his defiance is looked upon as a sudden judgment from the Almighty. While Whitney frequently expressed no belief in God, he was a general favorite, and was much sought after as a companion.

Stole Piano Tuner's Teeth.

A mean rogue lately figured in a rascally deed in Potsdam, Prussia. A piano tuner strolling along a lonely road was knocked down by a footpad, who rifled his pockets of all his cash amounting to about 60 cents. The rascal then removed three of the victim's teeth to get the gold with which they were filled.

FURNISH HELP TO GOTHAM

New York Has Over Three Hundred Intelligence Offices — Vary Widely in Character.

The intelligence office, as distinguished from employment bureaus, is one which furnishes household help exclusively, is the distinction in Atlantic. Such offices are of great number and variety. New York has more than 300 such offices, and other cities proportionately, while many others combine this with other kinds of employment. They range from well-furnished, adequately equipped houses or suites of rooms in desirable localities, with good business methods and systems, down to a single room in a tenement, which is the kitchen, dining-room, parlor and office by day, and by night the sleeping quarters, not only of the family, but of any unlodged girls. It is not unusual in such rooms to find a light from five to ten people. The office with brownstone front frequently does less business than the saloon or underground offices. The former secures its employes by attractive advertisements, keeps records, gives receipts; the latter have runners with pockets full of cards, who accost girls on the streets, steal their pocketbooks, until they agree to go to the address furnished, and fight with each other over girls they claim to have discovered, until the police interfere.

LAY BLAME ON NORTH WIND

South Americans Say Breeze Is the Cause of Diseases, Distemper, Insanity and Murder.

In the neighborhood of Buenos Ayres in South America there is a north wind which sweeps over plains covered with luxuriant vegetation and charged with moisture, according to the Chicago Daily News. The effects produced in the human body are in general lassitude and relaxation. The pores of the skin are opened, inducing great liability to colds, rheumatism and all consequences of checked of perspiration. The damp wind of La Plata seems to affect the temper and disposition of the inhabitants. The irritability and ill humor it excites in them amounts in little less than a temporary derangement of their faculties. It is a common thing for men among the better classes to shut themselves up in their houses during its continuation and lay aside all business until it has passed; while among the lower classes it is always remarked that cases of quarreling and bloodshed are more frequent during the north winds than at any other time. Even murderers are said to lay to it the blame of their foul deeds. No sooner, however, does the southwest wind, blowing from the dry and snowy summits of the Andes, set in than health and comfort and peace are restored.

INDIANS INTERPRET VISIONS

Red Men Give Queer Solutions for Visions—Flying Taken to Mean Short Life.

According to Charles Gibson this is the interpretation Indians give to certain dreams: If you are a young man or woman and dream of flying it is a sure sign you are short-lived and it is time you were preparing your business to do your flying at some other place. If you dream of falling from the housetops or just above, you will reach the 50 or 60 notch. If you dream that you are away above the treetops, then you are good to live up into the nineties, and if you dream that you are bumping the stars with your round head, then you will reach the century-notch. To dream that you are solid with a black-eyed beauty is a sure sign that you will kill a fine buck deer before you sleep again. To dream of blood means also meat in the pot. To dream of your would-be mother-in-law breaking a bow over your head is a sure sign that you will not be her dear beloved son-in-law. If you dream of eating sofky with a deceased friend, make your will before another sun goes down.

COW ASSISTS AT WEDDING

Shohola, Pa., Bovine Remains in Kitchen and Thirsty Guests Are Made Happy.

A strange wedding celebration took place at Shohola, Pa., recently. Herman Hipsman married Miss Christena Kulm. After the ceremony the couple went to the bridegroom's home, a stock farm, where all the neighborhood had congregated. The stock of beverages gave out and Hipsman brought one of his best Jersey cows to the kitchen. Each person who desired a drink had only to go to the cow. She was a good representative of her stock and did not go dry, although one man was kept busy doing the milking.

Oldest Fishes.

The oldest inhabitants of the New York aquarium are the striped bass, which have been there for ten years, having been placed in one of the floor pools before the building was opened to the public. In May, 1894, 55 specimens, weighing from a quarter of a pound to four pounds, were secured, 37 of which have survived. Most of those that were lost died in the first year, and in the last four years not one has died.

New Use for the Shark.

The shark, which is so abundant in the waters of Central America, is to be utilized in commercial products. A company has been formed which converts sharks' fins into jelly and tinned soup, makes fine machinery oil from their livers, handsome leather, equal to alligator's, from their skins, walking sticks from their backbones, and numerous articles from their jaw bones and teeth.

ALL TALENTED MUSICIANS

Richard Arnold String Sextet Entertains Large Audience.

FINE PROGRAMME

Artists Warmly Applauded and Many Encores Given — The Patronesses of the Affair.

An audience that was thoroughly appreciative of classic compositions, rendered in true style by artists of exceptional ability, almost filled the Casino last Thursday to hear the Richard Arnold Sextet, assisted by Joseph McIntyre, pianist. It was in every sense of the word an assemblage of musical lovers. For over an hour the audience was delightfully entertained with a programme of excellence and encores were generously given in response to hearty applause.

Perhaps, the distinctive features of the concert was the violin playing of Richard Arnold and that of Joseph McIntyre on the piano. There was a charm about their renditions that called for genuine appreciation, while the work of the other members of the sextet left nothing to be desired.

Mr. Arnold displayed that mastery of the violin for which he has long been noted. In his rendition of "Romanze" and Rondo Mieganz by H. Wieniawski, he was vigorous, yet his fine delicate touch of the stringed instrument gave a finish that was enjoyed to a high degree. The same was true of Mr. McIntyre. He gave Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsodie No. 8," and "Variations in Theme by Denisetti," by Thalberg, together with selections in a lighter vein for encores. He had complete mastery of the piano, the harmony and touch being perfect.

The opening number of the programme was entitled "Russian Suite," by Richard Wuerst; (a) Vorspiel, (b) Tanzweise, by the sextet. Liszt's composition by Mr. McIntyre then preceded the violin solo by Mr. Arnold. Two very delightful number were Bach's "Aria," and Czibulka's "Fly Minuett," by the sextet. Other renditions by Mr. McIntyre were followed by the concluding number by the sextet. This was Jadassohn's "Serenade.—Op. 80," and was an appropriate ending to the programme, bringing out all of the possibilities of the stringed instruments.

The sextet was comprised of Richard Arnold, Herman Sevens and Sebastian Laendner, violins; Carl Binhack, viola; Arthur Severn, violoncello, and August Kalkhof, double bass.

The concert, a subscription affair, was given under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Lamson and Miss Anderson two talented musicians of this city. The patronesses were Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, Mrs. Paul Taylor Brown, Mrs. Leighton Oalkins, Mrs. H. Henry Depew, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard, Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. George F. Meiick, Mrs. Samuel Merwin, Mrs. J. Kirkland Nelson, Mrs. Arthur S. Phelps, Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, Miss Hubbell, Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde, Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, Mrs. S. Durel Lounsbury, Mrs. Ulifton Wharton, Jr., Mrs. Alfred N. Sireull, Mrs. George A. Strong, Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. Howard C. Tracy and the Misses Tweedy.

GRACELAND SOON TO HAVE A SILK FACTORY

MAY RESULT IN ITS STATION BEING REBUILT.

Plans have been perfected by a New York silk manufacturing concern in which local capital is invested, to remove its plant from the metropolis to a new building soon to be erected at Graceland. The ground has already been purchased and work on the factory will be started as soon as the contracts are let. The concern is not a new one by any means and is making the removal simply to gain more room for its growing business without incurring the big expense of increased rentals to which it is now subject. Martin Rose, of Franklin place, is one of the Philadelphians who has holdings in the company.

With the establishment of the factory, Graceland is likely to undergo a boom that will result in the re-establishment of its depot on the New Jersey Central. One was maintained there some years ago when the place was first built up but the patronage fell off and the company closed it up. The building became a rendesvous for tramps and was finally torn down. Since that time many more houses have been erected in the vicinity and with factory employes going back and forward to other places the handicap may again be placed on the railroad map.

R. R. ESCAPES TAXES ELIZABETH 'TIS SAID

JERSEY CENTRAL HIT AT TAXATION COMMISSION HEARING.

Newark, Orange and Elizabeth interests were represented Friday at a meeting in Newark, N. J., of the New Jersey Equal Taxation Commission, and the trend of the arguments was that unjustifiable discrimination against private citizens and in favor of railroads exists. All the speakers urged that there should be one rate for all property in the various municipalities of the State.

Heading the Elizabeth delegation was Mayor Patrick J. Ryan. The chief argument was made by Judge Patrick H. Gilhooley, who read a brief which had been approved by the city Council and officials of Elizabeth. He showed that in 1884 the State Board of Assessors placed a tax valuation of $1,261,630.85 upon the second class property of the Central Railroad in Elizabeth. In 1902 the same Board valued the same property at only $768,659, a decrease of $493,961.85. In the latter year and in 1903 the railroad built extensive shops and other works in Elizabethport, and in 1904 the entire assessed valuation was $1,108,252, which is $153,385 less than in 1884, despite the addition of land and buildings acquired by the company since 1884.

MRS. FORCE'S FUNERAL.

Rev. Dr. Schenck Praises Dead Woman's Character.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Benjamin R. Force were held from the late home in East Front street, Friday afternoon, and notwithstanding the obsequies were private, the house was well filled with relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity church, of which Mrs. Force was a member, officiated and spoke of her exemplary Christian life and character, and of her faithfulness in attending the services of her church, especially the prayer-meetings in which she always took so much interest.

There were many floral tributes, including a wreath from the consistory of Trinity Reformed church of which Mr. Force is a deacon, a bouquet from Miss E. C. Benedict's Sunday-school class, of which Mr. Force's daughter is a member and several other tributes from relatives, friends and neighbors.

The interment was in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers, members of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church, were A. K. Willett, H. E. Gayle, T. R. VanZandt and F. E. Smith.

Miss Campbell Heard From in Egypt.

Miss Elizabeth C. G. Campbell, who arranged for a concert at the Casino and then failed to give it after disposing of a large number of tickets, has been heard from in a similar way at Seneca Falls, N. Y. She was to give a musical entertainment at a hall in that city and after the seat sale had progressed nicely Miss Campbell called it off because of an attack of "tonsilitis." The newspaper accounts do not state that Miss Campbell returned the money and it is hardly likely as she forgot to do it in Plainfield.

Miss Hyler, of Orchard place, who recently underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported to be doing well.

F. C. Hinni, Jr., Says He Guided the Auto.

BLAMES THE VICTIM

Man Declares That Lad Darted in Front of Auto—No Suit to be Brought.

A partial denial of the facts surrounding the automobile accident to Francis Barry and the happenings immediately afterward, was made to Chief Marshal Weiss yesterday, by Frederick C. Hinni, Jr., of East Orange, who was guiding the machine when it ran the boy down. He called at borough police headquarters for the first time since the affair and declared that he remained away upon the advice of counsel, so charge of any kind having been preferred against him.

Hinni said that he was sending the auto along at a moderate pace on Somerset street and that near Greenbrook road he attempted to pass a slow-going wagon. As he was abreast of the horses, the Barry boy darted in front of them, directly against his machine, and was thrown down. Hinni and a friend picked him up and at the time he did not appear to be as badly hurt as he was.

The boy, Hinni said, told them he lived in a house directly opposite and they took him at his word, leaving him on the curb. There was no attempt to escape the consequences of the affair, Hinni said, and he regretted the fact that he did not discern the severity of the boy's injuries.

Before leaving town, Hinni conferred with William Barry, the father of the boy, and it is understood that no proceedings, either criminal or civil, will be started against him. The borough police are powerless to act unless Barry prefers formal charges.

CHRISTMAS MAILS WILL BE HEAVY THIS YEAR

POSTOFFICE AUTHORITIES WILL BE PREPARED FOR THE USUAL RUSH.

Considering the increase in ordinary mail matter which the records show between November of 1903 and 1904, the authorities at the local postoffice are expecting an extra heavy Christmas mail this season, though as yet it has been only slightly felt. The reports of a year ago show a decided increase in the amount of all kinds of mail handled by the local department, for delivering the packages, some idea may be gained of the vast amount of increase work with which the authorities have to contend at Christmas time.

The rush this year will likely come about the twentieth of the month and will continue until the twenty-sixth. The local department will be especially prepared to handle the surplus mail matter, as three assistants will be added to the force. All of the six substitute carriers will be employed and all other available help kept in readiness.

Plainfielders Going Abroad,

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street, sail on the Deutschland on Saturday, January 7, for Australia. On the same steamer and the same date Mrs. J. B. Dumont, Mrs. Carlles and their father and brother, J. Howard Wright and J. Dunbar Wright will sail to spend the winter in Egypt.

Coming Nuptial Event.

The engagement is announced of Miss Amelia Bremmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bremmer, of Greenbrook road, and Robert Laramour, of West Sixth street, this city. The wedding will be celebrated in January.

In reply to inquiries we have pleasure in announcing that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is like the solid preparation of that admirable remedy in that it cleanses and heals membranes affected by nasal catarrh. There is no drying or sneezing. The Liquid Cream Balm is adapted to use by patients who have trouble in inhaling through the nose and prefer spraying. The price, including spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George Duffell, of this city, have been visiting relatives at German Valley.

"TUNE" PREDICTS VICTORY

"Mayor" Melick Sees Democratic Success in 1908.

SKETCH OF THE MAN

Familiar Figure in Plainfield—His Looks Are Deceiving, for in Fact He's Shrewd.

Hardly a man in the business section of Plainfield, to say nothing of the great majority of farmers throughout Somerset County, needs any introduction to "Tune" Melick. His "don't it beat all," repeated three times in succession, is familiar to all. Melick seldom says anything without saying it twice over again in rapid succession, and that's how he came to reiterate again and again in a reporter for The Daily Press yesterday that "We're after them in 1908. Parker was a lame one but there'll be a good boss on the track next time." Mr. Melick voted the Democratic ticket just as early as he was able to put a ballot in the box and he takes his stokes like he does his favorite beverage.

"Mayor Tune" Melick, of Pluckemin

Tunis J. Melick was born in 1849 in Hunterdon County. He has resided in Somerset County for the past fifteen years and now lives on one of the most fertile and prolific farms in the heart of Pluckamin a short distance from the Kenilworth farm. His father lives on a farm near Germantown, Hunterdon County. "Tune," as he is always called, has an interesting family of grown children who are well educated. There are four girls and two boys. These children are decidedly smart and above the average in that direction, considering the limited educational means that the country in which they were reared afforded.

"Tune" knows the value of a dollar and it is a clever man who beats him in a deal. He can be seen at almost all the Democratic gatherings that take place in New Jersey—such as State, Gubernatorial, Congressional and at all county conventions that assemble in Somerset, his benign countenance and fog-horn voice with his hearty laughter accompaniment, is to be heard. His voice is the sign-post that has made him famous. A sound hearty laugh follows all his remarks. He usually repeats two or three words when he wishes to emphasize. For instance "Tell 'em, tell 'em, tell 'em boys! We're going to win, we're going to win. Ha ha ha!" is a way that attention is first drawn to him. That fog-horn voice of "Tune" Melick's sings out in forceful notes way above the average speaker and has often netted an old campaigner who was addressing an audience on the hustings.

Melick does a huckstering business in an agricultural way and he can be seen almost every week either in Somerville, Bound Brook, Plainfield, Elizabeth or Newark, looking for the best prices on live stock. He takes to market turkeys, chickens, shoats, guinea hens, in fact, almost anything that a nimble sixpence can be realized on that is produced from a farm.

He knows the State pretty thoroughly, the central portion of it particularly. Known in every one of the twenty-one counties of New Jersey he pos*sesses a pretty accurate knowledge of* public men, especially those who have been in the public notice for a score of years or so. A firemen's parade is not complete in central New Jersey unless he is present. A great big awkward farmer he first appears to be but afterward he is beheld as a man brimful of fun with an eye to business. He never sleeps; is always on the lookout to attract attention or make a business deal.

Such is the personality of Tunis J. Melick. He is a person that has no doubt, that is so far as known.

Mr. Melick only a few weeks ago returned from an extended trip to the World's Fair at St. Louis, where he went as the guest of a party of Jerseymen who were bent on having a jolly time and brought him along as general funmaker to the party. He fulfilled that duty to their entire satisfaction. A writer under the nom de plume of "A Tilden Democrat" in one of the Somerset County papers some years ago frequently used the name of "Mayor" before Mr. Melick's name and from that time he has been best known as "Mayor" Melick of Pluckamin, New Jersey."

Tunis J. Melick had a brother who was a stock raiser in the Indian Territory. A few years ago he came to Chicago with a train load of cattle. After he had sold the same and procured the money he was waylaid and sandbagged. He never recovered his mind from that time and is now at the State Hospital at Morris Plains.

TO REMOVE LIGHT PLANT

Report That P. S. C.'s Local Electric Department is to Go.

POWER FROM METUCHEN

Rumor That Corporation Will Have a Central Plant at Metuchen to Furnish Surrounding Towns.

Work that will eventually lead to the location of the electric light plant of the Public Service Corporation in this city at Metuchen is now underway, employes of the company being employed to string the necessary wires to Metuchen. While this change will not be made immediately it is the purpose of the company to effect it as soon as convenient. The idea of moving the local electric light plant is chiefly because the company will be able to save a considerable sum in taxes and besides it will be more centrally situated to light Rahway, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Amboy and other towns and cities, including Plainfield and the country districts.

The tax on the Plainfield plant is a heavy one and figured on the rate of $2.59 aggregates a considerable sum. In Metuchen the rate is much lower and is sure to be for some years to come. Some time ago there was talk of centralizing the electric interests of the company and plans for its consummation are about complete. Of course the electric machinery in the plant here would be moved to Metuchen where it is proposed to erect a large modern structure particularly adapted as a power station. It is said that a portion of the power needed for the operation of the trolley cars will be furnished from the station at Metuchen, while the power from the Cranford station will be used as at present. This change would necessitate the city making other arrangements for the blowing of the fire alarm, but there has been more or less talk about doing away with this whistle.

ELKS TO PROVIDE FEAST FOR 300 CHILDREN

CHRISTMAS DINNER TO BE GIVEN TO BOYS AND GIRLS.

Aided by Miss Sarah VanBoskerck, of the Organized Aid Association, Plainfield lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., is making arrangements to treat at least 300 Plainfield boys and girls to a turkey dinner. It will be given Saturday, December 24, at a place yet to be designated, and will be on a sumptuous scale. The plans are now in the hands of a committee and the details will be perfected before next week's meeting of the lodge.

In previous years, the Organized Aid Association has given the poor children of the city and borough a Christmas tree entertainment at which each received a present. It is possible this affair will be merged with the dinner and Miss VanBoskerck is proving invaluable in preparing the plans.

RECEPTION AND TEA.

Affair Given by Mrs. Garrigues and Miss Maxwell.

Mrs. William A. Garrigues and her sister, Miss Eleanor Maxwell, gave a reception and tea Thursday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at their home, 731 Watchung avenue, the affair being largely attended by society folk from this city and the borough. The home was appropriately decorated with holly and Christmas greens, the prevailing colors being red and green.

Mrs. A. G. Maxwell, mother of Mrs. Garrigues and Miss Maxwell, assisted with these women in receiving: Mrs. Frederick Wills, Mrs. T. S. Sheridan, Mrs. Jennie Harriott, Mrs. J. Sheridan Zelie, Mrs. A. T. Sisuson and Mrs. P. S. Sullivant. The young women assisting in the dining room were Miss Anna Davis, Miss Helen Davis, Miss Katherine Stewart, Miss Ida Stewart, Miss Anna Murphy, Miss May Tennant and Miss May Redman.

Will Visit Her Old Home.

Mrs. Lena Hellstrom, of Watchung avenue, steward at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, will sail on the Campania on Wednesday, December 14, for Sweden, where she will spend the winter at her former home. Her husband will accompany her.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Dec. 15: "The New Testament Standard of Experience and Life"—Pledge Meeting—Matt. vi, 19; John xv, 10-16.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES.

We should keep our pledge constantly before our eyes that it may be in mind and determine our purpose.

"I will earnestly seek for myself and do what I can to help others attain the highest New Testament standard of experience and life."

This is the gist of the whole league life. We are to be earnest seekers; not merely easy going moralists, but determined strivers after good, after the best. We are to seek for ourselves first of all, but we are not to stop with self. We are to get and use all good, but our brother is to share in our good things. We may have wine and oil and beast and money and be able to secure speed, safety and comfort, but we may not act the Levite or priest in passing our needy fellow man by. We will use our wine to wash his wounds, our oil for healing, our beast to bear his riding and our money for his needs. We will seek life and help him to seek it equally with ourselves.

That is praying the prayer "Thy kingdom come." We are to help its incoming.

The right intention steadily kept is the prime essential in all this. But it is not all. There is more to our pledge that follows from this first part. Of course, . . there are usefulness and participation, shunning the evil and practicing the good.

"I will abstain from all those forms of worldly amusement forbidden by the discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and to which I in good conscience can not participate, the religious meetings of the chapter and the church and take some active part in them."

Our attitude need not be misunderstood and should not be misinterpreted. We do not say that others are not Christians if they indulge in some of the popular forms of worldly amusement. We will not prevent others doing as seems best to them. We will have no harsh accusations. But for ourselves we are convinced that we can best serve God, ourselves and our fellow men by abstaining from the use of these questionable things. They tend to dissipate religious impressions and encourage temptations to worldliness and carnality. They are not helpful and often are positively injurious to spirituality. We will let them alone.

Now we have said this, let us actually go to it and do it gladly and earnestly and sweetly. Have done with all hankering after what we have abandoned. Cut loose forever and let it go, and we push ahead in the other direction.

Become absorbed in the work of the church and the society of its members. Use the means of grace, that we may grow in grace.

Too many pledge and break it. Too many will not pledge lest they break it. Both are wrong.

Pledge and keep it.

That means, God helping me, I will help Him and myself and you.

Will you do it?

If you will, then do it now.

Abiding In Christ.

We know how unworthy we are, and so we are ill at ease, nervous, troubled, when we think of Jesus being near. A great deal of our early training is responsible for this. We were taught that God was watching us, angry with us, ready to punish us, and that He had little sympathy with our pleasures and loves. That is all false. Christ is our dear friend. He is not a spy or a severe master, but a brother, and if we only cease thinking so much about ourselves and our sins and our mistakes and simply love Him this awkwardness of our religion will disappear. Beyond the love of your dearest friend, beyond the beauty of the most beautiful thing you have ever seen, beyond the gentleness of your own mother, is the loving nature of Jesus. Just love Him and tell Him that you love Him and you will "abide in Him."—Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins, S. T. D.

Prayer In the Morning.

The morning is the gate of the day and should be well guarded with prayer. It is one of the threads on which the day's actions are strung, and should be well knotted with devotion. If we felt more the majesty of life we should be more careful of its mornings. He who rushes from his bed to his business and watteth not to worship is as foolish as Naaman, who bathed not in his clothes or cleansed his face and as unwise as though he dashed into battle without arms or armor. Be it ours to bathe in the softly flowing river of communion with God before the heat of the wilderness and the burden of the way begin to oppress us.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

The Duty For the Moment.

The duty for the moment is always clear, and so far as we are as we need concern ourselves, for when we do the little that is clear we will carry the light on and it will shine upon the next moment's step.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Light of God's Love.

Live with the light of God's love shining into your consciousness day. Take old gifts and joys continued as though another fresh gift. So we can sing a new song unto the Lord every day.—Maltbie D. Babcock, D. D.

Charity.

God blessed me the penny you gave to me, brother.
For you gave with a smile, as a friend to each one.
God cursed me the dollar you gave, for you did it
And you made me to know what it was that you did.
With charity for me you gave me the first.
But with charity to me the second you cursed.
—Edmund Vance Cook in Century.

DANGER IN HIS JOB,

FARLEY TALKS OF HIS LIFE AS A STRIKE BREAKER.

Love of Adventure Caused Him to Take Up His Queer Occupation—Is Hated by Union Workmen Everywhere.

New York Special.

James Farley, acknowledged head of an army of experienced strike-breakers, is now in New York, whither he was called by the officials of the elevated road systems which were threatened with a strike. When asked about himself Farley said:

"It was an accident, in a way, that made me take up the business of breaking strikes. During the car strike in Brooklyn, in 1895, I was employed as sort of foreman over a small number of non-union men. That was the first time I ever had anything to do with fighting a strike. The excitement pleased me, and when the strike was broken 15 of the men who had gone with me on cars through the crowds asked me to take their names and addresses and call upon them again the next time I was mixed up in a strike. This request showed me that there are a large number of men always ready to go a long ways simply to get into a fight.

"Since then my records show over 30,000 men have worked with me at strike-breaking in the last nine years. A great many of these men, of course, have married and settled down and now lead quiet lives. They are out of the strike-breaking business."

The most vicious mobs he had encountered, he said, were in Waterbury and other New England towns, but the most deadly were met with in Pennsylvania and Virginia. When asked to describe his narrowest escapes, he said in his quiet way to the New York World reporter:

"The closest shave I ever had was when I went to Scranton, Pa., a few years ago to end a strike. We started to run a car past a place called Mudtown, a mining village. We were told that we never would get the car through Mudtown, because the miners would hang us, if necessary. I took a force of 35 Italians to clear away the obstructions that I knew would be piled on the tracks. When I set the gang to work one of the citizens of Mudtown, a big miner, who declared he was a justice of the peace, arrested the foreman of the gang on a charge of obstructing the highway.

JAMES FARLEY.
(Street Car Operator Who Makes Strike Breaking a Business.)

"Then the crowd set up a yell for Bob McKenna. McKenna, I was told had been a member of the Molly McGuires, and when the superintendent of the car company heard the yell for McKenna, he, knowing the man, told me to get back to Scranton as fast as I could. I told him that we would run the car to the end of the line.

"The crowd by this time was yelling: 'Lynch Farley!'

"When we got a short distance out of Mudtown I saw the mob crossing a bridge, evidently to head me off. I jumped into a bunch of laurel bushes alongside the track, to hide my footprints in the snow, and started up the mountain. When I got to the top I saw two mobs converging toward me, each one coming up opposite sides of the hill. Each mob began to shoot, but their bullets didn't reach me.

"I kept going ahead until I found the hill ended in a bluff that went straight down to the river. For a minute or two I thought it was all up with Farley. Finally I saw a little railroad along the side of the bluff used for taking coal out of a mine. I made a jump of ten feet and reached the road in time to board a passing train of coal cars. On this I rode a mile until I saw a trolley car, which I found was in charge of some of my men.

"I told the motorman to get out of the place as fast as he could. But McKenna, knowing where I would leave the coal train, had taken a peddler's team and with three of his gang had driven by on a short cut to head me off. Just as we were starting the car, he drove up at a gallop. With a pistol in each hand he told me to surrender. Some of my guards leveled their shotguns at him and he lacked the nerve to shoot, but, driving his wagon ahead, he pulled around squarely across the track. Still pointing his guns at me, he told us to surrender.

"The motorman was quick-witted. He swung the controller all the way around, giving the car every ounce of power in the wire, and then jumped back into the car to get out of the way of the smash-up. The car hit the wagon, throwing it high into the air and tossing McKenna and his men over a fence."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 18.

Topic.—"Whatever he would like to have me do."—Matt. xx, 16; John xv, 1-16.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

The Christian Endeavor pledge is a most comprehensive one, although it is remarkably brief. It possesses a devotional side—"I will make it the rule of my life to pray and to read the Bible every day." It also has an ecclesiastical phase—"I will * * * support my own church in every way." Furthermore, it contains a practical clause —"I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do." This phase of the pledge has always been emphasized, and it always should be. Christianity is eminently practical. Devotion is not the goal of Christianity. It must lead to development. The church exists not as an end in itself, but as a means to an end, and that end is the perfecting of Christian character. The supreme test of our Christianity is not devotion or church affiliation, but the doing of the will of God in Christ. "Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall inherit the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven." "By their fruits ye shall know them," and true Christian fruitage is doing whatever He would like to have us do.

To surrender our wills absolutely to the will of another is a stupendously serious step. It could only be done in one case—a surrender to the will of God. Such a surrender in Christ, God demands. Nothing short of it would be satisfactory or just. Christ must occupy the supreme place or none. Christ taught us to pray that God's will should be done on earth as it is in heaven. To the apostle He said, "Ye are my disciples if ye do whatever I command you." "Thy will, not mine, be done," should be the motto of every Christian life. "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" should be the uppermost thought in our hearts and question upon our lips.

"Whatever" is all inclusive. It leaves nothing to our discretion. No disciple of Christ can obey in one particular and disobey in another. "Whatever" includes every act of life. There can be no "mental reservations" in becoming a Christian. Let us practice as well as sing, "I surrender all; I surrender all, all to Jesus I surrender; I surrender all."

A Welcome Hymn.

One of the most genuine poets in all Australia is a long time and most hearty Christian Endeavorer, Rev. William Allen of Sydney. He has written many verses that have had wide acceptance, among them a beautiful and stirring Australian national anthem. Below is a welcome hymn that he wrote for the great national Australian convention held in Sydney in 1903:

By our pledge of high endeavor,
By our kinship in the Lord,
By the honor of His service,
By our fealty to His word,
By the happy thoughts that linger
Round the days that are no more,
By the happy hopes that brighten
All the days that are before—

We greet you, Christian comrades true,
In Jesus' holy name;
For He is Him, our boundless hope,
Our fellowship the same.

You whose brother love constraining
Bridged the separating sea,
With the sister states Australian
Equal in your hearts be.
Leagues of ocean cannot sever
Those whom Christ has bound in one,
And eternity shall perfect
What the work of time begun.

When "the general assembly
And the firstborn church" shall meet,
We shall join the glad throng singing
Round the Saviour's pierced feet:
There shall breathe no sigh at parting
Where we reach that glorious shore,
For the pillars of God's temple
Shall go out from thence no more.

In Guatemala.

During the last few weeks sixteen new members have been received into the Endeavor society in Guatemala city, and others are asking for admission.

Melissa Fitch, the corresponding secretary of this society, writing of its work, says, "The rainy season is now on, and although many of our people are unable to provide themselves with rain wraps we do not forget the assembling of ourselves together to read and to hear and to sing 'the wonderful words of life.'"

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WILL CLOSE ON TWENTY-THIRD

AFTER APPROPRIATE EXERCISES PUPILS WILL HAVE CUSTOMARY HOLIDAYS.

In accordance with the usual custom at the holiday season, the city and borough public schools will close for the Christmas vacation on Friday, December 20 to reopen on Tuesday, January 3. This will give in all ten days for a vacation which is about the usual time.

In all of the schools, exercises, either musical or in the nature of an entertainment, will be held on Friday to celebrate the Christmas season. At the Plainfield High School, the usual pranks will be played, and the senior and junior classes will have their customary good natured rivalry. There will also be a musical programme arranged. In the Borough High School, the time of the pupils is largely taken up at present with preparations for the school play, which will be the most elaborate which the school has ever given. Music and recitations will *mark the occasion on Friday, how*ever, and appropriate exercises will take place at the assembly.

The most extensive affair of the kind which the school has ever attempted will be the production of a miniature operetta entitled "The Coronation of King Kris Kringle," and will be given by a select cast and chorus of the entire school in Franklin Hall on the evening of December —.

The other schools throughout the city, including the Bryant, Franklin, Washington, Irving and Lincoln, will observe the season in the customary manner, and where the exercises are not by the entire school in the assembly hall, the significance of the occasion will be dwelt upon in the class-rooms.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS NEW RURAL DELIVERY ROUTE

WILL COVER TERRITORY FROM WATCHUNG TO BEYOND GALLIA.

Postmaster Elias H. Bird has received word from Washington that the new rural free delivery route, petitioned for by residents in Watchung, Union Village, Smallleytown and adjacent places, would be started Monday, January 16, and that he would be informed in a few days the result of the examination recently held for carriers. Three applicants took the examination and if all passed it successfully, it will be up to Postmaster Bird to make the selection.

The new route will start at Watchung and continue to Union Village, to Smalleytown, to Gallia, to Zerkibel's residence, and then retraces to Gallia postoffice to Kirch's corner a mile and half beyond Warrenville, where one of the oldest postoffices in this part is located and which will not be affected by the new route. From there it continues down Stiles' hill to Besching's corner and to Watchung.

The route covers seventeen miles, ninety-three houses and reaches a population of five hundred people. The successful applicant for the position of carrier will receive about $600 a year. If the route was twenty miles in length he would receive $60 a month. There will be one delivery and one collection. The carrier will leave the postoffice at 7:30 in the morning and reach there on the return trip at 12:30 in time to catch the 12:35 mail. The people living along the new route are much pleased with the prospects of being able to receive their mail regularly. In many cases they will get mail as early as those in Plainfield do on the first delivery in the morning.

MISSES IN BURNT CORK

Nine Lincoln Young Women to Give Minstrel Show.

FOR CHARITY'S SAKE

No Men to Take Part, Yet the Southern Darky in a Happy Mood to be Depicted.

Hiding their pink and white complexions beneath a deep coat of burnt cork and discarding reserve for the time being, nine of the prettiest young women in Lincoln are soon to appear on an improvised stage in the Sunday-school building and entertain the residents with an old-fashioned, southern levee style of a minstrel show. They will sing and perhaps dance, bang tambos and rattle the bones, crack jokes at the expense of the middlewoman and otherwise spread the boards all for the sake of sweet charity. The great event has been announced for Friday evening, December 18, and the town is undergoing more excitement than it has experienced since S. D. Drake retired from its management. The place boasts of numerous talented young men who have eagerly come forward with proffered suggestions and services but all such have been politely but firmly waved away with edict that "man, mere man" is not wanted except to buy tickets.

The Sunday-school at Lincoln is one of its foremost institutions and at times the expense of conducting it has proven a serious problem. Since the inception the treasury has been replenished from time to time by strawberry festivals and dime socials, but the male element that generally furnished the proceeds has gradually been tiring of these affairs and lately the net receipts haven't paid the light bills. What to do to arouse interest in the money end has been the topic for discussions at all the Wednesday afternoon sewing circles and hammerfests, but nothing seemed worth trying until a minstrel show was suggested. The idea was quickly seized upon and the nine volunteers were soon deep in the plans, but it was only yesterday that fathers and brothers were let into the secret.

According to one of them who spoke to a Daily Press reporter this morning, after much hesitation and blushing, the nine enthusiasts will provide the entire show. It will be divided into the regulation two parts with opening and olio, while one young miss has undertaken to compose words and music of several "coon" songs and furnish jokes. Nearly all play the mandolin and banjo and there is one who has pledged herself to contribute a violin selection and double in the orchestra.

As to costume—yes, honestly, abbreviated, and the blouses will match them in color. Each will differ from the other and will fit the name of the wearer as adopted for the occasion, as follows: "Priscilla Lavender," "Rose Perkins," "Carnation Johnson," "Columbia Wallace," "Violet Thompson," "Lacy Green," "Lillian Orange," Bertha Lemons" and "Louise Blue." Each one has declined to attribute a color to the name for that reason they are being held sacred by those who are in a position to know.

The plans have the sanction of the Sunday-school officials and rehearsals are now in full swing with the exception of the dancing numbers. Just what steps to give is the one question that is mooted but it is probable that all will come out all right in the end. The more conservative favor a Louis XIV minuet but as one of them was never seen in a minstrel show before the chances are that the liberally inclined will find a place on the programme for a few darky shuffles.

LAID AT REST.

Body of Augustus M. Frazee Placed in Evergreen Cemetery After Service at His Late Home.

Attended by a large gathering of his former associates, relatives and friends, funeral services were held Thursday over the body of Augustus M. Frazee at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Gallberg, at South Avenue. They were in charge of Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church. Two solos, "Homeland" and "Rock of Ages," were sung.

Interment was afterward made in Evergreen cemetery, the pall bearers being the following exempt firemen: T. O. Doane, L. E. Barkalow, U. B. Crane and Guillermo Thom. The floral tributes were profuse and included several large set pieces.

Bank Elections.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank for the election of nine directors to serve for the ensuing year, will be held at the bank on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 10, from 1 to 2 o'clock. There will be a similar meeting at the City National Bank at the same hour and for the same purpose.

COLORED FLOCK EJECTED

Alex. Kane Gets Possession of Fillmore Baptist Church.

SHERIFF CORIELL ACTS

Congregation Loses Its Furniture—Other Colored Organizations Want the Edifice.

Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver, five truckmen with two furniture vans furnished by William Hand & Son and Alex. Kane, owner, appeared at the Fillmore Baptist church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of dispossessing the colored congregation that has met in the edifice for some time. The suit of ejectment was started in the Supreme Court at Trenton and Sheriff Coriell was directed to take action yesterday. The writ was served on Harry Connett, treasurer of the church, but aside from notifying Deacons Robinson and Randolph of the intended action, he took no part in the proceedings.

Alexander Kane, the owner of the property, who previously gave the congregation time to remove the furnishings, afterward entered an attachment for debt and yesterday the furniture was moved to the Kelly house across the street from the church, where it will remain for the present.

Mr. Kane says that since purchasing the church property he has never received a penny from the congregation and he was forced to foreclose. He was represented in his action by Coddington & Swackhamer. Yesterday the key of the church was turned over to him.

Rev. E. M. Jackson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, was present and intimated that he might arrange to lease the building and start a branch of the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Mr. Kane has another offer from the Seventh-Day Rising Sun Baptists, a new religious organization here.

A pole twelve feet long and six inches in diameter, extending from the floor to the ceiling of the church, was the object of much curiosity. It was afterward said that the members of the congregation were frequently required to climb this pole as one of their religious duties and that this act would tend to lead them to a higher life.

Sheriff Coriell carried out the first chair and Alex Kane followed him carrying the Bible. Harry Hand, under the direction of the sheriff took charge of moving the rest of the furnishings. This is about the concluding chapter in the history of the congregation and no plans have been made for the future meeting of the members.

ROBERTS PROPERTY SOLD BY SHERIFF CORIELL

FRANK M. CLUTE, OF NEW YORK, IS THE PURCHASER.

The Julia Peck property on North avenue, occupied by the Plainfield Oak Company, was sold on Wednesday by Sheriff Coriell at Elizabeth, under foreclosure proceedings. Frank M. Clute, of New York, attorney for Mrs. Peck, was the purchaser and he paid $30,000 for the property. Robert Haseltine, of Jersey City, held a claim for $17,000 against the property and the obligation has now been paid.

The building was erected several years ago by Dan. S. Roberts, who used the first floor as for a livery stable and the upper floor for living rooms. Those interested in the sale were the mortgagee, Mrs. J. H. McVey, and Woolston & Buckle, the last named firm being part owners in a partition wall.

MUSIC, MIRTH AND MAGIC PLASE A LARGE AUDIENCE

VARIED PROGRAMME GIVEN IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Nearly every seat was taken when the quartette began the programme of the entertainment combining music, mirth and magic at the Congregational church Thursday. The talent was for the most part local, with the exception of Hal Merton, a magician and ventriloquist.

Without doubt the cleverest of the performers, and the one which was most applauded was Miss Edith Davies, who in a rich contralto voice sang several humorous selections, and recited a number of winning sketches. Miss Davies possesses a wide range of voice, together with a firmness and a rich quality of tone, which captivated her hearers last evening and made them most appreciative of her artistic style and musical talent. As a reciter Miss Davies was also good.

The quartette composed of Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano; Miss Jessie Haynes and Mrs. H. K. Miner, contralto; Fred R. Cutter, bass, and J. Halsey Sanford, tenor, was good in chorus and in solo work, and their numbers as well as the selections by Miss Miller, Mr. Sanford and Mr. Cutter were worthy of mention. Features of the programme were a contralto solo by Miss Jessie Haynes, and Miss Davies' recitation of "The Happy Little Cripple."

The audience was transferred into the world of magic in a thoroughly delightful manner by Hal Merton, who in two numbers displayed some clever experiments in sleight-of-hand. Mr. Merton's manner was humorous, and his "medley of mysteries" were indeed mystifying. As a ventriloquist Mr. Merton is exceptionally good, and his number on the programme was one which was much enjoyed.

No Turkey Supper at Trinity.

Contrary to their annual custom, there will be no turkey supper at Trinity church this year. Those in charge of the affair have decided to raise money by a chain method, in which all the members of the church who have aided in making the supper a success in former years, will take part. It is thought that by this method, more money can be raised than by the turkey supper. The money will be for missions.

Two Adjourned Council Sessions.

There will be two adjourned meetings of the 1904 Common Council this month. The first will be held on Friday evening, Dec. 23, and the other one on Friday evening, Dec. 30. It is hoped to conclude all of the remaining business for the year at the meeting on the thirtieth.

THOUGHT PAPER CAP WAS INFERNAL MACHIN

EXPLOSION IN LINCOLN'S POSTOFFICE FRIGHTENED S. D. DRAKE.

Silas Dewey Drake, "Mayor" of Lincoln, town founder and postmaster, was busily engaged Wednesday for a half hour or so attending to postoffice matters. After glancing over his voluminous correspondence he started to cut the leaves of a monthly magazine addressed to him. At the time the postmaster's feet rested on the edge of his desk.

Swish went the paper-cutter, when suddenly there was a report like that of a pistol. A moment later the "Mayor" was trying to gather his wits about him, he having the impression that an infernal machine of some sort or other had exploded under him.

Postmaster Drake soon got his mental arrangements connected, and then made the discovery that the wicked publishers of the magazine had put some sort of an explosive cap arrangement between the leaves for an advertisement. In the investigation he was aided by Miss Ethel Emery, the clerk, and several persons who had called to chat with the postmaster. Mr. Drake says he wasn't scared, that all that he was afraid of was that his eye might be hurt and he wouldn't know a good thing when he saw it.

Whist Club Entertained.

The Bridge Whist Club was entertained Thursday at the home of George W. VanBeskerck, of West Berwyn street. There were four tables and prizes were won by Mrs. A. F. H. Streuli and Edward M. Van Buren. The club meets every two weeks.

Miss Helen Harman a Debutaate.

SWAYNE IMPEACHED

House Charges Florida Judge With High Crimes.

MEMBERS ARE FOR HIS PUNISHMENT

Seven Representatives Will Present Case Before the Senate—Proceedings Are First of the Kind Since 1876.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Sitting as a grand jury, the house of representatives with almost a full membership and after more than five hours' discussion, to the exclusion of all other business, has adopted a resolution providing for the impeachment of Judge Charles Swayne of the northern district of Florida for "high crimes and misdemeanors."

The case against the respondent was clearly set out by Mr. Palmer of Pennsylvania, chairman of the subcommittee of the judiciary committee, which heard the evidence in the case. He carefully dissected the evidence bearing on each of the specifications and said that if it were found that Judge Swayne had done well he should be vindicated, but if he had done ill he should be sent to trial "where his excuses and apologies may or may not receive consideration."

He was followed by Messrs. Clayton of Alabama, Powers of Massachusetts, Henry of Texas and Lamar of Florida, each of whom in most vigorous terms advocated punishment. Messrs. Gillett of California and Littlefield of Maine in speeches opposed their colleagues on all the specifications except the one as to the account rendered to the government by Judge Swayne for traveling expenses.

Throughout the session intense interest was shown by members. Following the adoption of the impeachment resolution provision was made for appointment of five members to notify the senate of the impeachment and for a committee of seven to present the case to the senate.

These proceedings are the first of their kind since the impeachment in 1876 of General W. W. Belknap, who was secretary of war in President Grant's cabinet.

Rhodes Scholars at Oxford.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A majority of the Rhodes scholars at Oxford will spend the Christmas holidays on the continent. A number who passed through London on the way to various continental capitals stated that they had come up to Oxford totally different from that in America. The first term was spent mostly in accustoming themselves to English ways and conventionalities, but they had been given all possible aid by the British students, who were universally courteous and kind.

Good Samaritan Rewarded.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 14.—Houston Bond, a clerk in a leading hotel of this city, received a certified check yesterday from Evansville, Ind., for $10,000. Four years ago an old gentleman fell on the sidewalk in front of the hotel and severely injured himself. Mr. Bond went to his assistance, lifted him from the ground and cared for him until he had recovered. The check was the sequel. Mr. Bond would not disclose the name of the man who sent the check.

Woodward Elected President.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Dr. R. S. Woodward, dean of the faculty of pure science at Columbia university, New York city, has been elected president of the Carnegie institution by the board of trustees. He succeeds Dr. D. C. Gilman, the former president of Johns Hopkins university. Dr. Woodward is well known as a mathematician and scientist and while in this city was connected successively with the coast and geodetic survey and the geological survey.

"Jefferson Bible" In Great Demand.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Judged by the demand upon senators and representatives "the Jefferson Bible" has proved to be one of the most popular books ever published by the government. The present edition of 10,000 copies has been practically exhausted, and its distribution seems merely to have whetted the appetites of the reading public. Senators and members are flooded with requests for the book, with which they are unable to comply.

Water Tank Bursts.

SHELTON, Conn., Dec. 14.—A new tank containing 50,000 gallons of water and located beside the Berkshire division tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad here burst, throwing some of its iron stays fifty feet, overturning two freight cars and causing other damage. The tank was a wooden one, only just completed, for filling locomotive boilers and had been in use only two days. Ice is supposed to have caused the accident.

Revolutionists Triumph In Paraguay.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 14.—A treaty of peace between the governments of Paraguay and the revolutionists was signed last night on board the Argentine warship La Plata by President Ecurra and General Ferreira. The treaty marks the complete triumph of the revolution and is based upon the recognition of President Escurra and the election of Senor Gauna, a supporter of the revolution, to the presidency.

Syveton a Suicide.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—Although the investigation into the causes of the death of Deputy Syveton has not been completed, facts have leaked out which render it certain that Syveton committed suicide owing to private troubles wholly unconnected with politics.

RIOT IN PARLIAMENT.

Opposition Members at Budapest Hanged Premier In Effigy.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 14.—Hoping to attract the sympathy of the populace, the members of the Opposition in the house of deputies met at their club early in the morning and at 9 o'clock, headed by Count Apponyi, former Premier Banffy, Francis Kossuth, Count Zichy and other leaders, marched in procession in a drizzling rain to the parliament building. The public, however, displayed scant interest, and only a few idlers cheered them. Acting on instructions, the guards remained mute, but immovable, which so incensed the Opposition deputies that they boxed the ears and spat in the faces of the guards, who conducted themselves with the greatest passivity and forbearance until compelled to act in self defense.

Seven of the guards were injured in the scrimmage before they fled from the chamber.

Having piled a debris of wrecked furniture and books in the middle of the chamber, the rioters crowned their work of destruction by erecting a model of a gallows from broken benches, from which an effgy of Premier Tisza was hanged, the deputies standing around amidst the wreckage smoking cigarettes or pipes, while a crowd of reporters with cameras were busy securing pictures of the memorable scene.

Soon afterward Premier Tisza, with other members of the Hungarian ministry, appeared in the chamber and were greeted with deafening shouts of abuse, "scoundrel" and "rogue" being the mildest terms employed.

Count Apponyi denied that the aim of the movement was to promote the separation of Hungary from Austria, but admitted that it would have a great influence in promoting the object of the Independence party.

SMOOT INQUIRY IN SENATE.

Mormons Testify as to Torture Being Result of Recalcitrancy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Five witnesses were examined yesterday by the senate committee on privileges and elections in the investigation of protests against Senator Reed Smoot retaining his seat in the senate.

The first witness described the obligations taken by persons who pass through the endowment house and declared that every one agrees to submit to mutilation of the person if he or she reveals what takes place during the ceremony.

Two members of the faculty of the Brigham Young university testified that they have sustained polygamous relations since the manifesto of 1890, and a teacher in the public schools asserted that the church had religion taught in such schools.

Mrs. Margaret Geddes, a Mormon woman, was examined concerning her plural marriage and broke down on the stand.

Massachusetts Elections.

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—Municipal elections were held in this and eighteen other cities of the state. This closes city elections in Massachusetts, with the exception of North Adams, where an election will be held next Tuesday. There was no noteworthy surprise, with the possible exception of Newburyport and Woburn, where there were changes from democratic to license. The bitterest fight was in Cambridge, where the Democratic ticket was defeated by the nonpartisan candidate. There was no mayoralty election here, Mayor Patrick A. Collins holding another year. The issue was the city voted for license. Newton did not choose a mayor and voted no license.

Rose di Pietro on Trial.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Without the presence of her child to comfort her as she faced the twelve men who are trying her for the murder of Michael Rago, Mrs. Rose di Pietro sat in the court of Recorder Goff and listened to the witnesses for the prosecution swear her life away, it seemed. Philip K. Sweet, one of President Roosevelt's rough riders, was the first witness. He was formerly chief of police in Manila and was in front of the house Rago bought when the shooting occurred. He said he saw Rago stagger out into the street and fall dead.

Morgan Said to Be a Criminal.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 14.—Edward Morgan, the alleged leader of bank robbers and safe blowers, who, with his wife, was arrested here, has been identified as having been seen loitering around Mount Airy, Carroll county, Md., last Thursday, when the attempt was made to blow the safe of the bank at that place. Morgan, whose real name is said to be Edward Johnson, alias Borgan, has served three years in the Moundsville (W. Va.) penitentiary.

Two Favorites Were Beaten.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 14.—Birch Rod and Gas Lighter were the beaten favorites, and, though both were well supported, the losses on the remaining four events on the card brought the books out losers on the day. M. J. Shannon ran Alcom R. up to $600 and bought him at that price.

Minister Fielding Sails For Naples.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 14.—Minister Fielding has sailed by the White Star line steamer Cretic for Naples. He is accompanied by a member of his family, who is to receive surgical treatment at Vienna. The visit abroad, planned some time ago, will occupy at least a month.

Insurance by Compulsion.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—In the reichstag there has been presented a resolution asking the government to introduce a bill instituting a system of compulsory insurance for artisan workers.

COUNCIL'S PRESIDENCY

Below - Surface Discussion Leads to More Rumors.

A PRIVATE CAUCUS ?

Positive Report That Reappointment of Present Incumbent Will be Opposed.

While no decision has as yet been announced as to who will continue as president of the Common Council next year to succeed Mr. Tolles, there is a report in circulation that certain members of that body recently held a private caucus and decided on another candidate besides Mr. Tolles. A couple of weeks ago it was learned that there was opposition to the member now serving as president, but it was not believed that it would gain sufficient strength to again place him on the floor. Just what movement will be made is not known, but one thing is almost sure, and that is there will be another candidate for the position.

Mr. Tolles is the oldest member of the Common Council, has served well and faithfully on all of the important committees and when elected president, those who placed him there did so with the unanimous opinion that he justly deserved the honor after such an active service on the floor.

His friends now argue that there is not another member who is entitled to the presidency and that it would be shabby treatment to replace him.

While Councilman Daniel has been mentioned for the place, he is considered a valuable member on the floor. He is well suited for the position as chairman of the finance committee, being posted on matters of finance and as a lawyer can detect many irregularities that might pass one less versed in these matters. During his service he has shown himself to be just the one to guard the city's finances in the Common Council, and if he should be elected president he would not be as active as at present. It is understood that if another member is chosen for president, there is likely to be a general shakeup in the committees in which the Second and Third wards will be well taken care of.

A present the chairmen of the most important committees, aside from the finance and license, are members of the First and Fourth wards, and there is a rumor that in case President Tolles should be retired, these committees will be changed to give the other wards greater prominence. At all events 1905 promises to be one of the most interesting in the city's history. Several important matters are sure to come up and the disposition of them is certain to result in lively debates throughout the year.

A year ago when the Common Council caucused on officers and committees, Councilman W. L. Gloak called the conference. As yet no one has given such notice, although it is expected that Mr. Gloak will again act for this year's conference.

PROPERTY OWNERS WANT GREEN BROOK IMPROVED

WILL ENDEAVOR TO GET OBJECTORS CONSENT TO THE PLAN.

The question of widening and deepening Green brook to prevent the flooding of the eastern section of the city in the vicinity of the stream is being widely discussed by those interested in the proposed improvement. As there are only two affected property-owners who object to the work, refusing to sign the agreement prepared by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, every effort will be made to secure their consent. This the property-owners feel is their duty, inasmuch as petitions were presented to the Common Council asking that the stream be widened and deepened.

In view of the proposed improvement of conditions along Green brook, whereby that section of the city will be relieved of a surplus of water in heavy rains, the work on Cedar brook seems almost an absolute necessity. It now looks as though the Green brook work is an assured thing and the street committee from the Common Council would like to fix Cedar brook at the same time, and this is the object in view. According to the terms of the agreement, which all but two of the property-owners have signed, the city is given permission to enter upon the lands to do the work and there is no expense to the property-owners, neither are they to be assessed for benefits or damages. The property-owners hope to have a favorable report on the matter before the end of the year so that the Common Council can take it up early in the new year.

DR. H. K. CARROLL'S TRIP

To Accompany Bishop Neely to South America.

STARTS JANUARY 18

Condition of M. E. Missions There Require Personal Attention of the Corresponding Secretary.

When Bishop Neely, of the Methodist Episcopal church, starts at the end of this month for South America, to which field he was assigned by the general conference, which elected him last May, he will be accompanied by Dr. H. K. Carroll, one of the corresponding secretary of the Methodist Missionary Society, who is a resident of this city and a prominent layman of the Newark Conference. It is said that this will be the first occasion when a missionary secretary has visited the Methodist South American field. Dr. Carroll's proposed trip is the result of some changed conditions there that require the personal attention of the secretary in charge.

Bishop Neely and Mr. Carroll will first visit Panama, where Methodist work is to be commenced as soon as suitable location for it can be secured. The first meeting of this new mission is to be held at Lima, Peru, January 18. Included in his mission, besides Panama, is the work in Equador and Peru.

Bishop Neely and Mr. Carroll will next visit the Andes Conference, which meets at Coquimbo, Chile, February 8. This Conference includes the Chilean and Bolivian missions. The Chilean mission has, strange to say, passed from a condition of self-support to one of independence on the Methodist Society.

Money from outside is now needed, and a readjustment is necessary. This readjustment Dr. Carroll is to oversee. Later he will go with Bishop Neely across the Andes from Valparaiso to Buenos Ayres. He will then visit the missions in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, returning to New York in the spring.

CENTRAL LODGE ELECTS OFFICERS FOR NEXT YEAR

TO BE INSTALLED AT FIRST SESSION NEXT MONTH.

In addition to the election of officers for the coming year, business of great importance to the organization was transacted at the meeting of Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., last Thursday, in Firemen's Hall. There was a large attendance, and these were the officers which were nominated and elected: Past Grand Workman, Walter Bradford; Grand Workman, A. C. Curtis; foreman, Theodore Mason; overseer, Robert Ellis; recorder, Harvey R. Thorn; financier, William Newcorn; receiver, Charles H. Randolph; guide, Adam Herlick; inside watchman, Louis Alpaugh; outside watchman, William H. Lenger; representatives to Grand Lodge, William Newcorn, Walter Bradford and Harvey R. Thorn; alternates, Clark T. Rogers, L. C. Spicer and John A. Wilcox; trustee for three years, William H. Lenger; pianist, Theodore Mason; medical examiners, Doctors O. L. Jenkins, M. J. Whitford and W. J. Nelson.

The Deputy Grand Master Workman has been notified that these officers will be installed at the first January meeting. There will be services appropriate to this occasion, and an interesting programme will undoubtedly be arranged.

After the execution of the regular business and election of officers last evening, a pleasant social hour was spent, and a short musical and recital was arranged for the event. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

Pliny Fisk in Bethlehem Steel.

Pliny Fisk, of Harvey Fisk & Sons, is one of the incorporators of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, successor to the U. S. Shipbuilding Company, which filed papers at Trenton, Saturday. It starts with $80,000,000 capitalization, $1,000,000 being paid in. Mr. Fisk has one-seventh interest in the corporation.

Swedish Lutheran Fair a Success.

All that attractive tables and a large crowd of buyers could do to make a fair a success, combined in favor of the bazaar at the Swedish Lutheran church Saturday afternoon.

Paid Election Bet.

The payment of a bet made on the presidential election by John Fenner and Harry Fagley, both of Dunellen, furnished amusement for a big part of that borough's residents and also New Market, Saturday afternoon. Fagley picked Parker to win and losing, had to trundle Fenner all the way from Dunellen to New Market in a wheelbarrow. He lived up to the agreement and evidently had the best end after all as Fenner was nearly frozen before the trip was over.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

TAX RECEIPTS $175,000

Collector Lee's Office Besieged by Taxpayers This Week.

FEW DELINQUENTS

P. S. C. Pays a Large Amount—Monday and Tuesday's Receipts $70,000.

Tax Collector Robert L. Lee, and his assistant, David Pope, were at the office until after 11 o'clock last night taking care of the tax money that was coming in. As usual there is a great rush to get the money in before the time-limit is up, and in consequence the Collector cannot tabulate the various amounts within the prescribed time. Mr. Lee stated previously that he would be unable to receive taxes after 9 o'clock last night, but he had to break this rule to some extent. This morning there was a large quantity of mail, containing tax money which Mr. Lee was unable to reach during the early hours.

Approximately there has been received in taxes up to this morning about $175,000 and this compares favorably with the collections of other years. It now looks as though the delinquent list would be much smaller than usual. One of the big days at the office was on Monday when over $40,000 was received. This included some of the corporation tax from the Public Service Corporation. All of the corporations owing the city taxes have paid up.

Yesterday, the last day for the payment of taxes without the added interest, did not show such a large amount, there being about $30,000 received. This amount came in smaller sums than the day before, when the Public Service Corporation's one payment of $2,599 83 was made. The total corporation tax here amounts to over $5,000, and it is seen that the Public Service Corporation pays over two-thirds of this.

Mr. Lee says he will be unable to give out exact figures of the taxes received before tomorrow. By that time he will have the various amounts totaled.

SALAAM TEMPLE'S CONDITION EXCELLENT

H. W. MARSHALL CHOSEN GUIDE AT ANNUAL MEETING.

Salaam Temple, Ancient and Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine, held the first annual business meeting in Newark, last night, when encouraging reports were received and officers elected for the coming year. A year ago this temple was instituted with 209 members and there was an indebtedness of $5,000. Now the membership is 642 and during the year the indebtedness was reduced to $1,300 and there is $3,600 in the treasury, making it possible to entirely wipe out the debt, if desired. H. W. Marshall was the only Plainfielder at the meeting and the only one elected to an office.

The principal officers chosen were as follows: Potentate, George W. Wiedenmayer; chief ribban, C. H. Richardson; assistant ribban, W. Edward Becker; high priest, Palmer Charlock; oriental guide, H. W. Marshall; treasurer, John C. Groat; recorder, G. C. Ward.

Arrangements were made for the Shriners to attend the Imperial Council session to be held at Saratoga in June and plans were formulated for the important meeting of the temple on Tuesday night, January 31, when over one hundred candidates will be initiated.

Praise for Cross.

Another judge is asked for the District of New Jersey in a bill introduced by Senator Kean last week as the result of the congestion of business in the Federal Court in New Jersey. For some time it has been felt that the volume of business passing through the United States District Court at Trenton justifies the creation of a second court in this State. In the event of Senator Kean's bill becoming a law it is broadly hinted that the new Judgeship will be tendered to Senator Cross, of Union County, to whom a judicial appointment would not prove uncongenial, it is said. Senator Cross who is a lawyer of excellent reputation and ability, would fill the new place upon the Federal bench most satisfactorily.—From the Mount Holly Mirror.

HILLSIDE T. AND G. CLUB HOLDS MEETING TONIGHT

PLAN TO CHANGE ITS NAME AND TAKE OTHER IMPORTANT STEPS.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will hold a meeting tomorrow night, the purpose being to change the name of the club to the Plainfield Country Club and to raise the dues sufficiently to raise revenue for the improvement of the course and to engage a clerk permanently for the clubhouse.

For some time the members have felt that the present name is not a representative one.

During the past season improvement have been made at the clubhouse including sleeping quarters. It is expected that Mrs. Lena Hellstrom, the stewardess, will be continued another year. Her work has been quite satisfactory.

Last season more time was devoted to the game of tennis and more than the usual number of tournaments were arranged. It is proposed to maintain this interest next season by having a more attractive schedule than ever. In doing this the golf schedule will not be slighted, the plan being to provide a strong list of tournaments. More attention will also be given to team matches than during the past season. The annual meeting of the club will be held in February.

Y. M. C. A. CIRCUS LIKELY TO BE A BIG SUCCESS

MEMBERS OF GYMNASIUM ARE NOW TRAINING FOR UNIQUE EVENT.

The plan of presenting a circus in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium has met with almost universal favor, and the arrangements are progressing rapidly. Many of the members of the department are interested in the affair, and those who are to take important parts in the production are training nearly every evening.

Among the features of the circus will be the usual grotesque and comic attractions, exhibition tumbling, tight rope walking, flying rings and high bar exhibitions, minstrel and other unique forms of entertainment. Bert Hansen, one of the best tumblers in the city, is intending to perform and he will be assisted in this feature by Wilbur Bentliff. The latter will also do the flying ring work. On the high bar, Caboone and Neal will do stunts, while Charles Hebring will probably act in the capacity of a clown. Frank Shephard, who is well known in this city as a tight wire walker, will also have a prominent place on the programme.

In addition to the gymnastic features there will be pyramid work, on which ten of the members of the department are training, and combination tumbling by Messrs. Bentliff and Hansen. Fancy dancing and singing will have a prominent part on the programme, and there will be several "rube" comedians. The date for this performance has not yet been set, but it is expected that it will take place in the latter part of January.

NOT TO MOLEST P. S. C.

Cars Will Not be Stopped Unless Bill is Paid to Borough.

There is absolutely no truth in the story that the North Plainfield authorities contemplate stopping the P. S. C. from running its trolley cars in the borough unless a bill for street repairing is paid by the company. Mayor Smalley and Corporation Counsel Reed both said this morning that no such move had even been considered. Both declared that the hitch over the bill rendered is something that occurs annually and that the claim for $197 will be paid in the regular course of business by the P. S. C.

Should there be such a thing as a refusal to honor the bill, a civil action will be brought in the courts to enforce its payment and nothing more, according to Senator Reed. The claim in question arises from the fact that under an agreement, the trolley company pays one-third of the annual cost of repairs on Somerset street.

Changes in Postal Routes.

After the first of the year it is expected that several changes will be made in the routes of the letter-carriers. At present Letter carrier George Apgar is in charge of the route formerly carried by Thomas Burns, who has left the service, and Carrier Robert Golcnack has the route formerly carried by Patrick Reville, but more changes are anticipated soon after January 1 in re-adjusting the routes.

RICHARD A. OSMUN WORSHIPFUL MASTER

JERUSALEM LODGE, NO. 26, F. AND A. M., HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION.

Jerusalem Lodge, No 26, F. and A. M., held a regular communication last night and elected these officers for the ensuing year: Worshipful master, Richard A. Osmun; senior warden, George Cackle; junior warden, Robert Rief; treasurer, Clarence Goss; secretary, Garret T. Dunham; representative to Masonic Hall Association, James F. Buckle. The officers will be installed Tuesday evening, January 3.

Jerusalem Lodge is just closing a most successful year under the supervision of the old officers and Fred'k J. Pope, the retiring worshipful master, has every reason to feel proud of the lodge work which will undoubtedly be continued by the newly-elected officers.

COMMON COUNCIL MEETS ON FRIDAY NIGHTS

TWO ADJOURNED SESSIONS BEFORE THE NEW YEAR.

Routine matters will occupy most of the time of the Common Council at its adjourned meeting on Friday night. Although another adjourned meeting will be held on Friday night, December 30. At the last meeting there will be presented the annual reports of the city judge, city treasurer, collector and all the various committees, including that of Street Commissioner Gavett, Chief of Police Kiely, Overseer of the Poor Alex. Ayers and Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Doane.

One of the most important matters to be presented to the new Common Council will be the message of Mayor-elect James F. Buckle in which he is expected to set forth in a measure his policy for the coming years. All of the new officers will take their seats at 1 o'clock noon on Sunday, January 1, but on account of the day the Common Council will not meet until Monday night, January 2.

CLASS REUNION.

Members of P. H. S. 1904 to Hold Annual Event During Holidays.

Notification has been sent out by the class president, Lucius T. Koons, to the members of the class of 1904, Plainfield High School, appointing a date for a preliminary meeting, to consider the subject of the first annual class reunion.

In accordance with the usual custom of the classes graduating from the school, the class of 1904 will hold a meeting sometime during the Christmas holidays. It will probably take place in the High School building, though the preliminary meeting will be held at the home of one of the members of the class. With a few exceptions all the members of the class of 1904 will be in this city during the next two weeks, and the class reunion promises to be one of the successes which has characterized the class' career.

A $100 Chicken House Fire.

Catching fire from a smoke house nearby, a large chicken house belonging to W. S. Sandford, of West Dunellen, was totally destroyed Saturday, entailing a loss of $100. A small number of chickens and ducks in the structure were burned to death. The Dunellen fire department was summoned but owing to the heavy roads reached the spot too late to be of any service.

BOROUGH GETS $50,000

Last Year's Record for Tax Receipts is Surpassed.

ITS APPORTIONMENT

County to Get $15,551.84; State School Tax $4,292.85 and Special School Tax $22,985.

During all yesterday and today, Borough Collector George A. Brown's office has been one of the busiest places in North Plainfield through the rush of taxpayers to settle accounts before the ten per cent. for non-payment is added. The total receipts so far have been $50,000, exceeding last year's record by at least $5,000 and enabling the collector to make prompt payments of the county tax amounting to $15,551.84, the state school tax, $4,292 85, and the special school tax, $22,985, an aggregate of $42,829 69.

Under the new school law, the special school tax must be paid to the school custodian at once and not as collected in former years. The prompt settlement of the borough people has permitted this to be done without any convenience and leave a good balance in the treasury beside. Heretofore it has been necessary to borrow in anticipation of the taxes.

Collector Brown today expressed himself as greatly pleased with the collections as they make a new record for his office. He anticipates getting another $5,000 before January 1 despite the holiday season when people are pressed more than ever for money. This will leave $10,000 still to be collected and he expects to have the greater part of it before February 1. The rush at the office yesterday and today was the greatest the borough has undergone but Collector Brown and his assistants made rapid work of the long line of waiting citizens.

IMPATIENT HORSE TRIES TO ENTER THE POSTOFFICE

SMASHED PANE OF GLASS IN EFFORT TO FIND MISTRESS.

Evidently wanting to know what was detaining its mistress, a horse belonging to Mrs. A. B. David, of Belvidere avenue, attempted to go into the local postoffice yesterday afternoon, and in so doing might have succeeded but for the fact that it made the mistake of trying to pass through the glass of one of the doors. The big pane was smashed to pieces, causing a mild panic among the crowds of people who were inside intent on getting off Christmas packages.

The noise also frightened the horse and it danced around in a lively manner in trying to get back to the street. It was caught by Money Order Clerk William Sharp before any further damage was done. To all appearances the equine was not hurt by its strange experience.

YOUNG SCHOONMAKER, CRACK HOCKEY PLAYER

PLAINFELDER MAKING A RECORD ON COLUMBIA TEAM.

Ralph Schoonmaker, of this city, who is a junior at Columbia University, has been doing exceptionally good work on the college hockey team this winter. He is one of the strongest members of the team, and his excellent passing had much to do in aiding his team to win the recent game with the strong Seventh Regiment team, of New York.

Schoonmaker began his hockey career on the Leal's School team in 1900, when he was one of the fastest players which the school has ever turned out. It was in the following season that the Leal's team made their best scholastic hockey record. and Ralph and Will Schoonmaker were the strong points of the aggregation.

In Columbia Mr. Schoonmaker has figured prominently in football and hockey for two years on the 'varsity teams, and in his freshmen year on the class teams.

NEW BOWLING CLUB MAY BE ORGANIZED

MEMBERS OF Y. M. C. A. TEAM ARE CONSIDERING AN INDEPENDENT CLUB.

In order to play off a few remaining games in their schedule with outside teams the Y. M. C. A. bowling team will probably hire the alleys at the Fanwood Club for a few weeks and conduct their matches there. For a long time they have been intending to rent local alleys independent of the Y. M. C. A., and though they will still continue to be known by that name, they will no longer be strictly representative of the local associa-

In addition to the bowl[illegible] team, there are several oth[illegible] are interested in the local rollers, and the formation of an independent bowling club is quite favorably considered. The team will have good financial backing, and if the organization of a club is attempted, it will undoubtedly be a success.

Negotiations have been made with Manager Mase Edwards, of the Casino, and though not officially announced it is possible that the newly formed club may use the alleys at the Casino. A number of the team, and one interested in the organization of a club, independent of the Y. M. C. A., recently remarked to a reporter of The Daily Press that even if the remainder of the bowling season is completed under the present organization, next year the plan of a new club will meet with general approval, and will undoubtedly go into effect.

GUARD TROPHY WINNERS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

COL. COLLINS ISSUES CIRCULAR OF INTEREST TO MARKSMEN IN 2D REGT.

XMAS AT HOSPITAL.

Tree and Gifts for Patients at Institution.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, the usual Christmas celebration will be held at the hospital this year. Monday afternoon, from 2 to 5, is the time fixed for the celebration. There will be a Christmas tree with the customary distribution of gifts to the patients, and the public is invited to attend the exercises. There will probably be singing by members of Grace church choir under the direction of Mrs. Freeman, organist, and an address by some one prominent in the hospital work.

Somerset's Courts.

YOUNG WOMEN MINSTRELS MAY REPEAT PERFORMANCE

LINCOLN MISSES GREATLY ELATED AT SUCCESS OF THEIR VENTURE.

Elated by the success which attended their first attempt, the young women of Lincoln who gave a genuine, black-face minstrel show in the Sunday-school building last Friday, are discussing the advisability of repeating the performance. It was largely attended and applauded at every turn and the financial results were well over what was expected. The money was added to the fund for the Sunday-school's annual Christmas [illegible]s in N[illegible] which is to be held Friday [illegible].

The show was one of the most unique yet given in this vicinity and the participants have since been continuously congratulated. Not a male resident of Mayor Drake's town took part and the predictions of the young ones that it would be a fiasco were disproved. The young women composed their own songs, arranged their jokes and had their costumes made by one of the Sunday-school leaders, female of course. Their identity was so completely hidden behind burnt cork that it has not yet been learned and for that reason they feel safe in planning a second attempt at this form of entertainment.

OUTLOOK FOR TROLLEY TO SOUTH PLAINFIELD

CONFERENCE BETWEEN P. S. C. OFFICIALS ATD LEADING CITIZENS.

The residents of South Plainfield have not yet given up all hope of having their town connected with the outside world by trolley, and every effort will be made to secure this improvement within a year. A number of leading citizens of South Plainfield recently had a conference with the officials of the Public Service Corporation and received much encouragement. It is realized that the will town not grow to any extent unless quick and convenient transportation is afforded between that place and Plainfield.

It has been known for some time that the Public Service Corporation has been figuring on a line to Metuchen from this city, but for the reason that the corporation believes there would not pay at present, the matter has been allowed to wait. It is the hope of the South Plainfield residents that the town can be on one side of a belt line that would take in Plainfield, Dunellen and New Market. This would give the trolley company considerable territory and a fair amount of patronage. For years the facilities for reaching New Market and South Plainfield as well as the intervening territory and that lying out side of it, has been poor. Stage lines have been established only to be given up because of poor service and slow method of travel. With an up-to-date trolley service this outlying territory would have such a boom that the chances of all kind would receive the benefit.

Badgley Signs With Washington.

Badgley, the Lehigh University baseball pitcher, who twirled several games for the Plainfield A. C., last season, notably the twelve inning 3 to 0 with Acolian, and who pitched the remainder of the season for the nine at Washington, N. J., has signed to play with the same team for next season. This team will be in the North Jersey Baseball League.

Railroad Merger.

An agreement was filed in the office of the Secretary of State yesterday by the Rockaway Valley Railroad Company and the Speedwell Lake Railroad Company, operating roads in Hunterdon, Somerset and Morris Counties, consolidating the companies as the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

C. E. Society on Straw Ride.

Eighteen members of the Junior C. E. Society, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, enjoyed a straw ride last night between this city and Westfield. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Winston Lowry and Mrs. H. C. Runyon and was all the success that a congenial crowd and a perfect night could afford.

DOUD ON HEALTH BOARD

Rev. Mr. Honeyman to be Ousted by Mayor Smalley.

NEW INSPECTOR TOO

Borough Administration Forces Will Obtain Control of the Board of Health Soon.

When the North Plainfield Common Council meets on Friday night, January 6, Mayor Newton H. Smalley will ask that Thomas Doud be appointed a member of the Board of Health to succeed Rev. W. E. Honeyman. When seen by a reporter for The Daily Press today, the Mayor would neither deny nor confirm the report that Rev. Mr. Honeyman is to be ousted and that Recorder Doud is slated to fill the place he vacates, but the report comes from good authority and can be depended upon.

Rev. Mr. Honeyman, who is secretary of the Board, has always been antagonistic to the mayor and his friends and for this reason the first opportunity is taken by the administration to put him out of office. When this is accomplished the administration will get control of the Board, which has fought it for several years.

The present members of the Board are Andrew Love, Sr., Dr. D. C. Adams, John McLaughlin, Rev. Dr. Honeyman and J. O. Osgood. Dr. Adams and Mr. Osgood are classed as friends of the administration and when Mr. Doud is appointed, the trio will form a majority. Inspector William Pangborn will be surprised to learn that he must go. That's already decided. He is said to have trained with the anti-administration forces too much and his head must be chopped off. It cannot be learned at this time who will be appointed in his place for the Board of Health will make the appointment.

FANWOOD BOROUGH WILL HAVE ITS OWN JAIL

TIRED OF HAVING TO SEND ITS PRISONERS ELSEWHERE.

Keeping pace with the progressive spirit shown by municipalities all around it, Fanwood borough, heretofore holding the reputation of being the only place of its size without a jail, is soon to have a "cooler" of its own, modern and up-to-date in every way. The Borough Council has appointed Collector Charles Sheelen a committee of one to procure a suitable building in which to erect two steel cages or cells; duplicates of the ones now in use at Scotch Plains. He will have the work hurried along and within a few weeks Fanwood's jail will be awaiting lawbreakers.

The want of such a place has led to many difficulties in the borough during the past few years and the matter was becoming a serious problem. The place boasts of a police force, but every time an arrest was made the prisoner would have to be taken to Scotch Plains or Plainfield for safe keeping, or else released in his own recognizance. This entailed an undue amount of work on the police force, yet whenever the subject of a jail was broached, opposition would down it. The matter was at last gotten before the Council and at its last meeting the instructions were given Collector Sheelen who is also borough recorder.

A Plant That Blooms.

Charles H. Ball, superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company, has a plant called a "Giant Cyclamen," which is attracting unusual attention from lovers of flowers. Mr. Ball purchased the plant from Chas. L. Stanley, the North avenue florist, who guaranteed that it would produce over one hundred flowers before Christmas. This it has done and more too, far exceeding the assurances of Mr. Stanley and the expectation of Mr. Ball.

Funeral of Miss Colton.

Funeral services over the body of Miss Lydia Colton, who died Sunday at the home of a brother in Lehley, Pa., will be held from her late residence on Grove street, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be at Hillside cemetery.

A Feminine Melange

Home Makers and Others. Selfish Christmas Givers

"Funny thing! There seems to be an illusion that all women are home makers," remarked the bachelor as he carefully stroked his mustache.

"Well, if you don't associate woman with the home, what then?" retorted the woman he was talking to.

"Don't get indignant, my dear. It has been the fashion until very recently to idealize women and give them certain attributes whether they possessed them or not. I am simply mentioning the truth. Some women are meant to be home makers, others the very contrary. Under the hands of some women pictures seem to place themselves of their own accord into artistic positions on the wall, the furniture groups itself in a masterly manner, chairs almost invite you to sink into their depths and be comfy, and the very lights are shaded and appealing. A 'homy' woman instinctively knows how to do everything about the house. She puts a touch here, a bit of paint there, and transforms even an attic into a delightful drawing room."

"Oh, of course! Any woman can fix up things nicely if she has the money."

"Ah, yes, but what I am speaking of is not a question of money. Some of the poorest home makers I know are women who can spend anything they want. And what is the result? Their houses are filled with chilly mahogany pieces, and pictures hung in straight lines on the wall, pictures that mean nothing unless you count the gorgeous frame superior to the subject it incloses. These women could not drape a curtain to save their souls. Bereft of the upholsterer they would let it hang by one hook until he came. They do not even know how to poke up the dead embers of an open fire and draw up a cozy chair invitingly. But it is when this type of woman marries a poor man that she is to be pitied, and the man she marries is still more deserving of a few tears. If she has only three pictures she will put them all on one side of the wall, leaving the others bare. She will go without other pictures because she cannot afford to buy handsome settings for them rather than frame a few prints simply herself and dispose them here and there with taste. She will prefer one silk pillow, even though it be of a soiled, dingy color, to a dozen comfortable ones simply covered with inexpensive cretonne or oriental cotton material. In other words, she has no ingenuity, and her only idea of taste is to put things in her home which are costly or look as if they were."

"If I were a poor man, it seems to me I should hate to marry a woman like that."

And yet there are few men who are aware of these two classes of women.

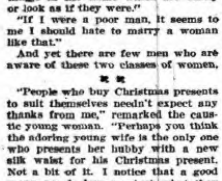
"People who buy Christmas presents to suit themselves needn't expect any thanks from me," remarked the caustic young woman. "Perhaps you think the adoring young wife is the only one who presents her hubby with a new silk waist for his Christmas present. Not a bit of it. I notice that a good many people buy me just what they admire and think my taste ought to be educated up to it. For instance,



"SHE SENT ME A SET OF BROWNING."

there was Mrs. Beaufogle last Christmas. She sent me a most expensive set of Browning all the way from Boston, when she knows perfectly well that I never read anything deeper than the Sunday papers. I distinctly heard her say once it was a pity such a sensible looking young woman should really be so silly. Well, if she wants to do missionary work let her choose some other time than Christmas. That's all! Then I received a workbasket so cleverly disguised that I had wild hopes it contained bonbons—this from my maiden aunt—as a hint perhaps that I ought to mend my stockings. Last, and not least, that pretty little Mrs. Dainty sent me a perfectly heavenly fancy neck piece; but, ye gods, it was pink. Just the shade that goes so perfectly with her own lovely complexion, but when you consider that I have freckles and a sallow skin—well!"

MAUD ROBINSON.

WHAT IS WORN.

A New Model For the Walking Skirt. Some Pretty Fur Hats.

A new cloth walking skirt is cut circular, has a seam up the front and back and fits beautifully smooth over the hips. It is very wide at the feet and swings out in a graceful, easy fashion at the bottom, which makes walking in such a skirt a positive pleasure. It is, as are all the skirts of the season, unlined.

All materials used this season are soupie, and many of them are silky in surface, whether in cloth, panne velvet, cashmere or silk.

Fur hats to be worn en suite with boa and muff are often a combination of fur and lace. The lace making the brim is edged with a band of fur, the crown being of the skin. At one side are arranged sumberless little claws and tails, put up high and held in place by a tiny fur head or two.

A new fancy of the season is to hang the miniature, lorgnette or pendant on an inch wide piece of moire ribbon instead of from a plain or jeweled chain. The ribbon is neither tied in the back in a bow or fastened with a gold clasp.

The exquisite wrap illustrated is of Persian lamb, built on the lines of the dolman. Bretelles of handsome braid caught with Persian ornaments are the shoulder trimmings. At the waist the braid forms a girdle with long pendants. The muff and neck piece are of beautifully marked chinchilla.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

TO REMODEL SLEEVES.

The Clever Woman May Have New Ones With Little Trouble.

Women with lots of last year's sleeves on their hands, the kind that puff in an exaggerated fashion at the wrist, need not despair, for these very bouffant affairs may be brought up to date by turning them in a deft way upside down. The process is an easy one. Simply rip up the sleeve, and if the fullness at the top will admit of being transformed into a cuff lay the extra material into tucks up to the elbow.

If a sleeve has as equal amount of fullness down its entire length a smart way of fixing it over is to shirr it into puffs at intervals to the wrist. Where braid or ribbon trims the waist or gown to which the sleeves belong the effect is very good to tie a band fastened with a bow between each puff.

Another satisfactory way is to shirr a full sleeve up the middle in several lines until a few inches from the top, where the material is allowed to fall loose in butterfly effect.

Evening elbow length sleeves in a certain style of frock may be fashioned after the watteau models by making them tight fitting to the elbow and there finishing them with a fall of lace which should widen out at the elbow.

The illustration shows a waist adapted to meet the winter's sleeve requirements. It is made of chestnut brown silk, the yoke tucked in vain ray effect and finished about the shoulder with a band of corded silk. Above this is a stitched band of the material, which also trims one side of the front. Brown lace and a row of tiny gold buttons make a pretty neck finish. The sleeve is plaited in at the arm's eye and gathered into a corded cuff.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

NOTABLE WOMEN.

Achievements of Mrs. Crane and Other Public Spirited Ladies.

The attention of state boards of health throughout the Union has been drawn to the Michigan slaughter house and butchers' meat inspection law, which has done so much good. It has abolished to a great degree the unhealthful and horribly offensive conditions that exist in the neighborhood of so many private slaughter houses. The law was the work of one public spirited woman, Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane, pastor of the People's church, Kalamazoo, Mich. Mrs. Crane drafted with her own hands the inspection law.

Mrs. Crane also organized the Kalamazoo Civic Improvement league for the moral and physical cleaning up of the city and making it beautiful. Attached to the league was a junior department whose members were the school children. A badge was given to each member of this youthful band, and upon it were the words, "I will help Kalamazoo."

The boys and girls pledged themselves to help keep the streets and sidewalks clean by not throwing torn paper or fruit skins upon them and by not spitting upon them; second, they promised to protect and care for the wild birds, and third, to learn to grow flowers. Prizes for the finest flower beds were given to the children of each ward school.

Mrs. Crane knows that no home can be happy or healthy unless the women of the household know how to cook and to keep it, as well as the members of the family, in good sanitary condition. So as chairman of the department of household economics in the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs she outlined for women a printed scheme of "Studies In Housekeeping." The scheme includes scientific plumbing, heating and ventilation. The famous woman preacher and sociologist is now working to have a trained nurse on duty in all the state poorhouses.

In the largest cities of the Union women are beginning to be employed by the municipal authorities as probationary officers. In New York they serve as such in both the police and school departments. Several of them rank among the most efficient of such officers in the whole city. The feminine probationary officers work especially among women and children. First offenders are often released by them on probation in charge of the probation officer.

Mrs. A. R. Ramsey, senior probation officer of the New York juvenile court, has made some interesting and most instructive child studies among the children of homes and school truants that come under her care.

One of her contributions to child knowledge throws strong light on how criminals are built. She has found in her experience that a child has no natural knowledge of the property rights of others. If he sees something he wants he just takes it without knowing or thinking whether he has any right to do so or not. She has conversed with clergymen on this subject, and among them confessed that when they were little, at the dawning of their first recollection, they took on the sly small articles they wanted.

Apparently children naturally steal things to eat and small objects that seem desirable to them. They know no better. If, as they grow older, the sense of justice, of right and wrong, is not carefully drilled into them by appeals to their awakening moral nature they may a time become the adult thieves, burglars and embezzlers of the social organization. Mrs. Ramsey concludes that petty larceny is an instinct in children and that it requires high and general understanding on the part of teacher and parent to educate this animal survival out of them.

These intelligent women probationary officers are looking into the causes of things. Miss Alice Smith is connected with one of New York's police courts. Her mission lies largely with neglected young girls. Her conclusion is that most of all, are needed in this case working girls' hotels where those earning from $4 to $6 a week can be sheltered and fed comfortably in a house that is inviting to their sense of beauty. To the end that at least one such hotel shall be constructed in her district Miss Smith is devoting her spare time. The hotel can be erected for $300,000, and half of this Miss Smith has already secured.

CAROLINE ANDERSON

What Would You Do?

The Satisfaction of Being Supported

In a tiny cottage in the great state of Somewhere lives a woman with her father and mother. She has been married, but her husband was a "no account white trash" specimen, and she had to leave him or stay and be beaten black and blue at stated intervals on the one hand or on the other face slower extinction by starvation. So she took her small son by the hand one day when hubby was absent and trudged home to pa and ma.

Pa was and is of the so called noble old type which just before election every year is told it constitutes the backbone of this republic. That feeds its vanity enough to last another year, and it goes home and proceeds in many cases to test the quality of its backbone upon the women folk of its own household.

Oldbunks told his daughter, Barbary Ann, that he (Oldbunks) would "support" her and her child if she did all the household work and a good part of the outdoor work for him and a big lazy bachelor son. Barbary Ann's mother was there, too, but she, poor woman, had nothing to say in the matter. Oldbunks proved his backbone by bossing everything on that ranch to the last egg laid by the last hen.

Barbary Ann was made to feel constantly that she and her child were sheltered there on sufferance. She toiled like a slave from morning till night. The only sight of money she ever had from year's end to year's end was when now and then she did a day's work at house cleaning or laundering for a neighbor woman. Was not she, was not her boy also, "supported" out of the charity of Oldbunks? Though she worked up to the last drop of blood in her body, what was that in comparison with the immeasurable boon of being "supported?"

For all her dreary life Barbary Ana had a little strain of the aesthetic in her nature. She loved flowers. So did her poor mother. On the sunny railing of the porch in front of the cottage she placed some scarlet geraniums, nasturtiums and trailing ivy in boxes. The old man did not apparently notice them till they had attained something of splendid brightness. Then one day he deliberately destroyed every one of them—quenched the only glimmer of beauty there was about that wretched shanty. He did it, too, out of pure malice. He said he wouldn't have such trash around his premises.

Barbary Ann and her mother reared annually a considerable number of fowls, so that there was a little income from the sale of eggs and chickens; likewise was there poultry for the Oldbunks' table.

One day a neighbor woman wanted a sitting of eggs of another strain than her own. She sent a messenger to Barbary Ann with a basket and the money to pay for the eggs. The women folk counted out the nice fresh eggs, handling them carefully that they might not be injured and rendered useless for hatching. Just as they had been deposited in the neighbor's basket Oldbunks came in. He poked his old nose into the neighbor's basket and demanded to know all about the transaction. The poor, overslaughed women told him. Thereupon he laid his paw upon the neighbor's basket and gave command:

"I want them eggs to take to town."

The strange part of it is that his wife actually did lift the eggs out and put them away again, giving back the money to the messenger. Oldbunks took the eggs to the village and with the money they brought purchased tobacco or other luxuries for himself.

The strange part of the affair again is that the women let him do it. How any creature in feminine form can be so spiritless and so slavelike in this land of college women is beyond ordinary comprehension. In the very smallest detail, even of those women's poor calico dresses and sunbonnets, that coarse old tyrant "bosses" them like a Turk. Barbary Ann believes she must submit to it for the sake of "support" for herself and son.

GOWNS OF THE SEASON.

Mr Lady Herself In Velvet and Fine Cloth.

A very stunning gown carried out in the fashionable novelty of the season—velvet in a lovely shade of cigar colored brown—has a deep flounced skirt, each flounce bordered with an application of brown cloth. The upper part of the skirt is composed of many fine plaits running horizontally, following the curve of the waist. The velvet bolero has an applique of cut out cloth, and a square collar of venetian point lace bordered with fur forms points on the arms. The sleeves are puffed at the elbow and are quite tight fitting above and below. A high orange cravat taffeta waist, with the same color repeated in the cravat, completes a delightful whole.

Perfectly stunning is a gray velvet-een dress made with a three-quarter Louis XVI. coat. The wide revers of white cloth were trimmed with black and silver galloon, and buttons of old silver fastened the coat, which was lined with pale green brocade. A full frilled chemisette and jabot were worn with the costume. The skirt had several bias flounces edged with the black and silver trimming.

The visiting toilet illustrated is of plum panne cloth. The full skirt is laid in plaits around the waist and adorned at the bottom with a looped trimming composed of a wide and narrow black braid. The old little basqued coat is carried in a line from shoulder to waist and further beautified with revers of braid trimmed velvet and a waistcoat of white suede fastened with a double row of small gold buttons. The sleeves are shirred up the center and finished with turned back cuffs and puffings of lace, which also make the chemisette.

SLEEVES OF THE MOMENT.

They Are Eccentric In Makeup, but Withal Beautiful.

Sleeves from all ages have been called in to help out the general modern variety of arm adornment. All styles are acceptable this winter unless they puff and droop below the elbow.

A pretty sleeve has two puffs, the upper one fulled considerably at the armhole and the second puff finishing at the elbow in a three inch ruffle which hangs over a tight fitting cuff of tucked mull or embroidery.

Coat sleeves run the gamut from perfectly plain ones with just a little fullness at the shoulders to elaborate affairs trimmed in all sorts of novel ways.

On all the smart sleeves puffs and puffs with shirrings in between meet with general favor.

The rather unusual blouse illustrated has a very pretty sleeve formed of a deep puff to the elbow and finished with shirrings and a short ruffle. The high cuff is made of alternate rows of embroidered cloth and stitched bands. The blouse itself is of dark green fine broadcloth, and the pelerine effect on the front of the waist is stitched and edged with hand embroidery carried out in peacock colors. The turned over collar about the high neckband is of the same embroidery. The long tie fastened at the neck with enameled buttons is of peacock blue and green changeable silk.

TOILED FOR SEVEN YEARS.

Prisoners in French Penal Settlement Betrayed After Digging Long Tunnel.

Patience in working for freedom even greater than that displayed by the prisoners who escaped from Libby prison during the civil war was shown not long ago in the French penal settlement in New Caledonia. The convicts live in barracks and every morning they are searched and locked in.

Among the prisoners were two marine engineers who were in for political crimes. They lived together in the same hut. Every night for two years they labored at digging an underground chamber beneath their house, concealing its entrance during the day. Every morning each of them carried out some dirt in his blouse or his pockets.

Their hut stood near the seashore. After seven years' toil they had dug a tunnel reaching almost to the sandstone bank by the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a large cavity, and in this cavity they set to work building a boat. But cutting through to the beach they were able to come out at night and find pieces of driftwood on the shore, and every serviceable piece of timber they dragged in.

In their underground chamber they made a forge, and with little bits of steel and iron, some smuggled in from the marine repair shops in their hair and under their arm pits, they made first tools, then bolts, rivets and the necessary ironwork for the building of a launch. Then they set patiently to work building an engine for the launch. When that was finally accomplished they had been working nightly for over seven years.

At this time another convict was lodged with them, a Paris embezzler, and they had to take him into their confidence. For six months he helped them, until everything was ready, except to provision the boat. Then the embezzler turned informer, hoping to gain favor by the ruse. Next night guards surprised the two marine engineers in their underground chamber, seized their tools, and put them into solitary confinement with ball and chain.

The subsequent investigation brought to light the entire plot. The seven long years of patient toil so impressed the French commandant that a year later he managed to obtain a pardon for the two engineers, and they returned to France.

HOW FROGS CAME TO BE.

Mythical Tale Accounts in Strange Manner for Existence of the Croakers.

Did you ever hear how frogs originated? It is a queer story, but then it happened a long time ago, when the world was young and all sorts of queer things were happening. We can, of course, believe as much or as little of such stories as we please, but at least they entertain us, says an exchange.

Now as to the frogs, they came into being because a weary, thirsty woman was prevented from getting a drink of water. Here is the way the story is told:

"Latona was a beautiful goddess, who lived with the other goddesses and gods on Mount Olympus, where Jupiter and Juno reigned, as you know. She was a favorite with many things, but chiefly for being the mother of Apollo and Diana. It seems that she incurred the ill will of Juno in some way and as Latona was banished from Olympus, with no place to put her foot and no shelter for her weary head, for Juno had made Terra, the Earth, promise that she should not find rest anywhere.

"Neptune, the god of the sea, however, took pity on the banished goddess and invited Latona to the Isle of Delos, which then floated under the water, but rose to the surface at his command. There she found peace and comfort, and there she brought up her two famous children, Apollo to become the god of the sun and Diana the goddess of the moon.

"But perhaps you are wondering what all this has to do with the frogs. It is said that one day while Latona was wandering, hot and weary with her children while they were yet babies she came to a pool of clear, sparkling water. Half dying with thirst, goddess as she was, she ran toward the pool to drink some of the cool water, but a crowd of ugly rokels surrounded it and kept her away.

"She had up to this time borne her privations and sufferings with patience and resignation, but at this act of wanton cruelty her patience gave way and turning furiously on the rokels she turned them all into croaking frogs, which they have remained to this day."

War and Population.

Statistics of population seem to show that after long and severe wars, in which many men are killed and the male part of a country's population is greatly decreased, there is for several years a preponderating birth of male children until the normal proportion between the sexes is restored. This seems to have been noted after the Thirty Years' war in Germany, after the Napoleonic wars in France, and even in more recent times after the siege of Paris.

Cost of Coronation.

The cost of the coronation of King Edward VII. establishes a record for modern times. It was considered a lordly and magnificent thing for the subjects of George IV. to spend £238,238 in putting a crown on his head but we have eclipsed their lavishness by £131,000. William IV. and Queen Adelaide were content with a modest £50,000.—London Tit-Bits.

The New Woman

What She Is Saying, Thinking and Doing

Among the few flashes of light through the darkness of the war in the orient is the work of Mme. Varia Stoessel at Port Arthur. When her husband was ordered to the command of the fortress which he said would be his tomb Mme. Stoessel went too. Civilians at length left; women and children were ordered to go too. The commander's wife remained to help the wounded, sick and suffering common soldiers in the Russian stronghold. Of her own free will she took charge of the ambulance service, directing the disposition of all who were conveyed to the hospitals. She even went to the exposed portions of the forts and tended with her own hands those who were wounded. When she was doing this one day a fragment of shell struck the Port Arthur angel, injuring her in the shoulder. Then she herself had to be lifted tenderly into one of those ambulances whose journeys about the forts she had so often superintended, and she was conveyed, hurt and bleeding, to an army hospital. No misfortune that had overtaken the fortress in all the dreary months of the siege spread through it such grief and gloom as the wounding of Mme. Stoessel. Mme. Stoessel upon her couch in the hospital was told of this despondency and sorrow among the common soldiers. It touched her to the heart, and it also inspired her to do a braver act than any she had yet done. In five days after the shell had struck her shoulder she rose from her bed and caused herself to be dressed in her usual garments and taken from post to post through the fortress. The men, seeing her once more, cheered and wept, while many of them kissed her garments.

A strange study in psychology is that California girl who declares herself a "born tomboy. She is uncommonly intelligent and has a high school education, yet naturally detests and loathes the indoor trifles girls are usually trained to, naming particularly "fancy work and piano practice." On the other hand, all the athletic sports and active outdoor employments of boys were the breath of life to her. Swimming and horse breaking were two of her specialties. At length, when seventeen, she cut her hair short, dressed herself as a boy and ran away from home to seek her fortune. She readily found employment as a cabin boy on a steamer, as cowboy and bronco breaker and finally as a muleteer in Mexico. She dressed as a boy because thus she could in safety and without annoyance do the things she craved to do and exploit her ideals, such as they were.

The Japs present the finest example today of willing, thinking and doing. They have the confidence that they can do anything they desire to do, which is at least two-thirds of the battle. Why should not woman in her way follow their example? If a girl must earn her bread, let her use her thinkers and devise new ways to get a living or to improve on old ways. This she can always do. To the woman who wills and uses her brains success is sure.

Experience, observation, books — these three in this order of importance are our sources of knowledge.

Who is the old woman? Only the woman who cannot learn things—she who settles down like a cat upon a cushion and dozes through the years. Every one is always learning can never grow old.

Train yourself to keep your troubles to yourself. Don't pour them out upon acquaintances or strangers. It isn't their fault if you have troubles, and they don't want to hear of yours because they have so many of their own. And, besides, here is a point to consider—if you insist on telling other people of your grievances they will at length come to dislike and shun you, because thereby you prevent them from telling their troubles.

A man asks this question in a newspaper: "Is a woman as able to hang on to a car strap as a tired man returning from business?" What do you think?

A pleasant incident happened lately at an English educational conference. The president of the conference was Rev. H. B. Gray of Bradfield college. Mr. Gray said in his address that the British had much to learn from the Americans in regard to coeducation of years ago. He himself had carefully examined the system in America and found its effects, both moral and social, very gratifying.

At the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Columbia university, New York, there was dedicated to the use of Columbia's girl students for the next century a women's gymnasium that cost $400,000. Its purpose is the physical education of the feminine sex, primarily of teachers of physical culture, but incidentally of all who seek its advantages. It is owing to physical culture that American women have, as is conceded, the most nearly perfect figures of any of their sex.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

MECCA FOR THE SICK

WONDERS OF ST. WINEFRIDE'S WELL IN WALES.

Marvelous Stories Are Told and Believed in England of the Cures Wrought There—Blind Girl Made to See.

London (Eng.) Special.

While thousands of the more fortunate of the earth are flocking from all parts of the world to continental spas to seek or recruit health, there is another army, smaller, it is true, but still numerous, of whose pilgrimage the papers tell us nothing, making its way to a Mecca in Flintshire, on a similar quest.

They are a strange crowd, of all classes and afflicted by almost every ill that flesh is heir to—blind and deaf, the sick, the halt, the blind—all journeying to the shrine of St. Winefride, in the little town of Holywell, near the Dee estuary, in the hope that the miraculous waters of the well may make them whole. For long centuries these waters have wrought their miracles, the blind even have found sight in them, the dumb have had their tongues loosened, and the crippled have thrown aside their crutches and leaped in the joy of their recovery; and what has happened to others may, they think, also be the happy lot of every one of these pilgrims.

St. Winefride's well had its birth nearly 12 centuries ago, and a strangely romantic story is told of its origin—how its waters gushed forth from the ground on which the murdered daughter of a Welsh chieftain, the beautiful Winefride, fell; and ever since the water has flowed, bringing healing with it, until a mere list of all the miracles it has wrought would fill volumes.

Over this wonderful well the mother of King Henry VII. built the exquisite little chapel which is its shrine to-day. Beneath this chapel,

ST. WINEFRIDE'S WELL.
(Where Pilgrims Gather to Be Healed by Miraculous Waters.)

in a vaulted chamber of beautiful architecture, is the well on which the sculptured figure of St. Winefride looks down from under an elaborately-carved canopy; by the side of the well is a stone on which the bathers, after leaving the water, kneel in prayer, while all around, hanging from the roof and resting against the pillars, are crutches and other invalid appliances which the pilgrims, restored to vigor, have left behind them as votive offerings.

In a neighboring chamber is a spacious bath surrounded with dressing-rooms. Here the pilgrims bathe in the healthful waters and call on "St. Winefride, most admirable virgin, even in this unbelieving generation still miraculous," to pray for them. For 15 hours every day, but chiefly during the summer months, the pilgrims bathe in these waters, and offer up incessant petitions to St. Winefride, and on certain days the banner of the saint is carried to the well by chanting priests, followed by a long procession of pilgrims and residents.

Wonderful stories are told of the miracles wrought in this small Welsh town, and, however skeptically some may regard them, they are at least entitled to a respectful reception. That marvelous cures have been wrought is beyond question, and it is the writer's duty to chronicle them, and not to attempt to explain them. In one case, so the records state, a father brought his child and laid it on the altar, there to rest during the night before burial. To the amazement of all, when morning came the child was found restored to life and clamoring for food.

In another case a woman whose body had for years been racked and terribly deformed by rheumatism, and who had tried all the waters of the continent in vain, was able to stand for the first time for many a year the moment she entered the waters of the Holy Well, and after two more immersions was able to walk without assistance.

A girl who had been blind from birth was restored to sight on dipping her head once in the water of the well, and a dumb child began to speak after a little of the water had been poured into his mouth. These are but samples of the miracles said to have been wrought by the well of St. Winefride; nor is the virtue due to any medicinal quality in the water, since analysis proves that, beyond a little chalk and sulphate of lime, it contains nothing to which any healing virtue could possibly be credited.

DUEL FOR WIDOW'S HAND.

It Will Be Fought with Two Pinochle Decks Between Two Experts at the Game.

Guttenberg, N. J., famed for its wild woods, sparkling green dells, and shaded nooks, wherein a century ago many famous duels were fought, and later famed for its weird race tracks, and handsome widows, is soon to be the scene of another desperate encounter. The entire burg is aroused to intense excitement over the affair. The casus belli modestly but firmly declares itself in the person of Mrs. Emelia Arkland, a handsome widow. Mrs. Arkland has selected the weapons, has staked off the ground, and will watch the combat from the drop of the handkerchief to the last desperate shuffle.

The rivals—and Mrs. Arkland will tell you frankly that the rivalry solely is to determine who shall clasp her fair, plump hand in wedlock—are Rhinehold von Blessing, 39 years old, a master mechanic, and Capt. John Taylor, 43 years old, the commander of the Jolly Spark, a trim little ferry.

The weapons will be two pinochle decks, and the scene of combat the backyard of the widow's handsome villa. Here Von Blessing and Capt. Taylor will play a series of games and the winner shall escort Mrs. Arkland to the altar.

The struggle will commence at sunup, and, after a recess for refreshments, will continue until the shadows of the evening descend. All Guttenberg has been invited to watch the fray and to congratulate the happy victor. Besides being fair, fat, and 40, Mrs. Arkland has a snug bank account of $20,000 left her by her three lamented husbands.

"I love them both quite enough," said "Widow Wilhelm." "But as to which should be which, I couldn't quite select. I haven't decided yet on a day for the game, but it'll be soon, and we'll have a grand party."

MULES THRIVE ON THISTLE

Farmer in Chicago Suburb Prefers the Canadian Weed to American Beauty Roses.

William Klinke, a farmer of Riverside, a suburb of Chicago, says that corn, hay and oats do not compare with Canada thistles when it comes to fattening mules.

"Not in the same class, your honor," he said when he faced Justice Grant. He was charged with violating that section of the statute which prohibits unrestricted growth of Canada thistles.

Judge Sherman, the commissioner, was the prosecutor. He said that Klinke's farm was given up to Canada thistles. He said that there were enough thistles on the farm to convert the country for miles around into a sea of thistles.

"He certainly ought to be fined the limit of $100," said Judge Sherman when he had finished his testimony.

"Its talks foolishness, your honor," were Klinke's opening words. "I have Canada thistles on my farm, I admit. I like Canada thistles. There is nothing that the mules love so well. I wait until the flowers are in bloom and then to my mules. I have good mules. I sold a span the other day for $250. That is a good price, is it not?"

"Certainly," answered the judge.

"Nothing but the thistles. Of course, my other stock won't eat it. My cows and horses refuse, but the mules love it. May be their contrariness or something else. I don't know. I don't care. If the mules love Canada thistles, why, they get them."

"It's fair to legislate against the mule," continued the farmer. "People make fun of the mule, but he is a good animal. Moreover, Canada thistles are pretty. I like them much better than American beauty roses and they don't cost half as much."

Klinke then pleaded ignorance of the law and promised to clear his farm of the pest. He was dismissed upon motion of Judge Sherman.

An Honest Wedding Notice.

A western paper contains the following unique wedding notice: "The bride was born of honest, but well-meaning parents, and could walk alone at six months; at ten she could run real fast, and has never slackened her gait. She has many friends—most of them dead ones. The happy couple took a bridal trip to Westley, and will be at home with the old man until they are kicked out. The Tribune wishes them long life and happiness."

Encouragement to Matrimony.

Some of the innkeepers in Sweden charge less for a woman's meal than for a man's, on the theory that she is physically unable to eat so much. A married couple, traveling together, are charged for as many hotels as one person and a half.

BATTLE WITH GAME COCK.

After Struggle of Half an Hour Boy Is Exhausted and at Rooster's Mercy.

After a battle of almost half an hour with a game rooster, Frank Spencer, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Spencer, living north of Lafayette, Ind., was so fatigued and weak from loss of blood that he fell to the floor before the onslaught of the enraged bird and would probably have been killed and it not been for the timely arrival of his mother. The fight between the young farmer and the game chicken was the result of meddling on the part of the former.

Years ago the elder Spencer was quite a sport and raised fighting cocks for mains in different parts of the country, generally for Indianapolis people. He formerly had about 50 birds which he sent to different places, but for the past ten years has not meddled much with the chicken fighting game. He has lived on the farm for about five years and concluded that farming was a little bit better than fighting chickens, anyway.

He kept but one game rooster, having purchased it about two years ago. He was said to be a good fighter and the former chicken raiser thought he would like to have a remnant of his old life about the place. The game chicken could not be left out with the other chickens, as he refused to let any other rooster stay about the place. So "Teddy," as the rooster was called, was put in a large yard all of his own, where he could strut around and crow to his heart's delight.

The old fellow had been left alone for a long time and grew spurs about two inches long and as sharp as needles. The father had often cautioned his son against going into the coop with the rooster, as he knew that game chicken would fight him the minute he entered.

The boy thought his father was fooling and on the first opportunity crept into the yard, where Teddy was king. Teddy is a handsome bird with long, shiny red feathers, and Frank believed that there would be no trouble. He carried a club along with him, however, and to this is partly due the fact that he is at present alive.

As soon as he entered the cage, Teddy was after him, using both spurs and bill in the attack. Frank used his club as best he could in the cramped quarters, but soon tired out. He then used his hands, trying to catch hold of the fowl. Teddy was in his element and dug his sharp spurs into the soft flesh of his victim with vengeance, two of the stabs going through the wrist. The boy finally fell to the floor of the cage with exhaustion, the rooster still keeping up his murderous assault.

Mrs. Spencer climbed into the cage and after a short fight with the then tired rooster, knocked him to one side, grabbed her child and managed to escape.

THE YOUNGEST OF UNIONS

It Is Composed of Janitors, Watchmen, Window Washers, Scrubwomen and Porters.

Chicago Special.

The International Union of Building Employes of America, the youngest national labor organization, with headquarters in Chicago, was formed at Milwaukee in February of this year. The convention was held under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor, with which the union has been affiliated since its formation. In its membership it includes elevator conductors and starters, window washers, janitors, night watchmen, janitresses, scrubwomen, porters and attendants in lavatories and insane asylums. At the time of its organization there were 12 local unions represented by 23 delegates at the convention, but in the few months of its existence it has grown until at the present time it has 64 locals affiliated with a membership of about 2,500. There is a broad field for organization work under the jurisdiction of this union, and it intends to start an active campaign for many more years into the fold. Although it has local unions in a number of cities, Chicago is its stronghold, as this class of labor is not organized in the principal eastern cities. The locals of janitors and janitors' and washers have increased their wages on an average 33 per cent. since they organized and the working conditions have been improved. Charles L. Fieldstack is president of the national organization and James McLean is secretary. The former was elected at the convention in February and the latter was appointed by the executive board to fill a vacancy.

APACHE VS. APACHE

ACCOUNT OF A BATTLE BETWEEN INDIANS IN SOUTHWEST.

Government Troops Had to Settle the Difficulties Between Two Jealous Chiefs—The Result of Too Much Tiswin.

Soon after the defeat of the Mescalero Apache Indians by the American troops, late in the '70s, a portion of the tribe fled over the border into Mexico, and the remainder, submitting to American control, were assembled on a newly created reservation of public land extending along the banks of a little, head-long mountain stream in southern New Mexico, known as the Tularosa.

The settlement of the Indians on these lands was promptly followed by the cantonment of a company of infantry near by, to prevent, if possible, the departure of Apache raiding parties that might be organized to operate against Mexican ranches and American settlements.

The task proved a difficult one for the troops, owing to the restlessness of the Indians, who now for the first time in their history experienced restraints beyond those imposed by their personal necessities, and would have been almost impossible but for the existence of two rival factions in the tribe, headed respectively by Long Tail Bull and Little Eagle. These chiefs were intensely jealous of each other and through their faithful followers kept the troops in some measure informed of what was going on within the ranks of their opponents. These expositions led quickly to much bitterness of feeling between the factions and resulted at last in one the Indians, a primitive beer with fire-arms and bows and arrows, precipitated by an over indulgence in an intoxicating beverage of native brewing, known as tiswin.

A portion of the corn issued to the Indians, it was subsequently discovered, was saved by them from each issue for the manufacture of tiswin. When a sufficient quantity of grain had been obtained for this purpose it was moistened in water and buried in the earth, where it was kept until germination had begun. It was then disinterred and after being thoroughly dried in the sun was crushed and ground into powder between flat stones. The meal thus made, together with some saccharine matter obtained from the roasted leaves of the maguey plant, was then placed in a great earthen vessel filled with water and permitted to ferment. Within a few days an intoxicating beverage resulted that was fully capable, when taken in sufficient quantities, of rendering the poor Apache drinker a living reality of Dante's imaginary "Inferno," and a worthy representative of a long time resident of Hades.

It happened that the rival factions under Long Tail Bull and Little Eagle, thoughtless it may be of possible consequences, joined in the tiswin making and united in drinking the decoction when it was ready for consumption. The Bull and the Eagle no sooner felt the quickening tingle of the tiswin stimulate their veins than they hastened to meet in deadly combat and but for the interference of the troops a fight of a fiercer character than that which actually occurred would have proceeded to butcher each other in true Apache style with their hunting knives. Foiled in this savage pastime they quickly drew apart, followed by their respective factions, and, seeking the cover of standing timber and the trunks of fallen trees near their encampments, at once opened fire upon each other with their bows and arrows and rifles.

Every now and then a warrior of one of the opposing factions emerged with a defiant yell from his cover and appeared momentarily in the open, exposed to the fire of his enemies. During the time of his exposure he indulged constantly in wild shouts of defiance, the meanwhile gesticulating ceaselessly with his hands and arms as he sprang about incessantly with the agility of a jumping-jack. Each one of these heroes, as he made a target of himself, was the signal for a shower of barbed arrows and rifle balls from the opposite side, but fortunately the aim of the rivers was greatly impaired by the intoxicating beverage in the use of which he indulged and but few casualties occurred.

The troops finally came hurrying upon the scene, and intervening between the combatants, quickly put an end to the contest. To prevent its possible recurrence a guard was established near the encampments and the unconsumed tiswin unceremoniously turned out on the ground.

Profiting by this experience the issue of corn by the officials in charge was thereafter confined to broken grains, and tiswin ceased, for the time being at least, to be a possibility.

BAREFOOT TO SAVE SHOES

Pretty Denver Stenographer Creates Genuine Sensation When She Appears on Streets.

A pretty blond stenographer created a sensation on Fifteenth street, Denver, Col., during a recent storm. She had gone out to lunch, and when she left the restaurant she saw that it would be impossible to return to an office in the Mining Exchange building, where she was employed, without damaging her new white low shoes and a pair of fancy stockings. So she deliberately removed the shoes and stockings and started down the street barefooted.

Policeman Michael Horkans stood at the corner of Fifteenth and Curtis streets when he saw the young woman coming down the street. She was followed by a big crowd and she was running to escape. In her hand she carried her shoes and stockings. Horkans attempted to find out what all the trouble was about, but the young woman disappeared in the Mining Exchange building.

"What did you do it for?" asked the policeman.

"I had no idea it would attract any attention," replied the young lady. "I had to get back here in a hurry and I didn't want to ruin my shoes." On the desk in front of her were the shoes, a pair of white kids.

MAKE MONEY AS FARMERS.

Women in Various Parts of the Country Who Have Taken Up Farming in Practical Way.

One of the interesting features of modern feminine industry is the extent to which women are following the latter day cry: "Back to the land." Mrs. Harriet M. King has a good right to her western title of "cattle queen," for her ranch near San Antonio, Tex., is larger than many of those German principalities which have given monarchs to reigning houses of Europe. Her Santa Gertrude ranch is 90 miles long, and includes 1,500,000 acres within its barbed wire fences. It is nearly twice as large as Rhode Island. Two thousand employes care for its 100,000 cattle and 50,000 sheep. The income of the ranch is between $300,000 and $400,000 a year, and the owner laughed at the offer of a certain syndicate to buy it for $6,000,000 a year or two ago. Mrs. King is the personal manager of this vast domain. The second great woman land owner of the west is Mrs. F. H. Kriesman, of St. Louis. Her L. S. ranch near Tascosa, Tex., is 30 miles square. Mrs. Kreisman understands both the raising and selling of cattle, being a practical woman and business woman.

Miss Austin, a San Francisco schoolteacher, is starting with a small vineyard near Fresno, was the pioneer in packing raisins in attractive form for the high-class market. She introduced a number of improvements, both in the vineyard and the packing house. The washington navel orange industry of California sprang from the planting of trees from Brazil by Mrs. Tibbetts, of Riverside, and Mrs. E. G. Shields originated the pampas plume industry, which was for some years very profitable. Mrs. Richards is a member of the state board of trade, and has a magnificent fruit farm of 250 acres in Sacramento valley, in which she began 20 years ago, a widow, with no capital except a household of children. Miss Clara Wilbur, of New Haven, Conn., specializes on violets and carnations, and as she becomes better established intends to specialize on orchids and other fragile and high-priced blooms.

Radiator as an Incubator.

While carrying on a series of experiments in his laboratory with chicken life during the embryonic stages, Dr. Counter, a young dentist, of Toledo, succeeded in hatching chicks out by means of an ordinary steam radiator. The egg was placed in a small paper box and hung from the radiator during the period of incubation. At the end of the 21 days the chick was hatched, and has since been kept in a paper suit box, almost three by one and one-half feet, with a little shelter in the corner of it. The box is hung near the radiator, and its inmate, now grown to be a strong and vigorous as one could expect a chicken to be raised under natural conditions.

A Bridge Built of Coffins.

A curious bridge was built by the British troops in 1900, when they were marching on Pekin. They found their progress barred by a river of considerable width and depth. A timber party was formed, but found nothing to cut down or collect with which to build a bridge. At last a large store of coffins was discovered in the village, and with these the soldiers built their bridge and crossed dry over the receptacles for the dead.

HAY CROP OF NEW YORK.

Value of the Harvest in the City Alone Is Estimated at Fifty Thousand Dollars.

New York city's hay crop, public and private, which is now being harvested, must be worth fully a million of dollars.

The city alone harvests hay from the many hundred acres of park land, and the crop must be worth at least $50,000, though the park department receives no such price for it, says the Sun.

All over the upper part of The Bronx and in other semi-rural boroughs, especially the boroughs of Richmond and Queens, haying occupies a considerable number of the inhabitants in the last week of June and the first week of July. The abundant rains of some weeks ago in effect made the crop, and hay is running from one and a half to three tons to the acre.

Haying gives the suburban regions a new touch of the country. Even where there are no actual farming operations going on there is usually some one with a mower, often the worse for wear, ready to cut hay for his neighbors.

A good deal of the city hay crop is cut with old-fashioned instruments. The cradle, like the horse car, has persisted in New York, although it excites ridicule in the local country. Much of the local hay crop is cut with scythes, and even the sickle is occasionally used.

It is often hard for the local hay grower to find a skilled haymaker, and wages are so high in the city that haying is not profitable. Some suburbanites who own acres of hay finds that it barely pays to cut and store the crop.

For this reason most of the local hay crop is sold standing at absurdly low prices. Half a dozen charitable institutions in The Bronx, with large grounds upon which hay grows, are glad to turn it over to friends or neighbors on nominal terms.

In some such cases all sorts of persons, men, women and children, are pressed into service at the harvest, and there are even gleaners, as in old Scriptural times, who follow the haymakers about the fields to gather a little harvest of their own. Up at Wakefield the other day there worked in a single hay field a policeman, the wife of a neighboring shopkeeper, several hired haymakers and a tiny four-year-old volunteer, a chubby, black-eyed little girl in an immense straw hat, who manfully turned the hay with a full-grown wooden rake.

Suburban haymaking is sometimes made the excuse for a frolic and picnic to which urban friends are invited. Then you may see merry girls in smart gowns and rough straw hats playing at harvesting. The picnic ends in a supper by moonlight among the haycocks, with a profusion of sights and sounds and odors that create the illusion of the real country.

In some of the remoter parts of The Bronx the serious hay harvest is that of the flat marshes, where men with scythes and sickles venture far out upon the tidal plains and gather a rank crop, which is valued not only as a food for beasts, but is much used by the market gardeners of the region for mulching.

Part of the crop is usually stored all winter long upon bits of fast land, and nothing gives the wintry landscape of the marshes so warm a suggestion of summer as these amber mounds, smooth, soft and distinctly rich in tone, shelting into the general coloring of the level shorn grass.

TREASURES ON THE ROAD.

Odd Hiding Places Contrived by Travelers for Their Valuables.

It is an old joke about the secret hiding places women have for their money when traveling, but no better ways have been discovered for keeping money safe than to tuck it away in the front of the blouse or slip it in a bag hung at the waist and worn under the dress skirt. A purse that fastens to the belt is well enough for the daytime, but at night the traveled woman sometimes some place more secure than her pillow or a spot under the mattress. One ingenious girl has made herself a set of washable linen cases that are like two compartments of a pocketbook, only one is smaller than the other and when slipped inside the larger one. Checks, bills, drafts or even gold may be tucked away in the smaller compartment, and this in turn folded neatly into the larger one, and the whole fastened round with a white linen tape that is long enough to go over the head. One advantage in these linen cases is that they can be washed after each trip and are always fresh for another. To be very elegant one might have one's initials embroidered on the outside of the case or one's name in full if it could be worked on it. Longer receptacles intended to hold check book, credentials and letters of credit are also made of white linen, bound with linen tape. More elaborate ones are made of moire silk, hand-painted and bound with narrow satin ribbon. They are lined with plain taffeta and look very handsome, but I doubt if they will give the service of the plainer linen ones, and I am sure they will not be so hygienic as a bag that will stand washing.

THE LIFE OF FINSEN.

DISCOVERER OF "LIGHT CURE" IS A WONDERFUL MAN.

Himself a Hopelessly Sick Man, He Is Devoting All His Time to the Alleviation of Human Suffering.

London (England) Special.

Nearly two years ago there was published an article on the light cure at Copenhagen founded and directed by Prof. Niels R. Finsen. Since that article appeared, Prof. Finsen has won the great Nobel prize for scientific research, and in the Pall Mall Magazine Mr. Georg Brochner describes him as "An Apostle of Light." Prof. Finsen, it seems, is still only 43. "His life hangs on a thin thread. Every day he is growing thinner, though it is impossible to say what disease his marvelous vitality and mental stamina may yet work." He suffers, and has suffered for many years past, from affections of the heart and liver, as well as from dropsy.

Even if Finsen were not the world-famed doctor and scientist—by instinct he is more of a brilliant explorer in the regions of science than he is a doctor —he, by reason of his personality, by his views, as to the earnestness of which he has just given the most convincing proof, would be a most remarkable and interesting man, imbued as he is with a fervent, idealistic, humane radicalism, holding opinions that in some respects may be said to resemble those of Tolstoi, theosophists for instance, almost seems to dislike money—not so far as his dear "institute" is concerned, but as regards himself and his family. He wishes his son to be able to say, in the words of the charming Danish poet, Holger Drachmann: "I thank thee, my father, that thou wert not a wealthy man;" and if Finsen's son inherits his father's views, he will say so, or he will in any case have the opportunity of doing so. He is, and always has been, very poor, though private benefactors and the Danish government have both lent him a helping hand.

Even in his boyhood, flight and the effect of light had a wonderful charm for him, and he very early noticed and studied the influence of light upon animal life. He is a native of the Faroe islands, and passed his student's examination at Reykjavik, in Iceland, lands where the contrast between light and darkness is not unlikely to be brought strongly home to an observant mind.

Chronically ill for nearly 20 years past, he is now condemned to live with the greatest caution, his food being carefully weighed. His temperature is always normal, and he spends most of his time lying down, unable to see anybody, even in his own family. For a year or more he has not even been able to visit the institute, which is only a few steps away from his house.

His discoveries have evolved, so to speak, from his mind during a long process of thought and work. He has by no means successful investigated one of his inventions, certain hematite or blood lozenges, are now sold in all countries, the considerable proceeds, going of course, to the Finsen institute.

It is now possible to say that the light-ray therapy of light, the essence of which is the removal of the chemical rays that have the inflammatory effect upon the skin. His red-light or negative-light treatment has been adopted in all the countries with excellent results, more especially for smallpox, though also for other affections; it does not exactly cure the illness of smallpox, but it does away with the most dangerous symptom, the secondary fever, and its outcome, the suppuration.

His positive-light cure, curing terrible diseases of the skin, diseases with which science had hitherto been unable to battle, he dived application of chemical rays, is itself a most conservative treatment, as no sound tissue is hurt or damaged. Downes and Blunt had already shown that light, more especially violet light, is a deadly foe to bacteria; it was also known that light can produce inflammation of the skin. Finsen's great discovery is the killing of the bacteria in the skin by light, or perhaps by the inflammation which the light produces. Nature herself does not yet been arrived at on this point, but Finsen is inclined to believe the latter.

The First Known Intoxicant.

The oldest alcoholic beverage is grape wine. Next to that in age is saki, a drink made from rice, and for over 2,000 years used by the people of Japan. The Japanese are a temperate race, and few of them become victims to alcoholic stimulants. When they are under the influence of alcohol they rarely quarrel, but become more good-natured and jolly, their faces generally gleaming with merriment.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Clean the pavements.

When President Roosevelt crushes the system of watered stocks, life preservers will be in big demand in Wall street.

Roosevelt is said to have remarked on election day evening that he was no longer "an accident." The Democratic party will not take issue on that statement.

Do your Christmas shopping in Plainfield. If the merchant does not have exactly what you want tell him to get it for you. Save your carfare and help increase local trade.

We always thought that Dr. Lyman Abbott was a friend of the newspapers, but just think what an affliction he will cause by his utterances of yesterday—columns of space to be devoted to religious controversy.

It will be hard work to get a jury to send to the gallows the North Branch man who killed his brother-in-law, since the fatal assault was provoked by the brutal treatment of his own sister at the hands of her husband.

FIRST BAPTIST MEN ARE ORGANIZING A CLUB

AT ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING, COMMITTEES ARE APPOINTED.

Under most favorable circumstances steps toward the formation of a men's association were taken at a preliminary meeting held in the Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church, Monday. In response to invitations sent out between fifty and sixty men were present and much enthusiasm was shown in the matter. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblies, pastor of the church, who was instrumental in bringing the matter about, was in charge of the meeting at the start. He read appropriate Scripture selections, and after a prayer by George A. Chapman, Charles W. McCutchen, chairman of the temporary committee on organization, was asked to state the objects of the men's association.

Mr. McCutchen presented his views on the matter, stating that in such a large church the value of a men's association to assist in various ways and to help the pastor, could not be estimated. He said that it was a question of deep concern to him that while all other organizations will fade away, "the Church of the Living God" will exist forever.

When Mr. McCutchen concluded his remarks, Dr. Chamblies said that before any action was taken he would like to introduce Rev. James A. Francis, who he was sure would give much inspiration and encouragement to the project. Mr. Francis was formerly pastor of the Clarendon Street Baptist church, of Boston, and has had considerable experience in men's associations. He gave a talk of much interest.

Mr. McCutchen was then requested to assume the chairmanship of the meeting and John G. MacLaughlin was made secretary pro tem. Remarks of encouragement were made by Dr. Chamblies, Kenneth Robbins, boys' secretary at the Y. M. C. A., F. H. Kinsman and Dr. J. Harvey Buchanan. All present then gave their names for membership and in response to a suggestion by J. Herbert Case, Mr. McCutchen appointed J. Herbert Case, Dr. Norman H. Probase, S. B. Joseph, J. Henry Crane and Alfred Day a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws, and George A. Chapman, Samuel Case, Harold Berrell, Gifford Cooley and Kenneth Robbins a committee on nomination of officers. Members of these will be ready to report at a meeting to be held the first week in January, when the organization will be completed.

As stated by Mr. McCutchen, the association will be formed chiefly for church work, while the occasional stated meetings will be devoted to talks by some prominent person, an evening of music or the discussion of some subject of major importance.

No Chase on Saturday.

Out of respect for W. D. Phillips, the popular New York business man, who died from a clot of blood on the brain while attending the chase of the Watchung Hunt Club last week, there will be no chase Saturday as had formerly been arranged. The Christmas Day hunt, however, which will be of special attraction, will be held on Monday, December 26.

TEACHERS' OFFICE TENURE

North Plainfield Board's Move for Permanent Pedagogues.

IT WILL PASS

Three Years Experience and a Majority Vote of Board Necessary to Place Teacher on List.

Preliminary steps toward the establishment of permanent tenure of office for its teachers, were taken by the North Plainfield Board of Education at its meeting last evening. The matter has been investigated by a committee and it submitted a report on which was formally adopted after a two hour discussion, Mr. Townsend alone voting against it. At the next regular meeting the matter will be formally acted upon.

The members of the Board who have had the matter in hand, inquired into the method in vogue at Jersey City, Newark, Bloomfield and many other places, and from these prepared a set of rules to be adopted and governed locally. They declare that a teacher shall be placed on the permanent list after three years' experience and fulfilling all other requirements, upon a majority vote of the Board of Education. The second clause tells for what reason they can be removed and Mr. Townsend objected to it on the ground that the Board bound itself to the teacher but despite all "ifs" and "ands" if the teacher wanted to leave, he or she could do it and there was nothing to prevent. He declared that the local authorities were going into the matter with their hands tied and that too much care could not be taken.

Superintendent Wightman and members of the Board expressed the belief that North Plainfield would derive great benefit from permanent engagements rather than the annual re-engagement, as at present, as it would relieve the teachers from the uncertainty of appointments all the time, and knowing that there were regularly engaged would do much better work. In past years there have been instances where good teachers would leave just before an election, fearing the personnel of the Board would be changed and that new men coming in might see fit to remove them and put friends in their places. Another fact brought out in favor of the plan was that being placed on the permanent list would be a great recommendation for teachers and they would strive to remain on it for future betterment.

The greater part of Mr. Townsend's opposition was based on the supposition that a teacher might be doing good work in school, but that his or her conduct outside might be anything but exemplary, and the rules contained nothing under which removal could be made. It was clearly ascertained that matters of this kind would be taken care of by the State laws. It was nearly 10 o'clock when the form prepared by the committee was amply modified and put to vote, passing with eight in favor and one against.

SCHOOL PHYSICIAN MAKES GOOD REPORT

GENERAL HEALTH CONDITIONS IN BOROUGH SAID TO BE EXCELLENT.

In the regular order of business at the North Plainfield Board of Education meeting, last evening, Dr. J. Harvey Buchanan, the school physician, presented an interesting semi-annual report. In it he informed the Board that he had examined to date 301 pupils and that the general health conditions are excellent. There is but very little defective eyesight, where five years ago it was prevalent, and the children have in every way benefitted by the improved sanitary conditions brought about by the appointment of a school physician.

Dr. Buchanan offered several suggestions for continued betterment of the school surroundings, principal among them being the purchase of formaldehyde lamps for disinfectant purposes and the sheathing of floors in the kindergarten departments. The report was accepted and referred to Dr. Cooley for action.

Through Superintendent Wightman, J. Edmond Skiff, teacher of music in the borough schools, solicited the aid of the Board in producing a musical cantata by school pupils the latter part of January. It will be an elaborate production and the proceeds are to go toward school funds he asked that the Board co-operate with him in securing an outside hall large enough to accommodate a chorus of 120. President Overton and Mr. Townsend were made a committee to confer with Mr. Skiff. Dr. Cooley was granted permission to make a few slight alterations in the first floor on the new school building in order to add more space to the teachers' room.

'PLAINS BAPTISTS' CALL

Rev. Moore Smith to Succeed Rev. Gideon M. Shott.

CAME FROM SCOTLAND

New Minister to Enter Upon His Duties on January 1—His Career.

The members of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, at a congregational meeting held Sunday after the morning service, voted unanimously to ratify the action of the church meeting two weeks ago when a call was extended to Rev. Moore Smith, of Glasgow, Scotland, to become the regular pastor of the church. A. D. Beakon acted as chairman of the meeting.

Rev. Dr. McBride, of the Home Missionary Society, who recommended Rev. Moore Smith to the pastorate of the church, was present and he said that he believed the church would always feel under obligations to him for making it possible to secure such an able minister and pastor, one who is peculiarly qualified for the position. It is believed that Mr. Smith will accept the call and will enter upon his new charge January 1.

Rev. Dr. McBride gave a brief sketch of Mr. Smith and his work. He said that for several years he had been assistant to Rev. Dr. John Robinson in Scotland and had been a resident of this country about a year. During that time he had filled various pulpits with satisfaction. He also read a letter of farewell and recommendation from the North of Ireland Baptist Association, where Mr. Smith had worked for many years.

Mr. Smith came here originally to give a series of lectures, being particularly brilliant on the subject of Irish poetry. He liked this country so well that he decided to remain here.

LITERARY.

A new detective story, by Anna Katharine Green, which opens with a mail, a murder, and a lost diamond, begins in Leslie's Monthly Magazine for January, and from these first chapters it looks as if Mrs. Green's latest story was her best. An article on Grand Opera in America by Heinrich Conreid, director of the Metropolitan Opera House, tells of some of the trials of an impresario in this country and an essay on "Does it Pay to Be a Teacher?" gives an excellent idea of the work, opportunities and rewards that most important career. The last of the articles on the theatrical Syndicate is a summing up of the conditions and prospects of the theatrical business and an account of some of the results of syndicate methods.

Pearson's Magazine for January presents a remarkable collection of interesting special articles and clever short stories, numbering in all eighteen. The leading article is a clear, concise, exhaustive narrative, handsomely illustrated and describing in a popular way the dangers, the difficulties and the magnitude of that most recent marvel of engineering, the New York "Subway." "Skin Sculpture, the Modern Taxidermy," and "A Seventy - five - Thousand - Pound Meteorite" are articles that will please those of a scientific turn of mind. "The Making of Incandescent Lamps," "The Life Story of a Wild Boar" and "Pneumonia, an Unsolved Problem," are articles that will appeal to those interested respectively in industry, in animals and in problems of health; while "Scoring the Best" is a stirring, stirring article consisting of adventures of those daring, resourceful fellows, the New York newspaper reporters.

The American Boy for Christmas will delight the boy's heart from its front cover design representing a young hunter, his dog, gun and game, clear through to the last page. As especially appropriate to the Christmas season are: "Father Laundy's Prize," by Lillian V. Lambert; "Kersey," by Evelyn M. Wood Lovejoy; "Uncle Sam's Santa Claus" and "Distributing Christmas Presents in the Navy." Other stories and leading articles are "The Pathway to Success," being an interview with ex-Senator T. W. Palmer of Detroit; "A Message to American Boys," by Governor Montague of Virginia; the how to's changing of Kirk Munroe's new story, "For the Mikado"; "James McGregor Billings' Moose Hunt," by Curwood, and other stories.

Old Force Residence Razed.

Nothing but the foundations remain of the old Force residence which was purchased by Alex. Kane a few weeks ago. He has gradually removed the lumber to the house. The property will be used by The Plainfield Trust Company for the new bank building to be erected in the spring. The barn which stood in the rear of the house was removed several weeks ago.

JOB FOR FRELINGHUYSEN

Thompson Faction Man to be Governor's Personal Aide.

THE SLATE IS FIXED

Former Assemblyman Lewis to be Clerk of Chancery—Newspaper Man for Private Secretary.

Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Raritan, chairman of the Somerset County Republican Committee, is slated for the position of personal aide to Edward C. Stokes, when he takes office as Governor of New Jersey.

Mr. Frelinghuysen is a nephew of Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, who was United States Senator from this State from 1866 to 1869, and from 1871 to 1877. Later he became secretary of State in the cabinet of President Arthur. Joseph Frelinghuysen is the chairman of the Somerset Republican County Committee. He has had several years' experience in military matters as an officer both in the National Guard and the Spanish War.

According to the slate figured out these selections are:

Edward W. Gray, formerly of Newark, but now of Trenton, for private secretary; Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Raritan, Somerset County, for personal aide, and former Assemblyman Vivian M. Lewis, of Passaic, for the chancery clerkship.

Mr. Gray is a newspaper writer and for several years business manager of the Newark Advertiser. He was in charge of the literary department of the Republican State committee during the last campaign. When the last Legislature authorized the Governor to appoint a commission to inquire into the housing of the poor in the State and to recommend whatever legislation they might deem necessary on the subject, Mr. Gray was made one of the commissioners. Then when the Legislature, on the commissioner's report, passed the present tenement house law, he was appointed by Governor Murphy one of the board, created by the act of which he is still a member.

Mr. Lewis is one of Paterson's leading lawyers. He was a member of the Assemblies of 1899, 1900 and 1901, and was one of the leaders of his party in the Legislature. It is said that he has the endorsement of former Governor John W. Griggs, and that his appointment would be satisfactory to the leaders of Passaic County.

THE CENTURY'S ART FEATURES.

A Number of Agreeable Surprises in the Field of Colored Work Promised Soon.

During the past months many pictures in color have appeared in the pages of The Century, notably: Maxfield Parrish's exquisite paintings for the articles on "Italian Villas and Their Gardens;" Miss Betts's charming pictures of the days of our fathers; the paintings by Frederick W. Stokes illustrating remarkable sky effects; Charles R. Knight's animal studies; Miss Wiese Cady's imaginative studies; Mr. Tobin's portrait of Pope Pius X.; reproductions of J. Wells Champney's pastels; Miss Ellen Bernard Thompson's studies of children; reproductions of paintings by George de Forest Brush, William M. Chase, Laura C. Hills, and others. It is the aim of The Century to confine its experiments in the field of color work to subjects which have unique-ness and an important reason for color treatment. Miss Betts will contribute several other groups typical of the same charming idea of "The Duet," "Christmas Callers," "St Valentine's Day," and "The Serenaders." Mr. Parrish has made a beautiful illustration for a story "The Princess and the Boy;" and the coming year of The Century will contain a number of agreeable surprises in the field of color work.

The Century will continue to print beautiful and representative examples of work by American painters and sculptors. It will have also articles on many who are coming to the front in art abroad, including Mucha, Zuloaga, and the German secessionists. An article on "Children's Costumes in the Nineteenth Century" will have exquisite illustrations by Maurice Boutet de Monvel. The late J. L. Gerome will be the subject of reminiscences which will be accompanied by interesting illustrative material. A paper on the Art Influence of Philadelphia by Harrison S. Morris will soon appear.

For twenty years Timothy Cole, the acknowledged master of wood-engraving of the world, has been in Europe for The Century reproducing the masterpieces of art for the pages of the magazine. Here have appeared the greatest works of the masters of the Italian, Flemish, Dutch and English schools. Mr. Cole is now engaged in reproducing the work of the Spanish masters, and superb examples of their art will appear from time to time. The artists whose work will appear in The Century during 1905 include all the notable illustrators of the present day.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS MEET

Executive Committee Considers Important Matters.

MR. ANDREWS PRESENT

Necessary for Committee to Raise Nearly $11,000 Every Year—Shop Meetings Reach Thousands.

The regular quarterly meeting of the State executive committee of the Young Men's Christian Association was held Friday night at Newark. There were present Charles T. Kilborne, East Orange, chairman; Edward S. Campbell, of Newark, treasurer; E. P. Holden, Madison; J. H. B. Cornell, Morristown; J. William Johnson, Summit; R. E. Moore, Elizabeth; F. H. Andrews, of this city; F. M. Geer, East Orange; Thomas S. Gladding, Montclair; F. W. Langstruth, Rahway; H. S. Park, Paterson; E. S. Cowles, Jersey City; R. D. Soper, Madison; Elnathan Drake and H. W. Hoek, of Newark. State Secretaries E. W. Hearne, C. B. Brown, G. R. Scott, W. D. McRae and Inter-Secretary J. R. Boardman also attended the session.

Reports were made by the secretaries which showed remarkable growth and development among the Young Men's Christian Associations of the State. Special features which were received with favorable comment were the work for soldiers at Fort Hancock and the summer camp at Sea Girt. Mention was also made of the railroad work and the factory department. Mr. Brown emphasized the value of the educational shop meetings, which were reaching thousands of mechanics. Mr. McRae, the new State secretary for small town and county work, outlined the steps taken in the recent organization work in Monmouth County.

Mr. Campbell told of the financial needs necessary to carry on the labors of the committee and urged that steps be taken to increase the number of contributors. The committee is required to raise nearly $11,000 each year, and New Jersey stands almost at the head of all the States in the particular work for which the committee exists.

MRS. J. A. SMITH AT REST IN BOUND BROOK CEMETERY

TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATE AT THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral services of Mrs. Augusta W. Smith, wife of James A. Smith, were held Sunday afternoon from the late home at 5 o'clock, there being a very large gathering of relatives and friends. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Smith was a member, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. George W. Quick, of Worcester, Mass. Mr. Herring made the opening prayer, read the Scripture lesson and then made a few remarks concerning the life and character of Mrs. Smith. Mr. Quick made the closing prayer.

There were a great many floral tributes from relatives and friends. The interment takes place Monday in the family plot at Bound Brook.

AMUSEMENTS.

Edward Terry, who is pre-eminently the greatest comedian in England, comes to America shortly at the head of Terry's Theatre Co., of London, opens for a brief engagement on the afternoon of Dec. 26 at the Princess Theatre. The first play presented will be "The House of Barnaldo," which was written by Georges Mitchell and originally presented with great success in Paris. The translation by Louis N. Parker, who wrote "The Sorceress" for Mrs. Patrick Campbell, ran more than a year in London, is a charming play of the type made familiar in America by the Empire Theatre Co. Mr. Terry's sale of seats begins Monday, Dec. 19, and there is every reason to expect that it will be exceedingly large.

What the Corporations Give.

Pennsylvania township receives this year a total of $1,166.90 as franchise tax from corporations. The Public Service Corporation pays the greatest tax, $617.24 on traction and electric light privileges. The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is next with $192.19. The smallest amount, $1.85, is paid by the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company.

Twenty Years in Guard.

Capt. W. B. Martin, of Co. K, completed twenty years in the service of the N. J. N. G. on Friday last, after filling important commands in four New Jersey companies, serving nine months in the Spanish-American war. He is one of the best riflemen in the United States.

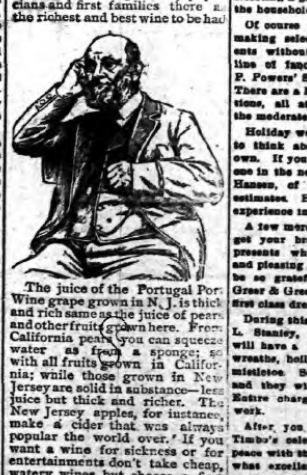
ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had.



The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but richer and richer. The New Jersey apples for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

E. H. BIRD, P. M.

Before you conclude your Christmas shopping go to Putnam & DeGraw's dry goods store and see what a fine stock of holiday goods is to be found there. You will have no trouble in selecting a gift for every member of the household.

Of course you must not think of making selections of Christmas presents without first seeing the large line of fancy and useful articles at J. F. Powers' Somerset street pharmacy. There are a hundred and one suggestions, all at a price within reach of the moderate pocketbook.

Holiday week is an opportune time to think about a residence of your own. If you are thinking of erecting one in the near future, ask Herman Hansen, of the borough, to submit estimates. He has had many years' experience in this line.

A few more days remain for you to get your brother and father Xmas presents which will be serviceable and pleasing to them. Nothing will be so gratefully received as one of Greer & Greenwood's neckties, or a first class dress suit case.

During this week and next Charles L. Stanley, in the North avenue florist, will have a big stock of Christmas wreaths, holly, Christmas trees and mistletoe, and in your orders early and they will be delivered promptly. Entire charge taken of decorative work.

After you have enjoyed one of Timbo's celebrated meals you feel at peace with the world and you realize what excellent food and fine service can be had for a reasonable price. Everything that the market affords will be found at this restaurant day or night.

HOME FIVES ARE ROUTED

Montclair Y. M. C. A. Snows Under Local Association.

RAHWAY TEAM WINS

Business Men's Aggregation No Match for Visitors—Loals Defeats Its Alumni.

The Montclair basketball team proved to be the fastest aggregation which has ever played on the local Y. M. C. A. floor, and the way it defeated the local team Monday by the score of 72 to 4, made the latter look like infants. In fact they were infants at the hands of the Montclair Y. M. C. A. players, whose passing and shooting was far superior to anything that has been witnessed in this city. It looked as though in the first half each of the second basket managed to score two points.

This was the line up and detailed score: Plainfield—Smith, Hand and Uninger, forwards; Collins, center; Neal and Scull, guards. Montclair—J. Calder and Rohn, forwards; L. Calder, center; Trembley and Millo, guards. Goals from the field—J. Calder, 11; Millo, 12; Rohn, 7; Trembley, 2; L. Calder, Hand and Smith. Goals from fouls—J. Calder, 4; L. Calder, 3. Referee—Morse. Umpire—George Hensley, of Montclair.

The Business Men's team of the Y. M. C. A. suffered defeat Monday at the hands of the Rahway team, the score being 37 to 17. The game was played on the local Y. M. C. A. floor and was an interesting one. At the close of the first half the score was 21 to 15 in favor of the visitors, who were superior man for man to the local players.

This was the line up and summary of game: Business Men—Reichert and Miner, forwards; Spicer, center; Lemon and Browning, guards. Rahway—Randolph and Trembly, forwards; Cunningham, center; Orr and Russell, guards. Goals from the field—Spicer, 2; Miner, 2; Reichert, 4; Randolph, 8; Trembley, 2; Orr, 2; Russell, 5. Goals from fouls—Spicer, Orr, 2.

The alumni of Leal's, and to a great extent the same players than composed Leal's regular basketball team last year, were defeated yesterday afternoon in a practice game by this year's five. It was a hard fought game, which at times needed to be a rough one. The two teams were very evenly matched and each point was hotly contested.

The score was tied, 6 to 6, at the end of the first half, and it was either team's game up to the last two minutes of play. Jewett again proved the star of the Leal's players, and put up a splendid article of basketball.

This was the summary: Leal's first team — Chapman and Jewett, forwards; Strong, center; Lyman and Manning, guards. Leal's alumni—J. Haughey and Abbott, forwards; Mellick, center, Robbie and L. Haughey, guards. Goals from the field—Jewett, 2; Chapman, Strong, Manning, J. Haughey, Mellick, L. Haughey. Goals from fouls—Jewett, 3; Manning, Mellick, 3; Abbott.

In Rev. Dr. Patton's Honor.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Patton, of Boston, brother of William L. Patton, of 512 East Seventh street, was given a reception at the Hotel Vendome, Boston, last week, in honor of his election as home secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of the Congregational church. Seven hundred persons attended the dinner. Dr. Patton was formerly pastor of the Congregational church at Westfield and gave that up charge to accept a pastorate in Duluth, Minn.

Mulford Estil Confined to House.

Mulford Estil is again confined to his room, unable to walk from having used his foot too soon after his accident in leaving a trolley car. He will not be able to be at his store this week. He has several competent young men to assist Will Williams, his head clerk. This is the first time in twenty-nine years that Mr. Estil has failed to be at his place of business at the holiday season.

Reception for the Bishop.

There will be a parish reception of St. Stephen's church Saturday night, at the home of the rector, 721 East Sixth street, from 8 to 10 o'clock. All the parishioners, friends and neighbors are cordially invited, as well as the various churches. The women of the parish, assisted by the young women, will be in charge. A feature will be the presence of the Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey.

EXPIRES IN HIS SADDLE

Huntsman Falls Dead Near Hillside Golf Course.

WAS GOING TO CHASE

Victim Was W. D. Phillips, Head of Big Chemical Concern and Popular New York Clubman.

Through a blood clot forming on his brain, William D. Phillips, of Glen Brook, near Stamford, Conn., president of the Phillips Chemical Company, and a popular New York clubman, died in his saddle, Saturday afternoon, as he and several other members of the Watchung Hunt Club were passing near the Hillside Golf grounds on the way to Oak Tree. He was chatting with one of the party when the reins dropped from his hands and he fell from his horse into the road. His prostrate form was picked up and carried to the old Mellick farm house nearby and Dr. Carman was summoned. The physician declared after an examination that death had been instantaneous and that it had occurred before he reached the ground.

Mr. Phillips was forty-three years old and was one of the original members of the club though he had never before participated in any of its weekly cross country gallops. The run Saturday was to have started from Oak Tree and the party was on the way to join other members when the fatality occurred. He was to all appearances in unusually good health and spirits and the only cause advanced for the clot is that excitement over the impending case led to the bursting of a blood vessel. He left his New York office at noon in company with a near friend, Mr. White, who was behind him when he fell. The latter took charge of the body and had it removed to A. M. Runyon & Son's parlors.

In addition to being president of the Phillips Chemical Company, he was one of its directors. The concern has offices and works in Glen Brook and also offices in New York on Pearl street. He was unmarried and belonged to a large number of New York's best known clubs, among them being the New York Athletic, the Manhattan, the Reform and the Underwriters, also the American Geographical and the American Chemical Societies and the Board of Trade and Transportation.

Outside the metropolis, he held membership in the Westburn and Hillandale Golf Clubs and the Suburban Clubs. He leaves but one brother, Dr. Alfred N. Phillips, one of the best known physicians in New York city.

FRANK SCHOONMAKER TO WED JANUARY 18

ELABORATE NUPTIAL CEREMONY TO TAKE PLACE IN NEW YORK.

Considerable interest is shown in the announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Grace L. Eaton, of New York, and Frank L. Schoonmaker, of this city, which will take place Wednesday afternoon, January 18, at the Collegiate church, Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street, New York. Miss Ruth Eaton will attend her sister as maid-of-honor, Mrs. Lewis H. Waring, of this city, and Mrs. Wisbrebee Black, of New York, will be matrons of honor, and the Misses Betty Collstrons, Evelyn Wilson, of Philadelphia, Helen Judson, Louise Vanderhoff, Mona House, of Texas, Madeline Evans, of Morristown, will be bridesmaids. Margaret Frederic Bull, who assisted his brother, Henry W. Bull, at his recent wedding, with Miss Maud Livingston, as best man, will act also in that capacity for Mr. Schoonmaker.

Miss Eaton is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Llewellyn Eaton, of 40 West Seventy-third street, New York. She will give her bridesmaids' dinner on Saturday evening, January 7, and Mr. Schoonmaker will give his bachelor dinner on the same night at Delmonico's. Mr. Schoonmaker is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, of this city, who are now living at their winter home, 13 East Thirty-fifty street, New York. He will give a bridal dinner and dance at the Metropolitan Club Annex on Tuesday night, January 3. Mr. Schoonmaker has been prominent in social affairs here during the past three or four years. Many Plainfield society folk will attend the wedding.

Good milk is one of the best beverages that one can drink with the meals. The place to get good milk is at William Lindsay & Company. It is absolutely pure, and Lindsay's delivery system is a great convenience.

ASSAULTED MAN IS DEAD

F. D. Cramer Succumbs to Attack of Brother-in-Law.

ASSAILANT IS LOCKED UP

Jacob Flomerfelt Defends His Sister, Who Was Brutally Treated.

Frank D. Cramer, who was attacked by his brother-in-law, Jacob Flomerfelt, at his home at North Branch several days ago, died Sunday from his injuries. Frank Cramer was the brother of former Assemblyman George Cramer. He was until recently a prosperous business man who conducted a large coal and lumber business and a creamery at North Branch.

The assault, which was the culmination of the domestic troubles of the Cramer family, occurred in the kitchen of the Cramer homestead at his early hour in the morning. Cramer was present at a sportsmen's dinner at a prominent hotel the night before the fracas. He arrived at North Branch on an early morning train. He was quarrelsome at the breakfast table and abused his wife.

Seated at the table was his brother-in-law, Jacob Flomerfelt, whose presence in the Cramer family had been a mystery to the residents of North Branch. Flomerfelt, who is sixty-five years old, was formerly a prosperous farmer in Bedminster township. He left his farm and took up his residence at the Cramer homestead, where he performed the work of a common farm hand about the place. It was rumored that he had made this sacrifice to protect his sister from cruel treatment.

When Flomerfelt left the breakfast table and went to the barn, Cramer was still in an ugly mood. According to Flomerfelt's statement of what happened after the scene at the breakfast table, he was startled by hearing his sister's cries for help as she ran toward the barn. He ran to her assistance. Flomerfelt says that he was aware that Cramer always carried a set of brass knuckles and a revolver, and he had frequently threatened to kill any man who interfered in his domestic affairs.

He had provided himself with a set of brass knuckles with a sharp blade about an inch long. As he entered the house he put on the brass knuckles. He found Cramer and his daughter strolling around the kitchen table.

Cramer attacked him, he says, as he entered. Mrs. Cramer and her daughter fled from the house and left the men fighting in the kitchen. Cramer was a powerful man, and Flomerfelt, who was twenty years his senior, was not a physical match for his big antagonist.

He fought frantically with his brass knuckles, which were effective blows. He continued to fight until Cramer was stretched almost lifeless on the floor, with one of his eyes cut out and twenty-seven wounds about his head and face.

Then the elder man left his victim and journeyed four miles to the county seat and gave himself up to the authorities. He made a straightforward statement of the whole affair to County Prosecutor Griggs and told him of the domestic troubles of the Cramers. Flomerfelt wanted to return to his sister to render her any assistance that he could to her in her trouble.

He was released for this purpose, with the understanding that he would return and give himself up when wanted. Flomerfelt returned to the Cramer residence and worked about the place until noon Sunday, when Cramer's condition became critical.

Flomerfelt then went away. Dr. William Lee, County Coroner, went to the Cramer residence Monday and began an inquest. He impanelled a jury of six men selected from the village, who viewed Cramer's body. The affair has caused no animosity between the Cramer and Flomerfelt families. It is the wish of the family of the dead man to keep the case out of the courts.

Jacob Flomerfelt, who is alleged to have inflicted injuries upon his brother-in-law, Frank D. Cramer, that Friday that resulted in his death, was arrested Monday by County Detective Totten at Larger Crossroads, where he formerly resided. He was taken to Somerville and lodged in jail there.

Flomerfelt is sixty five years old. Cramer was forty-five. Flomerfelt says that Cramer had repeatedly threatened to kill any one who interfered in his domestic affairs, and that fearing that some day he would have to fight Cramer he provided himself with brass knuckles, which he used on the man at the time of the assault. Flomerfelt says that Cramer was armed and also wore brass knuckles.

DANIEL FOR TOLLES PLACE

The Choice of Councilmanic Caucus for President.

DECIDED FRIDAY NIGHT

Third Ward Will Get Some Plums in Make Up of Common Council Committees.

Leslie M. Daniel, member of the Common Council from the Third Ward, was the unanimous choice of the other members for president for 1905, at a caucus held Friday night. Since election there has been considerable talk about a change in the presidency, but the many friends of Councilman Tolles hoped that he would continue to preside over the sessions next year. At a private caucus of some of the members for the purpose of ascertaining the strength of Mr. Daniel for the presidency he was favored by a sufficient number to elect him.

Last night's caucus was held chiefly for the purpose of selecting a president. There were no nominations, simply the suggestion being made that the members proceed to make a choice. The election was by paper ballots and Mr. Daniel received the majority of the votes. The selection was afterward made unanimous and to all appearances the most harmonious feeling prevailed.

Mr. Daniel's aspirations for the presidency were due to the fact that this will probably be his last year in the Common Council, and he would like the honor before retiring. Mr. Tolles presented similar claims a year ago, but it turned out that he received a renomination this year and was elected to succeed himself. He was one of the first to congratulate Mr. Daniel last night after the choice was made.

There was no talk as to the makeup of the committees for next year, that matter being left entirely to the judgment of Mr. Daniel. It seems to be the opinion that the Second and Third wards will receive proper recognition as to the most important committees.

After the selection of a president the rest of the evening was devoted to a discussion of general matters that will likely come up early in the new year. This discussion was more for the purpose of getting those matters in shape for presentation. There were no special matters introduced.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR INAUGURATION TRIP

BAND TO ACCOMPANY UNION COUNTY DELEGATION TO WASHINGTON.

The committee appointed by the County Republican Committee at its last meeting for the purpose of drawing up resolutions of condolence on the death of Assemblyman-elect Himbre, has sent its resolutions to the secretary, James O. Calvert, by whom they will be forwarded to the family. Former Assemblymen Codding, Newcorn and Meeker comprised this committee.

The committee on the arrangements for the inauguration reports that the expense will be from six to seven dollars including transportation, badge, etc. A special train will start at Elizabeth, and stop at all points between that city and Plainfield to receive passengers. The tickets will permit the bearers to return by any train. An Elizabeth band will accompany the delegation.

FIRE AT WASHINGTONVILLE.

Horse Kicks a Lamp Causing a $7,000 Loss.

Philip Acker, of Somerset street, lost his farm house and barn and two wagon houses as well as a hog pen at Washingtonville by fire early Sunday morning. A horse kicked a lantern held by Mrs. J. S. Higgins, wife of the tenant, and a blaze started. The flames spread rapidly and two horses, two cows, four hogs and over 100 chickens perished.

The farm wagons and all implements as well as the feed were entirely destroyed. The farm house was soon enveloped in flames and nothing was saved. The entire loss was $6,000 on the house and barn, and the insurance amounts to $3,100. The stock and furniture was valued at $2,000 and it was not insured.

To Initiate 35 Candidates.

Old Glory Council, Daughters of Liberty, met Saturday night and welcomed many of the new members recently received. Preparations are now underway for the installation of officers and the Christmas tree which will be a feature of the meeting to be held Saturday night, January 7. There are now about thirty-five new members to be initiated and the Council has decided that in the future there will be initiation but once a month.

REV. DR. SNODGRASS TO GO

If Conference Approves, Will Accept Call to Perth Amboy.

BISHOP FAVORABLE

Rev. S. K. Doolittle to Leave Dunellen—New Pastor for Grace M. E.

Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass, who is now serving his eighth year as pastor of the First M. E. church, has received a call to the pastorate of the M. E. church at Perth Amboy, has signified his desire to accept the same and has received the approval of the Bishop and now awaits the action of the Newark Conference which will meet in Halsey Street M. E. church, Newark, on April 5. Bishop Berry, of Buffalo, will preside.

—Dr. Snodgrass received the call to Perth Amboy about five weeks ago and has had taken plenty of time to decide the matter. Who his successor will be here is not known at present, as the standing committee on pulpit supplies has taken no action.

The church to which Dr. Snodgrass will go is about the same size as the one he is now pastor of, although conditions are vastly different, owing to the fact that Perth Amboy is more of a manufacturing town. Dr. Snodgrass has remained at the First M. E. church twice as long as any other pastor. Rev. Dr. Bennett and Rev. Dr. Mitchell, who succeeded him, each served four years. During his pastorate he has had great success, being instrumental in increasing the membership and interest and effecting a number of improvements.

There will be more than the usual number of changes at the coming conference, but none that will greatly effect Plainfield, except at the First M. E. church. Rev. George Mooney will remain at the Monroe Avenue church and a pastor will be sent to Grace M. E. church to succeed Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp, who went to Syracuse University.

Among the other important changes will be at St. James M. E. church, Elizabeth, the present pastor, Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, who was formerly at Grace M. E. church, going to the First M. E. church, Hoboken, to succeed Rev. Mr. Mead. Mr. Mead will go to the Centenary M. E. church, Newark, to succeed Rev. Dr. Spellmeyer, who was made a Bishop. Other changes will be made at Trinity church, Paterson, and the M. E. church at Montclair.

Rev. S. K. Doolittle, who is now serving his fifth year at Dunellen, will leave that church, but he does not know at present where he will go or who will succeed him.

HOW HARDING WAS KILLED

Details of Plainfielder's Death in Colorado Received.

CRUSHED UNDER CAR

Had Gone Out in Charge of Wrecking Crew to Clear a Track When Accident Occurred.

Through a copy of The Leadville, Colo., Herald Democrat, received in this city Tuesday, local relatives of Richard Harding, the former well known Plainfielder who was killed last week, learned for the first time the exact manner in which he met his death. The account reads as follows:

"Conductor Richard Harding was instantly killed and Conductor Joseph S. Patton and Car Foreman James J. Neville were injured in a wreck and an accident which followed the wreck on the Blue River branch of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad yesterday morning.

"Conductor Patton is in charge of the crew of the regular mixed train which goes out over the Blue River branch every morning. The train is composed of one passenger coach and baggage and freight cars. The train left here yesterday morning at 8:30 o'clock.

"One mile west of Fremont pass and fourteen miles from this city, the train struck a broken rail. One freight car and the passenger coach left the rails and fell into the ditch. Conductor Patton, who weighs over 300 pounds, was thrown heavily from his seat in the passenger coach when the car fell from the track. He was bruised about the body, but not seriously injured.

"A wrecking crew was sent out from the Denver and Rio Grande yards here in charge of Conductor Harding. Car Foreman Neville accompanied the wrecking train.

"While the wrecking crew was endeavoring to replace the derailed cars upon the track, the accident occurred which caused the death of Conductor Harding and the injury of Mr. Neville.

"Jacks had been placed under the passenger coach and a block and tackle rigged up to lift the heavy car upon the track. The tackle appeared to be all right and Mr. Harding gave the signal to hoist the car.

"When the weight of the car was lifted, something broke. The tackle collapsed and the jacks under the coach gave way. The car toppled and fell back against the bank, catching Conductor Harding under it.

"His life was crushed out almost instantly. He was caught across the breast and when taken from under the coach it was found the every bone in the upper part of his body had been crushed and broken. His face was a mass of bruises, but was not greatly disfigured.

"Mr. Neville, who was helping the wreck-crew was close to Harding when the crash came, but succeeded in getting from under the falling coach. He was struck on the right side by the falling car and severely bruised. The physicians do not think his ribs are broken. His left wrist was sprained very badly and it is feared that one of the bones in it is broken or fractured.

"Mr. Neville was brought to this city when the body of Conductor Harding was brought in. Mr. Neville was taken to his home at 1315 Poplar street.

"The body of Conductor Harding was taken to Buxton's undertaking parlors.

"Harding was about thirty-seven years of age and unmarried. He had been in the employ of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad for eight years in this district. He was a member of the Order of Railroad Conductors and that order will take charge of the arrangements for the funeral."

J. J. Leahy, of Richmond street, is an expert plumber, and all work left in his charge will be promptly attended to and the charges will not be exorbitant.

TWO PLANTS TO BE BUILT

New York Vacuum Cleaning Co. and W. H. Rogers Silver Corp. Buy Sites.

IN THE EAST END

David T. Kenney Brings a Concern to This City—Important Realty Deals—Work on the Buildings to be Started in the Spring.

Two important real estate deals have just been closed which will add materially to the valuation of Plainfield's property interests. The first deal is the purchase from the New Jersey Land Improvement Company by the William H. Rogers' Silver Corporation of a strip of land 500x200 located at the corner of Leland and South avenues, upon which will be erected a factory for the manufacture of silverware. The structure will be erected next spring and will be about 40x120, with the idea of adding to it as the business increases.

The second deal is the purchase by David T. Kenney of two large strips of land in the same neighborhood. His first purchase was that of 881 feet of property lying between the Hygeia Ice Company plant and the Netherwood railroad station. This was owned by Dr. O. L. Jenkins. In addition Mr. Kenney has just purchased 600 feet of land adjoining his other property which brings him within three hundred feet of the Netherwood station. It is the intention of the New York Vacuum Cleaning Company, of which Mr. Kenney is the principal stockholder, to erect a modern factory on this property where machinery for the cleaning process will be made on a large scale. The additional 600 feet of property was purchased from the New Jersey Land Improvement Company. The deeds in these purchases were passed today.

Ever since the Rogers' Corporation started its manufacture of silverware here the business has increased to large proportions and the securing better accommodations has become a necessity. The new structure to be erected in the east-end of the city will be modern in every respect and will be an acquisition the manufacturing interests of the city.

The New York Vacuum Cleaning Company has been unable to secure a plant in New York that would meet its needs and Mr. Kenney, being a resident here, was largely instrumental in the purchase of the Plainfield property and the adoption of plans for the erection of a factory here.

During the past year there has been a great demand for property in the east end of the city and today it is difficult to secure valuable sites along or near the railroad. The boom in property there is a healthy one and bids fair to be a close rival of the West End in manufacturing industries.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION

TRINITY REFORMED MEMBERS ALSO HEAR GOOD REPORTS.

At a meeting of the leaders of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, Friday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming year: Superintendent, F. E. Smith; assistant, Horace J. Martin; secretary, Miss H. Bird; assistant, Chauncey F. Oeltjen; treasurer, H. E. Gayle; librarian, H. C. VanMatre; assistant, Miss Will F. Williams, James Love, Charles Zimmer and Fred Donavan; pianist, Miss Lillian A. Force; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. J. H. Tier; superintendent of junior department, Mrs. Hobofield; superintendent Home Department, Mrs. George Sauns. The sub-committees were also appointed.

In the absence of F. E. Smith, Horace J. Martin presided and heard the reports for the past year. They were given by the secretary, treasurer and others and showed a decided gain in all departments.

Miss Mabel Wilson, who recently attended the State Sunday-school convention at Burlington as a delegate, made an address on the proceedings. She spoke in particular of the graded school system as it was spoken there and as a result a committee was appointed to investigate the matter thoroughly with a view to introducing it locally.

BASEBALL LEAGUE TALK

Proposition to Organize Inter-City Association.

RAMSEY INTERESTED

Report That President of Hudson River League May Finance Local Club.

H. D. Ramsey, president of the Hudson River Baseball League, is interested in the planning of a fast ball team in this city next season, to be one of the six clubs to comprise the proposed New Jersey State Baseball League. The other teams would include Dover, Elizabeth, Paterson, Stroudsburg and Chatham, if the league is formed. Applications for membership have also been received from Orange, Passaic and Perth Amboy. A meeting in the interest of the new league was held a few days ago at Newark and considerable enthusiasm shown in the project.

Mr. Ramsey has just returned from a successful trip with his All-American team in Cuba. He says that several teams in the Hudson River League were unsuccessful last season and he does not propose to continue in that league next year. He has his call on several of the strongest players in this part of the country and will be able to furnish them for both the Paterson and Plainfield team. It is proposed to have Mr. Ramsey finance the Plainfield team and George D. Heckert, formerly manager of the Penn Park of York, Pa., is talked of for the manager of the local aggregation.

As yet it is not known what will be done by the company which purchased the franchise of the Plainfield A. C. In conversation with Charles Woolston, one of the syndicate, he said that the plans for baseball would not be made known until the first of next year. When asked if the Hoboken team would likely go to Somerville for Saturday games, he said that the team was anxious to arrange to come here and that the syndicate men make such arrangements if it turns to. He denied that the Hobokens had closed a deal with Somerville, adding that Captain Driscoll informed him to the contrary last Saturday.

Mr. Woolston spoke as though a first-class team would be seen on Crescent Oval in the spring, one that would play gilt-edge ball and be able to meet the best aggregations in the semi-professional class. Early in the spring the work of enclosing the oval with a high board fence and improving the grounds will be started and it is believed that the season will be started during the last of April.

"Hosey" Retter's Popularity.

Howard E. Retter, the famous football player of the Colgate and Wesleyan team this fall, left today for Plainfield, N. J. Retter has been a unique figure at Wesleyan. He has coached the football men, given gridiron talks before the college Y. M. C. A. on Sunday mornings, and addressed Christian Endeavor societies Sunday evenings. He has led chapel, chummed with the fellows, bobsledded with the professors and walked barebacked about the streets of Middletown, clad in a long raincoat and with hands thrust deep into the pockets. Everybody has liked him and he has gone away holding the respect of every one that has met him.—Hartford, Conn., Courant.

Christmas Dinner for Poor Boys.

In accordance with the usual custom, the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. will give its annual Christmas dinner to the poor boys of the city on December 26. The social committee in charge of the affair is making preparations for seventy dinners, and it is expected that the dinner will surpass former events. It was impossible to give the usual Thanksgiving dinner on account of the Y. M. C. A. fair which occupied most of the time of the Women's Auxiliary.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Caroline Fritz, of Somerset street, to William T. Jeffery, Jr., of York, Pa., formerly of this city. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Wednesday, December 26.

There is a feeling of satisfaction with the service given at E. H. Maynard's barber shop on North avenue. Great care is taken in cutting hair, shaving and shampooing.

SUITORS ABIDE BY DICE'S DECREE

TWO ADMIRERS OF A WIDOW TRUST TO CHANCE TO WIN.

SHE COULD NOT DECIDE

After the Throw the Loser Wept at His Ill Luck, But Later Took Part in Anti-Nuptial Celebration.

St. Cloud, Minn.—To have the choice of her future husband depend upon the outcome of a game of dice was the fate of Mrs. Maggie Dressling, a well-to-do widow of this city. Mrs. Dressling has lived alone in her little home in the suburbs. Surrounding the house is a plat of ground upon which vegetables were raised. Mrs. Dressling has a neat little income from a farm which she owns.

She had a suitor in Thomas Kern, a veteran of the war, but he gave up trying to make a living a few weeks ago and went to the soldiers' home. Since then Mrs. Dressling has divided her attention between William Heimsrath, a widower, and William H. Scruby, a veterinary surgeon. So equally were her affections divided that the two men were in continual hot water. They had been good friends, but soon ceased to speak as they met.

They met in a downtown cafe and Martin Muchler, owner of the cafe and a friend of both men, said it was a shame that the two should be separated because of the widow.

"Is there no way it can be fixed up?" he asked.

The suitors were doubtful.

"Why not," said Muchler, seized with an idea, "why not shake dice for her?"

"All right," agreed the swains.

The dice box was produced and the men decided that they would throw five dice five times and count the spots. They threw, and Muchler, who was referee, kept tab. The veterinary threw 60 and Heimsrath 68.

Muchler announced the result and Heimsrath laid his head on the bar and sobbed.

"Wait a minute," cried Muchler, "I've made a mistake in the count. You've both thrown 60. It's a tie."

THREW DICE FOR THE WIDOW.

Heimsrath took a new lease of life and the veterinary surgeon, still game, declared he would throw again and throw they did. This time Scruby rolled 62 and his rival 57.

"She's yours," said Muchler.

"Have a drink," said the surgeon.

"I never want another drink of anything else on this earth," sobbed Heimsrath.

But he changed his mind later, and the coming nuptials were celebrated at a feast, paid for by the veterinary.

Girl Played the Limit.

Reno, Nev.—The rough and tumble life of prospectors, miners and gamblers of Goldfield, the bustling new mining city, was changed for a short time when Miss Nivens, a young woman from California, walked into one of the largest gaming halls and started to play the limit at the faro table.

Interest at once centered around the young woman. She played two hours, and at one time her winnings amounted to nearly $2,000. Then her luck changed and her last cent was lost. She parted with $500, all the money she had with her.

Dog Captures Hungry Eagle.

Paris.—A dog belonging to a farmer in the vicinity of Romans captured a big eagle recently, after a desperate struggle. The bird had picked out the dog for a meal while the animal was dozing in the sun. The dog, feeling the eagle's talons in his back, squirmed quickly round and bit the eagle's leg. The bird let go, but the dog flung on and completely subdued the eagle. When the owner of the dog arrived the bird was still alive, with its four-footed victor lying on top of him, keeping guard. The eagle measured five feet from tip to tip of its outstretched wings.

Mother Canes Son.

Mahoney City, Pa.—Chided severely by his mother for excessive drinking, Anthony Povilitis looped a rope about his neck and hanged himself to a door. Before kicking a supporting box from under his feet he called good-by to the family in the next room. As he dangled in the air his mother belabored him with a cane until he begged for mercy. He was finally cut down, as docile as a lamb.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

The sad intelligence was flashed by wireless telegraphy from an incoming ocean liner the other day that Jimmy Michael, the wonderful little Welsh bicyclist had passed away on board the ship, and the news was soon after confirmed on the arrival of the vessel at New York. Michael, familiarly known as the "Welsh Rarebit," was probably the greatest bicyclist the world has known. He remained champion at various distances for a greater length of time and won more races of note than any other wheelman. His small stature and boyish face helped to make his performances the more notable, and his reputation was worldwide. Michael was born in Aberaman, Wales, 27 years ago. He started riding in 1894 winning the championship in Cardiff. He discontinued his job as a butcher boy in order to take up cycling, and his wonderful speed at home gave him courage to visit England in 1895, where he captured first honors in every event. During 1896 the diminutive cyclist won the championship of France, and after defeating all the crack riders came to America in the fall and scored a notable victory over Starbuck. Later in the year Michael lowered all world's records from two to ten miles, and in the fall no rider has ever held as many records as the "Welsh Rarebit." At different times the figures from two to 100 miles, both against time and in competition, have been credited to the name of Michael. Behind human pace in 1897 Michael defeated Tom Linton, an old time rival, for the championship of the world. He also scored over McDuffie, Lenna, and Chase, who was considered the best middle distance rider in England. Then the largest crowd that ever attended a bicycle race in Madison Square garden Michael lowered the colors of Starbuck, and the little fellow has the honor of having defeated every rider in America who essays to follow the wayfarer of time. In 1898 Michael became infatuated with horse racing, and although he had accumulated a bank account of $30,000 he thought he would like to become a jockey. A prominent eastern trainer gave him opportunity to ride and he secured a license and actually rode in a few races at Morris park, but discovered this was not his calling. The end of 1899 found his bank account depleted, and in 1900 he again took to the cycle racing game. Interest in this sport had died out noticeably in America, but Michael continued to meet with success. He went abroad and there, at Berlin, met with the accident which eventually resulted in his death, although it did not prevent him continuing his occupation. His last appearance in this country was a year ago, when he was defeated at New York.

American colleges have reputations the world over for turning out bright scholars and great athletes, but seldom are the qualities combined as in the case of Ware's pet, Schutt. This young man is a Rhodes scholarship athlete who earned his way to the other side for the purpose of studying at Oxford. The other day he won four events at the Brasenose sports, the 100-yard run in 0:11 2-5, the quarter-mile in 0:43 3-5, the mile in 5:07, and the weight-throw with 27 feet 5 inches. Schutt was the greatest distance runner among the American colleges and captain of the Cornell track and cross-country teams, before he went to England. Schutt's athletic record dates back little more than two years. At that time he was a sophomore at Cornell, and had never seen a running shoe. One day Trainer Moakley spied him on the campus and immediately picked him as a runner. Schutt was urged to report, which he did, and the trainer fitted him out in running togs. The first day Trainer Moakley sent him around the quarter-mile track a number of times. His stride Schutt showed warranted the trainer's expectations. The second day he sent him out with Cornell's champion cross-country team, which that year defeated Harvard, Yale and Princeton. The course was cross-country five miles long, but to the surprise of Trainer Moakley Schutt was with the bunch when the team returned to the clubhouse. The third day Schutt made his reputation. He was again started with the cross-country champions. He knew the course, and long before Moakley began to look at his watch to get the time of his returning team, Schutt came in sight alone, running with perfect ease. "Why didn't you go 'round the course?" asked Moakley. "I did," answered the green runner. "Where is the team?" demanded the trainer. "Somewhere back there." And soon the leaders came in sight. The team had measured in their efforts to overtake the newcomer into their ranks, but none of them could do it. Schutt had lowered the record for the course and established himself leader of all Cornell runners. Two months later he won the intercollegiate two-mile, setting a new record for distance.

FIRST-CLASS BALL TEAM PROMISED BY WOOLSTON

AND GAMES WILL BE SCHEDULED WITH CRACK NINES ONLY.

Charles Woolston, representing the syndicate that purchased the Plainfield A. C. franchise, in the fall, states that a first-class baseball team will be seen on Crescent Oval next season, and that only the best teams will be brought here, including Trenton, Orange, Dover, Chatham and some of the college teams possibly for Wednesday games. The company has not been asleep as some persons believed and when the season opens every position will be filled with a strong player.

As announced early in the fall the oval will be enclosed with a high board fence, the number now being on the way here for that purpose. There will also be improvements in the extreme left field which was innundated several times by water, last season, and future trouble of this kind will be prevented.

At the proper time announcement will be made of the lineup and there are sure to be some surprises. Charles Woolston will probably be the manager of the team, controlling the players and arranging for dates. The faults of a year ago will be eliminated as far as possible, that is it will be one of the chief objects to play the same team throughout the entire season and do away with frequent changes, which proved so disastrous to the team last year. One of the best semi-professional twirlers will be engaged and a strong man will be at the receiving end.

LITERARY.

The contents page of the January Smart Set is the first indication of the excellence which is to mark the magazine for 1905. The Smart Set was long since conceded the title of "the magazine of cleverness," and its plans for the coming year already embrace a list of new contributors whose names stand for the very best in the fiction and verse of the day. With George Barr McCutcheon, Francos Aymar Mathews, William R. Lighton, Emery Pottle, Rupert Hughes, Edward Boltwood and Herbert D. Ward standing out from among twenty-seven other names, most of which are widely known, and especially familiar to Smart Set readers, the January number promises well for the coming year.

The January holiday number of The Metropolitan Magazine is especially strong in short fiction and contains, as well, a number of striking illustrated articles from the pens of well-known writers. One of these papers, entitled "An Artist in Bermuda," is by Charles Livingston Bull, and tells of wondrously beautiful denizens of the tropic waters which encircle that favored island. Mr. Bull has spent much time peering through the clear waters of Bermuda at the fauna and flora that inhabit their depths. His pictures, not only in words, but with colored drawings, the life of the Bermuda seas.

DR. SNODGRASS SCORES RAINES' LAW HOTELS

MOVEMENT AMONG MINISTERS TO HAVE STATUTE REVOKED.

As alleged iniquitious Raines hotel law, now in operation in New York city, is the object of a movement started by The New York Globe to secure the enactment of a new law which will remove the present evils. In support of this movement The Globe has secured the general support of clergymen both in New York and suburban towns. Among those who have given their opinion in the matter is Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, who says:

"Until a new excise law is passed at Albany, New York city cannot expect to throw off the curse of the Raines law hotel. I have watched the increasing boldness of these hotel proprietors with alarm. It is certainly high time to protect the homes of thousands of girls who will certainly be made the victims of the persuasion of evil men if present conditions continue."

Clergymen quite generally are enthusiastic over the prospects of a new law, the substitution of a measure which will curb the evils at present existing in the so-called Raines law hotels. All agree that something should be done immediately to save the young girls who are being constantly enticed from their homes by the habitues of these places, and the clergymen are of the opinion that the only way to remedy matters is to secure the passage of a new excise law which cannot be "abused." In view of this The Globe is seeking the opinions of ministers in and near New York in the hope that the agitation may results in the adoption of a new law.

MR. WESTCOTT'S POSITION.

Superintendent of Bottling Concern Not to Ask for License.

Ellsworth O. Westcott, superintendent of the Eastern Bottling Company on West Second street, denies that he intends making an application for a liquor license for a saloon on West Third street. He declares emphatically that he never had any idea of asking for such a license, and that he will remain in his present.

Mr. Westcott also states that neither the Eastern Bottling Company or the Ballentine Company are interested in any saloon in Plainfield and that there is no intention of identifying either in such business. He knows nothing of any effort to secure a license for a place on West Third street or anywhere else in the city.

Seeking Manufacturing Plant.

Mayor O. L. Jenkins has received an inquiry from H. F. Frevert, of 114-116 Liberty street, New York, regarding the possibility of securing a factory in Plainfield for the manufacture of machinery weighing about 1,000 pounds to be used in printing offices. Mr. Frevert makes the inquiry in behalf of a customer who wants to locate in Plainfield. The party would like to lease an equipped factory or one that can easily be equipped for the business he is in. Dr. Jenkins will make inquiries for Mr. Frevert and will endeavor to bring the new concern to this city.

MAY ASK FOR LICENSE

Local Bottling Company Said to Have Plan in View.

TURNER'S OLD PLACE

Superintendent Westcott Declared to be in Readiness to Make Application.

From present indications the question of granting a liquor license to John Goff for his place on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, will not be the only one in that line that the Common Council will have to contend with next year. Besides the possibility that Mr. Goff will make application for a license, it is learned on good authority that Ellsworth C. Westcott, superintendent of the Eastern Bottling Association, will make application for a saloon license for the place on West Third street, which was conducted recently by one of its representatives.

Last year Edward P. Turner, who was then superintendent of the Eastern Bottling Company, secured a license for this place, and it was afterward taken away from him because of several alleged violations, among which was cited the fact that another man was running the saloon for Mr. Turner and that the name of the man in whose name the license was issued did not appear over the door, also that there was some question as to the signature of one of the signers to the application. These things made quite a stir at the time and it was largely through the efforts of Councilman W. S. Tyler, chairman of the license committee, that the matter was taken up and discussed and the license finally denied.

Mr. Westcott succeeded Mr. Turner, and it is understood that he will at the proper time make application for a retail license. The fact that there is a question as to whether Mr. Goff can get a license, it is said, has given rise to the opinion that the Common Council may be led to compromise by giving Mr. Westcott one. It is also intimated that Mr. Westcott is more in favor with the powers that be than Mr. Goff and that influence will be thrown strongly in to behalf.

However, this may not assure Mr. Westcott of a license for the place, considering the make-up of the Common Council for 1905. There are certain members who are known to be opposed to Mr. Goff's place being licensed and there is every reason to believe that Councilman Tyler will strongly oppose the licensing of a place in West Third street, only a short distance away from Bernard Clark's saloon. He made a strong fight a year ago against another licensed saloon in that neighborhood and it is fair to presume that he will take the same stand this year and that he will have other members to agree with him.

MR. ACKERMAN HONORED BY CEMENT COMBINATION

PLAINFIELDER TREASURER OF AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION.

Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street, president of the Lawrence Cement Co., was elected treasurer of the organization at the second annual convention of the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers held yesterday at the Hotel Astor, New York. This association has fifty members, representing an aggregate capital of $100,000,000, invested in the cement industry, and controls the production of more than ninety per cent. of the total output of the United States.

The association agreed upon an advance in prices to take effect next spring. The consensus of opinion was that the price should not be less than $1 per barrel at the mill at the opening of the season, and that prices should be further altered from time to time with the advance of the season.

A committee was deputed to petition Congress to make reciprocity treaties which would aid in the development of the export end of this industry. A number of technical matters were also discussed, and a committee reported that uniform specifications for testing cement had been adopted by practically all of the engineering societies of the country.

YOUNG LAWYER MARRIES

Miss Firstbrook Becomes Wife of W. L. Hetfield, Jr.

QUIET CEREMONY

Performed by Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard at Home of Bride's Mother on Grant Avenue.

In the presence of a small gathering of relatives and intimate friends, Miss Mabel Elizabeth Firstbrook, daughter of Mrs. Mary C. Firstbrook, of Grant avenue, was Thursday made the wife of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. The ceremony was performed at 5:30 in the afternoon at the home of the bride's mother on Grant avenue by Rev. Lawrence Riggs Howard, pastor of Hope chapel. The only attendant was

Mrs. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. (Nee Firstbrook.)

Miss Marie Davier, who acted as maid of honor. Unty Judge William N. Runyon played the wedding march.

The parlor and dining room were tastefully decorated, palms, plants and Christmas greens being used for the purpose. Evergreen roping was festooned about the chandeliers and the hallway was a bower of holly and palms. The young people pledged their vows while standing in a corner of the parlor beneath a floral festoon. Miss Firstbrook's gown was of brown panne velvet while Miss Davier wore green liberty silk.

Following the ceremony a reception was held during which Mr. and Mrs. Hetfield were the recipients of numerous congratulations. A wedding supper was served and early in the evening the bride and groom departed for a wedding trip through the New England States. It will last two weeks and at its conclusion they will make their home at 809 Grant avenue.

Among the numerous gifts bestowed was a beautiful china closet, the present of four of the groom's nearest friends, Philip Jahn, William H. Runyon, Thomas F. Mann and William Feiring. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond and pearl ring and the bride's to her attendant, a topaz ring.

The groom is the junior member of the law firm of Hetfield & Hetfield and is one of the best known and most popular of the city's young legal lights. He is connected with numerous clubs and fraternal organizations, among the latter being Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., Plainfield Lodge, No. 165, B. P. O. E., Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, Camp Plainfield, Woodmen of the World, and Benevolent Council, No. 356, Jr. O. U. A. M. He was admitted to the bar soon after becoming of age and was taken into partnership by his father, former Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. His bride has always been a resident of Plainfield and enjoys a wide acquaintanceship. She is a member and one of the most active workers in Hope Memorial church and its Sunday-school.

CHRISTMAS DINNER FOR POOR BOYS AT Y. M. C. A.

UNDER DIRECTION OF BOYS' DEPARTMENT SEVENTY LADS WILL BE FED.

Plans are progressing favorably for the dinner to the poor boys of the city, which will be given by the Y. M. C. A. boys' department on Christmas night at the association rooms. The provisions will be made to entertain seventy of the urchins, and contrary to the usual custom, the affair will be conducted this year entirely independent of the Women's Auxiliary, the boys themselves having sole management.

Directly in charge of the affair is the boys' work committee of the association which consists of O. S. Rogers, Dr. Norman Prebasco, Dr. Charles Davis and Phillip Suffern. Working in co-operation with this committee will be a committee composed of the active workers of the boys' department, which will assist in preparing and serving the repast. Those who will compose this committee are Walter Caldwell, president of the department, Harold Robins, Freed Smith, Russell Morris, Ray Woodhull and Norman Loughlin.

The dinner will be served at 6 o'clock on Monday, December 26. The committees will follow the usual custom in sending out invitations for the Christmas dinner. They will apply to the Organized Aid Society for the names of those boys which they have been helping during the winter, and which are most in need, and to these postal cards will be sent. The cards must be presented at the door.

Publishing Concern Begins Suits.

The Publishing Company of New York has commenced action in Justice Mattison's court through Francis J. Blass against a large number of borough people who recently procured books from it. The concern published a history of Somerset County and took contracts for the books while gathering data.

Want Railroad V. M. C. A.

Employes of the New Jersey Central in this section have plans underway for the establishment of a railroad Y. M. C. A. at either Jersey City or Somerville. Frank Wrabnegg, of Dunellen, engineer of a local passenger train, has been appointed a member of the committee to conduct the preliminary work.

Announce Engagement.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Margaret Shepherd, of Watchung avenue, to Percy Giddes, of Regent street.

MISS EDITH DOUGLAS, RALPH BULLMAN'S BRIDE

DR. SCHENCK PERFORMS CEREMONY AT HOME OF MR AND MRS. DOUGLAS.

Miss Edith Louise Douglas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Douglas, of 809 West Front street, and Ralph Bullman, son of Mrs. Caroline Bullman, of 19 Craig place, were married Thursday at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of fifty relatives and friends from Elizabeth, Newark, Rahway, Fanwood and Plainfield. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, performed the ceremony. An uncle of the bride played the wedding march.

The home was decorated with palms, holly, potted plants and palms, the green and flowers being used in the parlor, dining room and reception hall. In the parlor there was a bower of palms and beneath it the ceremony was performed. Neither the bride or groom was attended. The bride wore a gown of creme white, trimmed with lace and satin ribbons and carried a bouquet of bride roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and supper was served. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Bullman went to their new home, No. 25 Grandview avenue. The guests planned to give them a sandaff, but the couple escaped the pranks in clever fashion.

Mr. Bullman is a carpenter and contractor. He and his wife are well known. They are both active members of the Brethren, a religious society which meets in East Front street.

The bride was generously remembered with useful and pretty gifts from relatives and friends.

Maid-of-Honor at a Wedding.

Miss Kittie Hodine, of this borough, was maid-of-honor at the wedding of her cousin, Miss Mabel Rohde, of Greenville, and Charles Allaire, of Bayonne, which was celebrated Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Linden Avenue M. E. church, Greenville, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, officiating. There were a number of relatives from North Plainfield present at the wedding. The bride is quite well-known here, where she has frequently visited.

A Musical Feast Coming.

The Wesleyan University Glee and Mandolin Clubs will give an entertainment in the First M. E church on January 9. New Year's night. This organization is one of the best of its kind in the East and has made a favorable impression in Plainfield through previous appearances.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 26.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The light of the world.—Isa. ix, 2-7.

Sir Edwin Arnold in his "Light of Asia" presents Buddhism as the light of the orient, but Christ, the author and finisher of the Christian faith, is proclaimed in the Scriptures to be the light of the world. Even in the Old Testament Scriptures, when Christ is especially spoken of as the Messiah who was to come to Israel, the chosen people of God, there are many indications that, while He was to come first of all to His own people, yet His mission was not to be limited by the boundaries of one race, but was through them to extend to every nation, people, kindred and tongue upon the face of the earth. Thus Isaiah testifies when he declares that "the people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." The greatest of the Hebrew prophets thus recognizes the fact that, while the child was to be born unto Israel, yet His light was to shine throughout the world.

It is in the New Testament, however, that the doctrine of Christ as the light of the world is fully developed and the work of spreading the light worldwide is begun. Christ calls and sent His disciples first to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel," and yet He positively declared, "I am the light of the world," and again in the parable of the sower, "The field is the world." And in a most mysterious way God opened up the way for the Messiah of Israel to become the light of the world. Israel rejected the Messiah, and then He was presented to the world! A mysterious way, and yet God's way, and one that will work together with the end attained for good. Israel will return, and then not only she, but the rest of the world, will be saved with her, and with her enlarged vision, through Christ, bigotry and prejudice will have passed away, and she will rejoice with heaven over the lost gentiles even that were found and saved through Israel's Messiah.

The light of the world has come, but the knowledge of the light has not yet been spread throughout the world. This has been the work of Christ's church from the beginning. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," was the command of Christ. His church is embodied in the apostles and early disciples. They responded with zeal and energy and became light bearers to the world. They lifted up Christ and His cross, and before the first Christian century had passed away the Roman world had heard of Christ, had seen the light, and thousands of souls had been saved in Him. But there are still those who sit in moral and spiritual darkness, and who are dead in trespasses and in sins, and who therefore need Christ, the light. If we have seen the light, are we doing our part in spreading it abroad? If at this Christmas season we appreciate the blessings that we enjoy, let us consecrate ourselves to more determined efforts to set Christ, the light of the world, before all the peoples of the world.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xxvii, 1; xxxvi, 9; xcvii, 11, 12; cxix, 105; Isa. ix, 1; Matt. v, 14-16; John i, 1-12; viii, 12; ix, 5; xii, 35, 36.

A Sunshine Message.

The following poem was given to Dr. Clark by the sunshine committee of the Norwood Congregational church, Liverpool, as he entered the pulpit of this church on a recent Sunday evening. It is the custom of this committee to graciously to greet visiting ministers with a sunshine message, a custom that might well be adopted everywhere:

Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.—Matt. xxv, 40.

It is a fair tradition, one of old,
That at the gate of heaven called Beautiful
The souls of those to whom we ministered
On earth shall greet us as we enter in
With welcome, reported at those lowly deeds
Of Christian charity wherewith frail man
Proffers his humble loan unto his Lord.
May we not so believe, since He hath said,
That inasmuch as it was done to one
Of those His little ones 'twas done to
Oh, think, if this be true, how many eyes
Whose weeping thou hast stilled shall glisten there!
How many hearts whose burden thou
And heavy feet whose steps were turned by thee
Back to their homes, elastic through the joy
Of new found hope and sympathy and love,
Shall welcome thee within the gates of pearl
The golden city of Jerusalem!

With the earnest prayers of the sunshine committee.

Would Wear Her Pin at Any Cost.

Some time ago the president of the Christian Endeavor society in Holguin, Cuba, sailed for New York to join her husband. A young man on the boat told her that she had better take off her Christian Endeavor pin or some one might burn the boat because there was a Protestant on board. She replied, "That would be the same as denying my Saviour." And she would not remove it, though, for all she knew, the boat might be burned.—Clotilde Bretlow in Christian Endeavor World.

The Ingathering Season.

The season for ingathering into our societies and churches is now at hand. Let every one do what he can to lead at least one soul to Christ and into the church and society before Jan. 1, 1905. Personal effort and prayer will do it. Can the Master count on you?—Rev. J. E. Foot in Ohio Endeavorer.

AGED BELL FOUNDRY

LONDON HAS ONE THAT IS SEVERAL CENTURIES OLD.

Founded in 1570 It Is Still Turning Out Work for Cathedrals and Churches of the British Empire.

London.—This city has a bell foundry in Whitechapel road, founded in 1570 where the big bells are still made. A peal of eight bells for the Rochester cathedral was turned out a few days ago. Two are entirely new, the treble and second bell. Four, which were cast originally in 1635, 1663, 1695, and the fourth having no date, have been made over. Two of the old bells, cast in 1711 and 1834, have been retained. The industry calls for superior workmanship. To be a successful bell founder one requires not only to be a good musician and mechanician, but he must also be a practical metallurgist and possess some of the qualifications of an architect. To be able to cast and tune a bell in consonance with others of the peal one must have a precise musical ear, and as bell metal is a mixture of copper and tin (the latter being somewhat less than a fourth of the whole weight), it would be ruinous if the bellfounder were not an expert.

But the onerous duties of the bellfounder do not end there. He has to make the bell wheels and fittings, and in order to appreciate the strength of the belfry in which the bells are to be hung, he must have a good knowledge of architecture. And still further to insure success he must be a bell-ringer. All these attributes are to be found at the foundry whence the great bell of Westminster, the largest ever cast in London; the great bell of Montreal cathedral, the largest ever shipped; "Great Peter" of York Minster; "Great Tom" of Lincoln cathedral; the clock bells of St Paul's (the hour bell ringing since 1709); "Bow Bells" of Cheapside, and a host of others, had their origin.

The industry is a most interesting one in all its branches. To begin with the casting of large bells, the shape of the bell is a vital factor. It is its soul. Although the shape has not changed perceptibly for hundreds of years, yet to the eye of the expert the advance of science can be seen. The first difficulty is to get the shape true. That done, the tone will be true.

To bring this about an iron mold is made and lined with loam, giving the exact shape of the outside of the bell required. It is mathematically correct, and inside this mold or frame is built a core of brickwork with a lining of loam on the top. The core and lining is so manipulated that space is left for the exact thickness of the bell. The next step is to place the mold in a loam pit. The loam, which is in the vicinity of the furnace in which the metal is mixed and melted, must be absolutely dry. Wet or damp, an explosion will occur. The mold is then buried with the exception of the orifice to which the metal is drawn from the furnace. When the mold is full, a pool of molten metal is left on the top of the pit, so as to obviate the mischance of making an unsound bell. A bell in cooling contracts and the greater thickness of the base draws the metal away from the upper part; hence the necessity for the pool of metal.

When the metal is cooled, the mold is taken from the pit and the extraneous parts cut off from the head. If necessary, it is then tuned. In the case of the Rochester peal, the bells were cast to act in unison with the old or tenor bell, which has been doing duty for some 90 years. If the new bell happens to be too sharp, it is placed on the tuning machine, head downward. This machine works in a circle and cuts metal from the inside of the bell. This process is continued until the correct note has been obtained. A bell can be sharpened only by cutting it down, but this is rarely resorted to.

Next comes the fitting of the tongue or clapper. This is a delicate operation. The clapper is first forged, then the clapper and its stem are welded together, and the lot fitted in with mathematical precision. In the forge the steel frames are also made.

The bell is then fitted with a wheel and head stock. The wheels are made in two halves of English oak, and, as in other parts of the foundry, everything is English, a circumstance all the more remarkable when scarcely an Englishman is to be found in the surrounding district.

Church of Solid Coral.

A church of solid coral is a curiosity of the isle of Mahe. This island, rising 3,000 feet, is the highest of the Seychelles group in the Indian ocean, and its buildings are all from square blocks hewn from massive coral and glistening like white marble.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Dec. 25: "An Offering to Christ"—Mark xiv, 3-9.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

The lesson of the week does not present the story of the birth of Jesus, as is usually done at this season, but calls attention to the gift which a woman made to Him a few days previous to His death. This lesson is specially appropriate at this time, when all are making presents to friends. It calls to mind the significance of the Christmas festival and emphasizes the best manner in which it may be observed.

There is danger that in the excitement and pleasure of gift making and receiving the greatest and best possible gift be neglected if not entirely forgotten. The coming of Jesus Christ to the earth is the one event in human history which has greater value to the race than any other event which ever occurred. He was the gift of God to mankind. All human life acquires deeper meaning and holds higher possibilities, because He came to earth and lived the life of a man under the conditions in which we are placed. No possession of health, wealth, genius or anything which is of value to us in this world is comparable in worth to us with the personal interest and fellowship of Jesus Christ. The gift of Himself to be with us forever, bearing our nature and leading us into all the fullness possible to human beings, is what makes Christmas the greatest festival of all the ages and the one in whose celebration every person has equal interest.

If He has so loved us as to give Himself for us and to us, every sentiment of gratitude prompts us to wish to express our thanks to God for His unspeakable gift. How shall we do this in the most appropriate manner and so as to best please Him is a question which may well have very careful consideration.

Mark gives a vivid picture of a woman who expressed her gratitude in a manner which could not be misunderstood. She had understood the words of Jesus as no other of His friends seem to have done. She believed that He was soon to die. He had said so plainly, but no other person seems to have taken His statement as she did. The shadow of the coming sorrow filled her with a passion of grief and loving desire to show her regard to Him. She does not appear to have much considered what others thought. He was to leave them soon. She knew the meaning of death, for but a little while before her own brother Lazarus had been sick and died. He was now living and at the table with Jesus, who had raised him from death. And this Jesus who could raise the dead was Himself to die! She had sat at His feet and talked with Him of these mysteries when others had been too busy with getting things to eat that they had been impatient with her for not helping them. Her heart was full. She poured out all her soul as she emptied the cruse of costly ointment on His head. She understood the whole. It was the prodigality of love, the passionate abandon of great affection. He who can call such use a waste has not only lost all sense of values, but under cloak of love is the poor creature of his own thievish preference of himself above his regard for his Lord.

John says that the odor of the ointment filled all the house. Her act filled Judas and others with indignation that they could not so much. He also must have been filled with gladness that the Master commended her act and recognized the value of the heart gift.

Let us not stint our gifts to Him. He gave all He had to us. Let us give all heart love and every power of being to Him. Pour out the ointment of all precious things until the world is filled with the perfume of the offering and men praise Him for His grace.

The Gate of Prayer.

In the midst of the splendors of royalty, when men of the highest rank are admitted to the king's presence only at the door, the children of the king's household always have free access. No court rules shut them away or prescribe any ceremonious manner in which they may approach the throne. The king is their father. To be a child of God is to have assurance of access to Him at all times. This golden gate of prayer, "Our Father," opens into the innermost sanctuary, into the very secret place of the Most High, and we may enter day nor night to any child of God.—J. R. Miller in "The Golden Gate of Prayer."

Where to Find Joy.

People should look for joy in the word and not in the world. They should look for the joy which the Scriptures furnish and then go to work in the vineyard. Anything that doesn't send me out to some one else, a joy that doesn't impel me to go and help the poor drunkard, a joy that doesn't prompt me to visit the widow and the fatherless, a joy that doesn't cause me to go into the mission Sunday school or other Christian work, is not worth having and is not from above. A joy that does not constrain me to go and work for the Master is purely sentiment and not real joy.—D. L. Moody.

God's Christmas Gift.

Who can give like God? His Christmas gift to the world was His only Son.—United Presbyterian.

Something to Learn.

Just to be true;
Just to be glad the whole day through!
Just to be merciful, just to be mild;
Just to be trustful as a child;
Just to be gentle and kind and sweet;
Just to be helpful with willing feet;
Just to be cheery when things go wrong;
Just to drive sadness away with song.
Whether the heart be sad or bright,
Just to let love be our daily law.
Just to do God's will for you and for me,
Just to be true.

PYTHIAN DIST. MEETING

David Bowden is Chosen District Deputy

GRAND OFFICERS THERE

Excellent Reports of Perseverance and Unity Lodges Presented at the Session.

More than 150 members of the order of the Knights of Pythias, representing Perseverance and Unity lodges, gathered in the latter's castle hall last Thursday for the annual district meeting and visitation of Grand Lodge officers. The affair was presided over by Chancellor Commander Harry Werner, of Unity lodge, and the proceedings evidenced the strength and growth of Pythianism in Plainfield. Reports from both lodges were presented and showed that the members have been unusually active.

Perseverance's was read by Charles McGinley, keeper of records and seal, and gave its membership as 306, one of the largest of any fraternal organizations in the city. Its receipts for the past twelve months have been nearly $3,000 and it has expended over $1,200 in sick and death benefits. Frank Putnam read the report for Unity lodge, stating that its membership is ninety-five and that it has enjoyed a prosperous year in every way. Following their acceptance David Bowden, of Perseverance lodge, was appointed district deputy to succeed the president incumbent, Jere Van-Winkle, Jr., who is to retire at the beginning of the year.

Among the Grand Lodge officers who were present and who afterward made addresses were Past Grand Chancellor F. Frank Stanley, of Jersey City, who has been nominated as supreme representative; Grand Vice Chancellor Cowgill, of Mount Holly; Grand Keeper of Records and Seal Elmer E. Margerum, of Trenton; Grand Prelate Wilson, of Lambertville; Grand Inner Guard Abram Kleners, of Newark, and Grand Outer Guard John I. Main, of Paterson. Chancellor Commander Philip Jahn and Past Chancellor William N. Runyon, of Perseverance, and Chancellor Commander Harry Werner, of Unity, also spoke briefly.

At the close of the business session, refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed.

PINK TEA DRAWS 300 LOCAL SOCIETY PEOPLE

SOCIAL FUNCTION AT HOME OF MRS. ALFRED T. SLAUSON.

One of the most charming social affairs of last week took place Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alfred T. Slauson, of East Ninth street, in the form of a pink tea. It lasted from 4 until 7 o'clock and was attended by fully 300 members of city and borough social circles.

While pink was used in the decorations almost entirely, it was combined at times with green, producing a decidedly striking effect. Bride roses, carnations and other cut flowers were seen in endless profusion in the parlor and dining rooms, while the chandeliers were almost hidden by smilax. In the library the red and green of holly was quite prominent. A feature of the display in the dining room were several large bouquets of violets and roses, the gift of Marion S. Ackerman.

Mrs. Slauson was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Percy Stewart, Mrs. John Deni Miller, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. William A. Garrigues and Mrs. C. E. Perkins, the last named of Cornwall, N. Y. In the library, receiving were Mrs. William L. Patton and Mrs. Thomas G. Stanton, of Boston. Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde, Mrs. Augustus VanDerveer, Mrs. Daniel T. Otnes and Miss Florence Marsh presided in the dining room while the young women assisting were the Misses Elsie Burke, Elsie Harman, Mary Anderson Reinhart, Helen Phillips, Mary Goddard, Wilhelmina Patton, Marion Bowen, Martha Robert and Josephine Lapsley.

Local Talent to Present Opera.

William Holmes, of this city, who has been successful in giving the comic operas, "Patience" and "The Pirates of Penzance," has decided to give the "Mikado," probably at the Casino, on April 27. Rehearsals will begin on January 11. The opera will be given entirely by local talent.

"Chic" Fraser Traded Off.

"Chic" Fraser, of the Philadelphia National League team, who pitched one game for the Plainfield A. C., last season, has been traded with another Quaker City player to Boston, for Pittsinger.

If you really want the best grade of coal for furnace or range leave your order with V. W. Nash, of Park avenue, and he will sell you that kind.

P. O. BILL DRAGS ALONG

Congress' Policy of Economy May Stave Off Action.

SENATOR KEAN AT WORK

He Will Use Every Endeavor to Secure Appropriation for Federal Building Here.

Senator Kean introduced a bill making an appropriation of $100,000 for a postoffice at Plainfield, in the U. S. Senate last spring, but the bill may suffer the fate of a lot of other public buildings bills if the economy programme is adhered to this year. This is according to a dispatch from Washington. However, the introduction of the bill is a start and ultimately Plainfield may get a postoffice building. It often takes several Congresses to get a bill of this sort through.

Senator Kean has informed some of his close personal friends in this city that he will use every endeavor to secure the appropriation for the proposed Federal building here during the present session of Congress. He believes that the need for a suitable postoffice building is apparent and will try to convince his colleagues that the bill be introduced during the last session of Congress requires attention.

Representative Fowler has introduced bills to increase the pensions of William Shannon and David A. Maple.

Nelson R. Peterson has been appointed a rural carrier at Plainfield, with Andrew N. Olsen as substitute on route No. 3.

JAMES A. SMITH'S WIFE DIED FRIDAY MORNING

MRS. AUGUSTA W. SMITH PASSED AWAY AT MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Augusta W. Smith, wife of James A. Smith, of 315 Central avenue, died at Muhlenberg Hospital at 7 Friday morning from a complication of diseases following an operation performed over a week ago. The operation was considered successful, but the complications which followed made recovery impossible. Mrs. Smith was taken to the hospital about ten days ago for treatment and the operation.

Mrs. Smith was the daughter of Aaron Berkaw, who live on East Third street for many years. She was a sister to Miss Mary Berkaw, who lived with her and John V. Berkaw, of North Plainfield, and they are the only two members of the Berkaw family now living. She was married about twenty years ago to Mr. Smith and continued to live here afterward. She was a member of the First Presbyterian church, and a regular attendant. Her rare womanly qualities were greatly admired.

The funeral services were held from the late home Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock and interment was in the family plot at Mound Brook on Monday.

TEACHERS' ANNUITY FUND IS ALL RIGHT

MISS HUMPSTON GETS A SERIOUS CHARGE DENIED.

In a letter received by Miss Millicent Humpston, principal of the Washington School, Miss Elizabeth A. Allen, of Hoboken, secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Teachers' Retirement Fund of the State of New Jersey, makes emphatic denial of the report that the fund is unable to pay twenty-one applicants their annuities. The story was first sent broadcast after the meeting of the executive committee of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association at Trenton, where the statement was said to have been made.

Miss Allen declares there is not a bit of foundation for the story and assures Miss Humpston that the teachers need not be alarmed. She declares that the retirement fund was not mentioned at the Teachers' Association meeting and also that it is not true that twenty-one applicants cannot be paid. There are but thirteen on the list of those only six are eligible and can be met easily as the fund has a large surplus.

Miss Allen also adds that apparently there are a few men in the State who are determined to kill the fund and periodically resort to anonymous attacks.

New Italian Interpreter in Court.

George W. Angen has been appointed Italian interpreter for the Union County Court at Elizabeth by Judge Vail, at a salary of $100 a year. The regular court interpreter, Jacob Gordon, can speak German, Russian, Polish and Hungarian, but not Italian. Mr. Angen is an Elizabeth newsdealer.

LOCAL ELKS ARE FLEECED

Accept Worthless Checks From a "Brother."

SAME OLD GAME

George O. Stevens, A. D. Findlay and Thomas Timbo Victims of a Stranger.

Following out almost the same plan as that pursued by James McCabe, alias "O'Brien," who was caught trying to fleece local members of the Knights of Columbus, a smooth talking young man has left town suddenly after separating several prominent Elks from some of their money. By means of checks and a glib tongue which never lost an opportunity to tell how he was one of the foremost members of an Ohio lodge of Elks, he succeeded in getting $50, most of it from George O. Stevens, Thomas Timbo and A. D. Findlay. The matter was reported to the police.

The swindler first made his appearance in town about two weeks ago and visited Timbo's place frequently for meals. Learning that the proprietor was an Elk, he exhibited a travelling card from a lodge of the order in Ohio. He posed as a traveling man.

By degrees he ingratiated himself with other members of Plainfield lodge and then the old familiar check game was worked. There were several of them and they were on a reluctant bank. The largest was for $25 and the others were for various small amounts, so that the losses were distributed.

Swindler McCabe, who was arrested in Plainfield last month, had a plan somewhat similar, only he posed as a Knight of Columbus

SAD HOMECOMING AWAITS FATHER OF DARLING BOY

NOT YET AWARE OF HALLOWE'EN FATALITY.

It will not be a merry Christmas this year for Henry P. Darling, of Westfield, who is now on a steamship returning from South Africa that is expected to arrive at New York on Friday of next week. He is the father of fifteen-year-old Jack Darling, who was shot and instantly killed by Harold M. Wilcox, a wealthy manufacturer, on October 31 last while participating in a Hallowe'en prank on the latter's lawn. Mr. Darling is unaware of his son's fate, it having been learned that the letters sent to him failed to reach him.

The father of the dead boy is in the employ of a New York firm of cotton brokers, and sailed for South Africa several weeks before his son was killed. He made preparations to be at home in time for the holidays, expecting to enjoy Christmas with his wife and boy. Mrs. Darling has arranged to have the news broken to her husband by a friend of the family. The father took great pride in his son, and was anticipating a bright future for him. The boy with several companions was playing on the Wilcox lawn when Wilcox fired a shot at the group. Darling fell dead with a bullet in his neck. Wilcox is under bail on a charge of manslaughter.

Learning New Route.

Nelson Peterson, of Watchung avenue, who has been appointed carrier for the new suburban mail route No. 2, commenced Monday to learn the district he is to cover. The regular delivery will commence January 16. Peterson has selected Kenneth Stuart, of West Front street, as his substitute.

Captured Two Foxes.

Two full grown foxes which have been bothering the residents of Watchung, were captured at different times Saturday by Robert Rogers and Ernest Bicknell. There are several others prowling about and fox hunting parties are every day occurrences in the valley.

In Honor of His Natal Day.

Gerardus Green, of West Fourth street, acted as host for twenty-four of his young friends Saturday afternoon in honor of his birthday. The children played appropriate games and concluded their enjoyment by taking part in a supper.

Christmas Observances.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the Christmas service at the Park Avenue Baptist church on Sunday, Tuesday evening, December 27, a cantata will be given by the Sunday-school.

Burial of Mrs. Griffin.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Sibley Griffin were held Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from her late home on Watchung avenue, there being a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, pastor of Grace church, conducted the services. There were many floral tributes and interment was in Hillside cemetery.

CRESCENT CO., U.R., K. OF P., TO GO TO PORT CHESTER

LOCAL KNIGHTS TO INSTALL NEW COMPANY ON JANUARY 7.

At a special meeting of the officers Saturday, Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R., K., of P., formally accepted an invitation from Port Chester Lodge, No. 33, of Port Chester, N. Y., to install a new uniformed rank in that city on Saturday evening, January 7. The Plainfield organization will have entire charge of the initiatory work and rehearsals are to commence at once in order to be thoroughly proficient in every part.

The event will be a noteworthy one in the history of Port Chester Lodge, which has visited this city on numerous occasions, and it has invited uniformed companies from all along the Hudson river to be in attendance. A parade will take place in the early part of the evening and a banquet will follow the installation.

David Bowden, Councilman J. Stephen Higham and John P. Hall comprise the committee to complete arrangements on the local end and they have planned to have every Crescent Company member in attendance.

W. F. ARNOLD'S SISTER DIED SUDDENLY TUESDAY

MISS LYDIA J. ARNOLD SUCCUMBS AT SISTER'S HOME.

Miss Lydia J. Arnold, aged fifty years, sister of City Treasurer William F. Arnold and Borough Councilman James K. Arnold, died suddenly at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jacob Varian, in East Ninth street, Tuesday morning. Bronchitis was the principal cause of her death.

Miss Arnold lived here for many years at the Arnold homestead, where the Casino now stands. She went to York to live with relatives and then lived with Mrs. Varian about seven years. She leaves two sisters and six brothers. Miss Arnold was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The funeral services will be held from the home of Mrs. Varian Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Galvin Family Home.

The Galvin family, of this city, which has been on the road with "A bell boy" company, closed in Concord, Mass., Saturday night, and returned home until after the holidays. The production has been meeting with much success and John Galvin, the star, has made one of the biggest hits in his career.

MISS CARRIE BETTMAN, FANWOOD'S POSTMISTRESS

YOUNG WOMAN TAKES PLACE OF H. O. ROBINSON WHO DECLINED TO SERVE.

Miss Carrie Bettman, who, for a number of years has been in charge of the postoffice at Fanwood Borough, although his postmaster was John F. Stevens, has just been appointed postmistress by President Roosevelt and has qualified for the position.

Mr. Stevens removed to this city several months ago and it was necessary to appoint some one in his place. Much to his surprise Harry O. Robinson was appointed. He had not sought the honor and found it impossible to accept. As soon as he failed to qualify, the friends of Miss Bettman interested themselves in her behalf by presenting a petition to Congressman Fowler. Two or three days ago she received the appointment and yesterday the bonds were approved so that Miss Bettman is now the regular representative of the postal department at Fanwood Borough.

Campaign Expenses $2,521.

For the purpose of disposing of bills and the final business of the campaign, the Republican City Executive Committee met Saturday evening. The expenses amounted to $2,521. This was a decidedly decrease in expenses over the Presidential campaign of 1896 when the cost was nearly $4,500.

A TRYING ORDEAL.

Nan Patterson Under District Attorney's Crossfire.

"FEARED WIFE WOULD KILL BOTH"

"Caesar Gave Me as Much as $40,000 to $50,000," Testified the Prisoner—Her Main Story Was Unshaken.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Under a relentless fire of cross examination by Assistant District Attorney Rand, Nan Patterson, who is on trial for the murder of Caesar Young, the bookmaker, spent a harrowing two hours on the witness stand at the early session of the trial. Many times she hesitated, faltered and contradicted herself in some details as the prosecutor took her over the ground she had traversed hitherto, save questioning of her counsel, Abraham Levy. Again she told the story of how Young died, re-enacting, with a subpoena server taking the part of the bookmaker who was shot, the happenings in the hansom cab at the time of the shooting. She told of Young catching hold of her and how she wrenched herself clear of him twice. Then came the shot. She had seen no revolver. Young's left hand, she admitted, was underneath him at the time.

One piece of testimony that stirred the courtroom was the declaration of the witness that Young had told her that he feared his wife would kill him or both of them.

Then she admitted that in her opinion Young had no such fear.

In some of her testimony she contradicted details of her former story and excused herself by saying that she was very nervous then. Throughout her examination her answers were given in a careless, listless way, and her voice was scarcely audible ten yards away from where she sat. When asked if she was a truthful and honest woman she replied that she was "with one exception." The prosecutor took her back to her first meeting with Young, whom she said she met on a train, and she told of various large sums of money that he had given her. She could not estimate the total amount within $15,000.

Questioned by Mr. Rand, she said:

"Caesar gave me $2,800 in California. The next highest sum he gave me at one time was $2,500. Sometimes he gave me $1,500 and $1,800 at a time. I do not know if he gave me altogether as much as $40,000 or $50,000.

"I was not sitting facing Caesar in the cab when the shot was fired. I did not see the pistol. When I first heard the report I thought it might have been in the street. When the shot was fired I do not know where his hands were.

"I never knew my sister, Mrs. Smith, wrote a letter to Caesar telling him about an operation I was said to have undergone. I went through no operation. I never talked to Caesar about such a thing.

"When I got into the cab with Caesar I did not know where he was taking me. I never gave it to Pittsburg, or if I did I supposed we would leave me somewhere near the steamship pier."

Although the defendant contradicted herself in some details, it was the opinion of those in the courtroom that in the main facts her story remained unshaken. Her lawyers declared that she had made out a good case for herself.

With the conclusion of her testimony and the calling of a witness to set the time at which Nan Patterson returned from the race track on the afternoon before the shooting, the defense rested.

Mr. Rand called Mrs. Young, the widow, among his witnesses, in rebuttal. She contradicted Nan Patterson's story about the hat that Young wore on the early morning of the day he was shot, and gave rebuttal testimony the prosecution closed.

When both sides had rested Justice Davis asked Mr. Levy if he was desirous of beginning his address. The lawyer replied that he was not physically able to begin. In that case, the court said, he would order an adjournment until this morning. Justice Davis added that he wanted to have the case go to the jury today.

Ford Elected Mayor.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Dec. 21.—The municipal election has resulted in the defeat of Mayor Frank D. Stafford, the Republican candidate, for a fourth term, Marshall R. Ford, the Democratic candidate, being elected by a margin of only thirty votes. The Republicans, however, elected five of the seven candidates for the common council. The city voted for license by a majority of 355. The Lose Joint canvass act was repealed by an overwhelming vote. The city adopted the firemen's pension act.

Big Storm on Portuguese Coast.

LISBON, Dec. 21.—A disastrous storm, which suddenly burst on the northern coast of Portugal, has caused a great loss of life. Eighteen fishermen were drowned at Figueira da Foz, and 100 others have been rendered destitute. Off Aveiro, lying at the mouth of the Mondego river was capsized, and fourteen persons were drowned. In the Leixoes basin, near Oporto, five boats were sunk and five persons drowned.

Huge Wave Killed Mate.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Dec. 21.—The Danish vessel Greda has arrived here, her captain injured and her mate dead as the result of her experiences in the fierce tornado that is now sweeping the coast. A heavy sea struck the ship, throwing the mate through the cabin door and breaking his neck and legs. The wheel was broken and the Greda's deck gear and sails were carried away.

PRISONERS OF WAR

Japs Take British Ships With Czar's Officers on Board.

JAPAN RINGS WITH SAMEJIMA'S NAME

Capture of Keekwan Fort Under Veteran Warrior One of Brilliancy and Daring—Seven Mines Exploded Before Assault.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Dispatches from Tokyo say that the Japanese protected cruiser Tsushima has seized the British steamer Nigretia, bound for Vladivostok, off Ulsan, Korea. An examination of the Nigretia's cargo showed she had a large quantity of contraband of war on board.

It is reported that the Nigretia had on board officers and men of Russian torpedo boat destroyers who had escaped from internment at Shanghai and were attempting to regain the Russian lines.

The British steamer King Arthur was also captured by the Japanese guardship Asagiri while attempting to leave Port Arthur on Monday. It is understood the King Arthur took supplies there.

She had on board Russian naval officers who were attempting to join the Russian second Pacific squadron. Both ships were taken to Sasebo.

All Japan is today ringing the praises of General Samejima as the hero of the assault on Keekwan mountain fort. It is conceded that his heroism inspired his men and turned a threatened disaster into a splendid victory.

The capture of the North Keekwan mountain fort was a brilliant feat. For weeks the Japanese had been tunneling two shafts forty feet in length, with four branches, where they laid seven mines, which were exploded previous to the attack.

The two attacking parties were composed of volunteers, and those participating in the first attempt vowed to capture the fort or die.

The soldiers of the first force were distinguished by a red badge. They remained in the moat during the explosion of the mines, having charged prematurely, and many were killed by the debris.

The second body of assaulters, distinguished by white badges, was in the saps during the explosion and was prevented from charging immediately, the mouths of the saps having been filled with debris.

The explosion made two huge rents in the north walls, through which the assaulters charged the enemy, winning the trenches in front of the wall and killing the reserve of the garrison in the rear of the fort.

Hongkong reports confirm the news that a powerful Japanese squadron of eight battleships and armored cruisers has proceeded south of Formosa, accompanied by fifteen colliers and transports, to attack the Russian Baltic squadron.

A Cape Town dispatch says that the Russian hospital ship Orel has sailed from that port for the far east.

Captain Pershing For Far East.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Captain John J. Pershing, Fifteenth cavalry, has been selected by the war department as military attaché at Tokyo, Japan, to succeed Lieutenant Colonel Wood, whose term of foreign duty has expired.

To Send Potatoes to Ireland.

GREELEY, Colo., Dec. 21.—Mayor H. C. Watson has issued a call for a mass meeting on Saturday next to consider a proposition to donate a large quantity of potatoes to the starving poor of Ireland. Similar meetings will be held at Longmont and Fort Collins. It is believed the farmers of northern Colorado will contribute several hundred carloads of potatoes if transportation can be arranged for. The government will be asked to furnish a transport to carry the potatoes from Galveston to Ireland.

Seven Perished on Long Shoal.

NANTUCKET, Mass., Dec. 21.—Death in the sea was the probable fate of Captain Nelson F. Mills and the six men who comprised the crew of the schooner Richard S. Leaming, which was driven ashore on Long shoal during the northeast gale last Sunday. Both of the schooner's yawl boats were found aboard her yesterday, one of them having been smashed to splinters. It is supposed that the crew took to the rigging, and when it was carried away they fell with it into the ocean.

Yeggmen on Trial.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 21.—Ten of the alleged yeggmen arrested here a week ago were arraigned before Police Magistrate Ochs. Three of them were turned over to the United States authorities and committed to jail for further hearings by United States Commissioner Rogers, six were held for the action of the authorities of Charles and Carroll counties, and one, William Rowe, was dismissed.

Bananas Buy Lives Blown Down.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—Telegraphic and telephonic communication between Boston and various points in Cape Cod, which has been cut off since Sunday on account of the storm of that day, has been resumed. Over a hundred poles were blown over below Buzzards Bay and a mass of wires carried down.

Texas Suspect Discharged.

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—Harry Van Cliff, a Texas cattleman, held on suspicion of being responsible for the death of Vincenzo di Pietro here early this month, has been discharged from custody, the medical examiner testified that Di Pietro died from natural causes.

EIGHT LIVES LOST.

Minneapolis Hotel Residents Crushed In Their Beds.

HIGH WALL IN FIRE RUINS FELL.

Strong Wind Sent Tons of Brick and Stone Crashing Through Three Story Roof—It Was Carried Down to Basement.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 21.—Eight persons have lost their lives in the Crocker hotel, on Fifth street, through the falling of the high east wall of the O. H. Peck building, which was damaged by fire last Tuesday night.

The high wind loosened the wall, and tons of brick and stone crashed down upon the roof of the three story hotel next door. The roof was forced through to the basement, carrying death and injury before it. Fire added horror to the scene, but was soon quenched.

There was no warning of the disaster, and the fourteen persons who were sleeping in the various apartments were caught in the crushed structure.

Those killed included Hans Anderson, James Hamilton, C. M. Kenyon, William Lillyblade, Mrs. Jennie Murray, William Engebretson, William Bray and Joseph Yoles.

The injured were Mrs. Carrie Boyce, cut about face and body bruised; W. J. Crocker, badly bruised; Mrs. Evelyn Williams, face cut and badly bruised, and Mrs. Anna McNevins, face cut and badly bruised.

Some of those injured were in the Belmont hotel, adjoining the Crocker hotel, and were hurt by debris forced through the wall separating the two buildings.

Mrs. Anna McNevins had a remarkable escape. She was on the second floor in bed when the crash came. The firemen took her out of her bed in the basement. The debris had arched over so as to preserve her entirely from injury.

W. J. Crocker, the proprietor, was found pinioned beneath a radiator and was taken out fainting, but will recover.

J. G. Houghton, city building inspector, made an inspection of the standing walls Monday, but gave no orders. He had earlier ordered the demolition of other walls that seemed likely to fall.

C. L. Smith's premonition of trouble saved his life. He roomed in the Crocker building and was nervous and could not sleep. Twice he arose, dressed and went outside to see what the wind was doing. The second time he told a policeman he thought the wall was unsafe. The officer laughed at the idea, but his laughter had not ceased before the wall fell.

DEATH OF BISHOP PHELAN.

Pittsburg Prelate Passed Away After Three Years' Illness.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 21.—Right Rev. Richard Phelan, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Pittsburg, is dead after an illness covering three years.

Bishop Phelan was born in the town land of Straleo, near Ballyragget, County Kilkenny, Ireland, Jan. 1, 1828. After graduating from St. Kieran's college, Kilkenny, he came to Pittsburg. He continued his studies at the seminary of St. Michael here and at St. Mary's seminary in Baltimore. On May 4, 1854, he was ordained a priest. He became bishop of the Pittsburg diocese in 1876. On May 4 last the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood was celebrated with a golden jubilee.

A little over a year ago the Right Rev. Regis Canevin was appointed as coadjutor bishop. The elder official then sought the quiet retreat of St. Paul's Orphan asylum at Idlewood, where he died.

Bishop Phelan was a brother of Canon Phelan of Ireland.

Colonel Ames Pardoned.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 21.—The state board of pardons has granted a pardon to Colonel Frederick Ames, brother of former Mayor A. A. Ames of Minneapolis. Colonel Ames was chief of police and was convicted of "graft" during his brother's administration. His pardon is due to the untiring efforts of his wife, who has collected evidence tending to show that her husband was the victim of designing officials under him.

Mayor of Camden, N. J., Resigns.

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 21.—Mayor Joseph E. Nowrey last night handed his resignation as mayor of Camden to the president of the city council, to take effect immediately. No reason is given for his stepping out of office, but it is believed he took this action rather than sign the $90,000 bond issue authorized by the city council for the purchase of land for park purposes.

Supposed Millionaire Bankrupt.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 21.—Charles M. Reed of Erie, supposed to be a millionaire, has been declared to be a bankrupt by Judge Joseph Buffington in the United States district court. Reed's liabilities are nearly $1,000,000, about $300,000 of which is secured by mortgages in railroad and mining property in Baker county, Ore.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION

Programme for N. J. Association's Golden Anniversary.

SESSIONS DEC. 27, 28, 29

Fiftieth Annual Meeting to be Held at Trenton—To Discuss Interesting Topics.

Several Plainfield pedagogues will attend the fiftieth annual session of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association, to be held December 27, 28 and 29, at Trenton.

The first day's session will be opened at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. Caroline Barber Biddle, of Trenton, will sing a solo. An address of welcome will be made by Dr. James M. Green, principal of the State Schools, and the response will be by Superintendent J. J. Unger of Vineland schools. "The Civic Duty of School Superintendents, Principals and Teachers" will be the subject of the superintendent's address, delivered by Superintendent W. Outlon Cook, of Mt. Holly.

Report of the committee on legislation will be made by the chairman, Superintendent James E. Bryan, of Camden, and committee on resume by the chairman, Superintendent William H. Eldredge, of Williamstown. Dr. Thomas Hallett, dean of the school of pedagogy of New York University, will deliver an address on "Fifty Years of Progress in the Science of Education," and Superintendent John Terhune, of Bergen County, will speak on "The Reading Habit."

At the evening session there will be music by the glee club and others, followed by the announcement of the nominating committee, and report of the committee on education progress by Superintendent A. W. Hand, of Cape May County. "Some Facts About the Normal System and Its Relation to Education" will be the subject of an address by Mrs. Mary R. Earle Davis, instructor and supervisor in the City Normal School of Bridgeport, Conn. Dr. Charles Gray Shaw, of New York University, will speak on "The Modern Man."

Wednesday morning department meetings will be held. Dr. Thomas M. Balliet will make an address, and Professor Ray Whitbeck, supervisor of the Model School, Trenton, will speak on "Some Aims and Problems in Supervision." An address will also be delivered by Superintendent W. M. Swingle, of the Orange schools. The foregoing will complete the routine of the department of supervision.

In the High School department, addresses on "The Elimination of the Grammar School" will be made by Superintendent William E. Chancellor, of Paterson, and "Two Questions," "Does Our High School Teaching Relate Itself to the Experience of the Child?" and "What Is Your Final Test for Growth?" by Superintendent O. I. Woodley, of Passaic.

BRIDGE LUMBER FOUND HIDDEN IN ITALIANS' BARN

FREEHOLDER FINDS MISSING PROPERTY AFTER LONG SEARCH.

Performing a little "detective" work on his own account, Freeholder William Demler, of Somerset County, last week discovered what had become of all the old lumber and planking taken from the Mountain avenue bridge over Green brook, torn down to make way for a new structure. It had been piled up on one side of the road awaiting to be disposed of at auction but when prospective buyers called to look it over, it had disappeared.

Freeholder Demler instituted search and at last discovered the missing boards hidden away in a stable at the Italian colony on Humber avenue. All the residents denied putting it here and as yet the thief or thieves have not come forward. It is understood that the culprit has been seeking through friends to make a settlement at a price far beyond the value of the lumber. Nearby residents who have suffered greatly from the depredations of the colony believe that an arrest in this matter would be preferable to a settlement.

Burned by Steam.

By the bursting of a steam pipe at his home Saturday morning, Isaac Honston, of West Front street, was badly burned about the face and head. He was repairing a slight leak in the pipe and was directly over it when the scalding vapor enveloped him.

Splinter May Cost a Finger.

Through a wooden splinter which entered his hand a short time ago, Edward Baker, Jr., of Somerset street, is likely to lose one of his fingers. The original wound steadily grew worse and at the present time the digit is in very bad shape and he is detained at home by it.

SOMERSET COURT OPENS

Afterward Adjourned Until Regular Session, January 4.

JURORS CHARGED

Judge Garretson Makes Reference to North Plainfield Stabbing Affair and North Branch Feud.

The December term of the Somerset county courts opened at Somerville yesterday and promises to be a very slim affair as far as Supreme and Circuit cases are concerned. But two were ready for trial and Justice Garretson decided to take them up January 4, and regular court was adjourned until that day.

From a criminal standpoint there will be aplenty doing this term. Sheriff Cooper's first Grand Jury is a good one. Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, is the chairman, and among his associates are former Sheriffs Calvin D. McMurtry and William H. H. Wyckoff. Assessor Frank T. Ross, Assemblyman Irving Hoagland, former Freeholder E. V. Ursner, Fred. Kirch, Richard G. G. Meldenke, Thomas S. Armstrong and W. L. Saunders; the last two of North Plainfield.

In his charge to the jurors Justice Garretson said the affray in North Plainfield should be given the greatest care. Two men at least, he said, had been injured by the four prisoners. In an affray of that sort where it is done on purpose all the offenders should be indicted together, and the charge may be assault with intent to kill, or atrocious assault and battery.

In regard to the Cramer-Vlomerfelt feud at North Branch, which resulted in the death of Constable Frank D. Cramer, Justice Garretson said he was not familiar with the circumstances, but declared they should be looked into carefully and the jurors should present such an indictment as the facts require. "If they engaged in mutual combat and death resulted that would be manslaughter. It might be that the act of killing was murder," said the Justice.

Among the licenses granted were those of Joseph A. Blats and Richard A. Botoe, of North Plainfield.

George W. Anderson, John C. Staats and E. B. Hoagland were appointed to assess the particular benefits derived from the Neshanic road to property owners.

Judge Schenck announced he would take up the jury appeals February 6 and the court appeals February 17. In these among the cases listed of interest to North Plainfielders are:

John A. VanFleet ads. John D. Smith; Codington & Swackhamer, Reed & Coddington. Tried January 5, 1904, before Justice Smalley.

Mary A. Lee ads. William H. Rogers; Dungan & Reger, Horace Codington. Tried June 9, 1904, before Justice Kitchen.

Harry L. Bailey ads. Francis H. Bent; William F. Vosseller, James J. Meehan. Tried August 18, 1904, before Justice Stephen.

COMING OUT PARTY FOR MISS WINIFRED HAVEN

DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL AFFAIR GIVEN BY MRS. WILLIAM E. LOWE.

An interesting social event was the coming out party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. William E. Lowe, of Park avenue, for Miss Winifred Haven. During the hours from 4 to 7 o'clock over one hundred guests attended and there were many pleasant features. The home was decorated in red and white, many flowers being used. There was a profusion of the favorite American Beauty rose, gifts to the debutante. In the dining room, as well as the reception hall the arrangement of flowers was greatly admired.

Receiving with Miss Haven were Mrs. William E. Lowe and Miss Lowe, while in the dining room were a number of young women, who assisted in serving refreshments.

Miss Haven is a favorite in Plainfield society and she was the recipient of many gifts of value in honor of her introduction to society.

1904 Council Winding Up.

The Common Council will meet Friday night for the last time this year. All bills will be passed upon and the odds and ends of business concluded for the year. The new Common Council will hold its first meeting on Monday night, January 2, for organization. An adjournment will then be taken to a later date in the month.

MR. AND MRS. HARMAN'S DANCE FOR DEBUTANTE

PARK CLUBHOUSE THE SCENE OF A BRILLIANT SOCIAL AFFAIR.

Among the society events of the season the debutante dance given by Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harman, of West Eighth street, for their second daughter, Miss Helen Harman, last evening, at the Park Club, was one of the most brilliant. It was not a reception, but was intended chiefly as a dance for the younger set, including the young married couples.

The main room and gallery at the clubhouse were decorated with festoons of hemlock, balsam and holly, while a bower of palms and ferns were arranged on the stage, beneath which Austin's orchestra was seated. The scarlet of flower of the poinsettia was used with good effect, giving a Christmas note to the entertainment.

The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harman, Miss Harman and Miss Helen Harman. During the early part of the evening the orchestra discovered selections from the well-known operas and later the preparation for dancing was announced by the rendition of Strauss's waltz, "On the Blue Danube." The dancing was continued until 11 o'clock, when supper was served. Dancing was afterward resumed and from the lively airs played during the evening, the orchestra quickly changed to "Home, Sweet Home," at an hour selected for the termination of the affair.

Prior to the affair at the Park Club Mr. and Mrs. Harman entertained a house-party of out-of-town guests at dinner, who were the guard of honor of the evening for the debutante. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Gray, Miss Isabelle V. Heyt, Arthur Bliss, Leigh H. Reuser and Roderick A. Dorman, of New York; Ralph James and Robert Hurton, of Baltimore; Wharton Clay, of Chicago; Miss Katherine Young and Gayle L. Young, of Newark; Willis Adams and Richard T. Thompson and Miss Helen G. Adams, of Germantown, Pa.

TESTIMONY OF CHILDREN SURPRISES THEIR MOTHER

MRS. GILES TURNED AGAINST IN HER SUIT FOR ALIMONY.

When Mrs. Malvinia Giles, of Newark, formerly of New Market, appeared yesterday in the Court of Chancery to prosecute proceedings already brought against her husband, Joiel Giles, to secure alimony, she was surprised to find that her four children, upon whom she depended to corroborate her charges of alleged cruelty, had taken sides with the defendant father.

The cause came up before Vice Chancellor Emery and an answer filed by Giles was a complete denial of all the charges made by the wife. Annexed to the answer were the affidavits of the three sons and one daughter, in which each denied the affiant had ever seen their father strike or otherwise ill-treat their mother, as was charged in the petition for alimony. Jacob J. Merrill, a brother of Mrs. Giles, also filed an affidavit in which he blamed his sister for the marital trouble.

Mrs. Giles had been granted temporary alimony of $35 a week and this was reduced to $18 with the understanding that the defendant pay $50 arrearage alimony.

Fractured Four Ribs.

Miss Bertha Wensel, of South Second street, is detained at home, the result of a fall on the ice, a few days ago, when she fractured four ribs. At first she paid little attention to her injuries, but the pain became so intense that she was obliged to call a physician. It was then discovered that the ribs were fractured.

Cut by Rusty Nail.

Randolph Chandler, of Codington avenue, received a severe cut from a rusty nail Monday afternoon while coasting. The hand was badly torn so that six stitches were taken in it by Dr. Gaston. As the result of the accident the young man will be detained at his home for several days.

Hospital Auxiliary Meeting.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital will meet in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Friday morning, when the visitors and purchaser for January will be appointed and other business transacted.

WANT NEW COURT HOUSE

Scheme Outlined at Somerset Co. Bar Association Session.

TO COST $150,000

Price of Suggested Site is Too High—Grand Jury and Freeholders to Act.

The most important matter considered at a meeting of the Somerset County Bar Association at Somerville yesterday, was that in reference to the much talked of new court house, which has been opposed by the Board of Freeholders for various reasons. Judge Schenck, who introduced the subject said that much of the opposition on the part of the Freeholders had been met and that the Board is now inclined to favor it. Judge Schenck referred to the unsanitary condition of the present building and the fact that on the second floors the walls are sagging and that the building can hardly be considered safe.

The proposition is to erect a new court house at a cost of $150,000 and Judge Schenck said that this could be done without any increase in taxation to the residents of Somerset County, as the increase in the assessed valuations in the county had increased $3,000,000 and he suggested that thirty year 4½ per cent. bonds be issued, adding that it would not be many years before the increase in valuation would reach $3,000,000 He also argued that the money which would necessarily have to be expended for repairs on the old building would pay the interest in the cost of the new structure.

A statement was made in behalf of the Board of Freeholders in which it was said that that body had been trying to purchase the corner property near the court house, but that the owners had raised the price. The members were hoping to get the property at a reasonable figure.

It was also stated that the surrogate's office is in a dilapidated condition and not really safe to hold the valuable papers recorded there. It was finally decided to report these matters to the Grand Jury and have that body confer with the Board of Freeholders with a view to securing the desired improvements.

These officers were elected: President, John Reger: vice president, George Face; secretary, Miss Steele; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Nelson Y. Dungan; trustees, A. M. Beekman, S. S. Swackhamer. It was decided to hold the annual banquet and the date will be announced soon.

MR. AND MRS. BARROWS GIVE A DINNER PARTY

IN HONOR OF DUDLEY H. BARROWS WHO IS HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, of West Eighth street, gave a dinner party last evening for their son, Dudley H. Barrows, who is home from school for the holiday vacation. The home was decorated attractively, red being the prevailing color.

Those at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Miss Georgianna Hoadley Smith, Miss Virginia Hageman, Miss Edith Fisk, Miss Eva Browne, Miss Helen Lee, Miss Grace Kaufman, Lawrence Tweedy, Mellick Tweedy, Hartley Mellick, Effingham Pinto, Gordon Abbott and Dudley H Barrows.

After the dinner all attended the coming out dance at the Park Club given by Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harman for their second daughter, Miss Helen Harman.

Treated to Christmas Dinner.

It being impossible to have a Christmas tree this season, owing to the limited quarters, those in charge of the Children's Home arranged to give the children a Christmas dinner today noon. Through the generosity of kind friends of the Home all the good things were provided for the dinner and the children had a good feast. Mrs. Kimball, president of the Children's Home Association, was present and she had a few pleasant words for the little ones.

Making Continental Trip.

John Borrup, of Terrill road, and Charles Reick, of Scotch Plains, started last week on a trip across the continent, taking in the southern states. They reached Florida last Friday and after remaining in St. Augustine will proceed to New Orleans. The young men propose working a short time in various cities and then make a two or three hundred mile jump further West. The trip is being made solely for experience.

SAENGERBUND LIQUOR BAN

German Society Prohibits Sale By Others in Its Hall.

REASON FOR ORDER

The Repeated Disturbances Have Prompted the Organization to Take Action at This Time.

Through a disturbance which took place in the building at a dance last week, the Gesang and Turn Verein has decided to no longer rent Saengerbund Hall to floating social organizations which are formed solely to conduct some picnic or dance affair and then disband. The ban is placed because of repeated violations of the contract which lessees are asked to sign, agreeing not to sell liquor in the hall while their affair is in progress. Time and again the promise has been given by committees only to be disregarded and the Turn Verein in order to protect itself was forced to resort to drastic measures.

In speaking of the matter, one of the leading Turn Verein members said today that the Saengerbund people were being criticized repeatedly for disturbances which took place in the hall during dances and which were not to blame. He declared that it has been the custom of city and borough young men who wish to conduct such an affair to call themselves a club and in its name rent the hall, signing all agreements readily but at the same time intending to keep none. The clubs have backing of no kind and consequently when the Saengerbund officials attempt to gain an explanation for violations, the floating organization has disappeared and only individuals can be found who always claim, "It was some other fellow who allowed the liquor to be brought in and sold."

Continuing further, The Daily Press' informant said that reputable clubs would still be allowed to rent the hall but even at that a strict watch would be kept for the breaking of any agreements. He also said that the Gesang and Turn Verein would conduct monthly dances in the hall of its own accord and by its official's supervision correct the mistaken impression of constant disorderliness that has spread about.

BURGLARS' SMALL BOOTY AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

FRANK MILLER'S GENERAL STORE ENTERED DURING THE NIGHT.

Sometime during last night burglars entered the general store of Frank Miller at South Plainfield and made off with a small amount of money, four pairs of boots, overshoes, under wear and some breadstuff, amounting in all to $75. Although no arrests have been made, Mr. Miller suspects several persons.

Entrance was effected through a dining room window of Mr. Miller's residence, which adjoins the store. During the night he heard strange noises about the place, but thought it was his horse in the barn that was making the disturbance.

MISS JANE MORTON DEAD.

Aunt of William L. Saunders Dies in Philadelphia.

Miss Jane Morton, aged eighty-nine years, an aunt of William L. Saunders, of Rockview avenue, died yesterday at the home of her niece, Miss Saunders, in Chestnut street, Philadelphia. She contracted a severe cold recently, which developed into a complication of troubles.

During her visits here Miss Morton made many friends. During the past fifteen years it was her custom to spend her winters in Philadelphia with Miss Saunders and the summers at Mr. Saunders' home here. Her bright and sunny disposition and lovable nature was the admiration of all who knew her.

Entertained Sunday-School Class.

W. C. Leek, of East Fifth street, entertained Sunday-school class No. 2, of Trinity Reformed church, of which he is the teacher, at his home last night. The evening was spent in playing games and listening to good vocal and instrumental music. A feature of the affair was the presentation of a silk umbrella to Mr. Leek by the class. The teacher expressed his appreciation for the gifts and thanked all for it.

Benevolent Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will elect officers at the regular meeting to be held Friday night.

"TIM" SUES PLAINFIELDER

Congressman's Dewey Theatre Injured by Automobile.

DEMANDS DAMAGES

Tammany Politician Wants $5,500 From D. T. Kenney—An Attachment Has Been Served.

David T. Kenney, of North Plainfield, has just been made the defendant in a suit for $5 500 damages brought by Congressman Timothy D. Sullivan, of New York.

Deputy Sheriff Leavitt has just levied an attachment on the property, including an automobile of Mr. Kenney, in the suit brought against Mr. Kenney by Congressman Sullivan, commonly known as "Big Tim," to recover $5,500 damages alleged to have been caused to an ornamental canopy in front of the Dewey Theatre in East Fourteenth street. Mr. Sullivan, who is the owner of the Dewey Theatre, says that about 1 o'clock in the morning of November 14, an automobile truck owned by the defendant and operated by an employe of Mr. Kenney ran into and totally destroyed the canopy.

In an affidavit filed by his counsel, Steuer & Hoffman, Mr. Sullivan sets forth that Mr. Kenney owns and operates trucks and wagons and particularly an automobile truck. He asserts that at the time the canopy of the Dewey Theatre was destroyed the automobile truck was operated by an employe of the defendant by the name of Williams. He sets forth that on the morning in question Williams negligently and carelessly ran the truck into the canopy of the Dewey Theatre. He further sets forth that the said Williams was not a fit, competent and proper person to operate the machine and could not operate the same with safety. Mr. Sullivan also sets forth that the machine was defective in that the steering gear was not in proper order.

GUN CLUB PLANS BIG HOLIDAY SHOOT

COMMITTEE PROPOSES TO BRING WESTERN EXPERTS HERE.

The Plainfield Gun Club held a meeting last evening, at which arrangements were completed for the shoot to be held Washington's birthday. A committee composed of Philip Jahn, George H. Firstbrook, Elmer D. Cutting, Henry Vosseler and Elwood Sebring was appointed to assume charge of the plans and they contemplate making it still more successful than the one held last month.

The club will also conduct an all day shoot the latter part of January and Henry Vosseler was made a committee of one to fix the date. In addition to the usual attractions, western experts will be in attendance and give a demonstration of the new patented traps which facilitate target work.

Miss Lowe's Mishap.

While walking along a street in New York one day last week, Miss Charlotte Lowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lowe, of Park avenue, was struck by a brick falling from a building in the course of erection. She fainted away and was carried into a nearby store, a physician being summoned. An examination showed that the brick had struck the front of the young woman's hat and had scraped her nose, though she believed that the missile had hit her on the head. When she recovered consciousness, Miss Lowe found that her watch and purse were missing.

Whist Club Entertained.

Horace Conover, of Jackson avenue, entertained the Watchung Whist Club at his home last night. This club was recently formed and meetings are held on the first and third Tuesday evenings in the month. Last night the first and second prizes for the women were won by Mrs. Walter Walker and Mrs. Adam Seale, while the men's prizes were won by W. H. Lewis and U. G. Pierson. After the play supper was served. On Tuesday night, January 3, W. R. Lewis, of Richmond street, will entertain the club.

Gift for Their Boss.

George N. Vanderhoof, manager for the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, was the recipient of a handsome Christmas present from the clerks at the store. The gift was a large clock. The presentation was made by Henry Angerbauer, head clerk at the store, and Mr. Vanderhoof responded in a happy manner.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS' CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT

ENJOYABLE PROGRAMME MARKS ANNUAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

The entertainment and Christmas festival at the Seventh-day Baptist church last night was a thoroughly enjoyable and interesting one in every respect. The Sunday-school room was tastefully decorated for the occasion, a huge star of evergreen occupying the central place above the platform while a handsomely trimmed Christmas tree stood on one side of the room. A feature of the decorations was the dining room, where the tables, set, and decorated in red and green, made an attractive appearance.

The programme opened with a selection by the school, which was followed by devotional exercises led by the pastor and Dr. Henry M. Maxson. A carol by the school was the next number on the programme, which was followed by the presentation of gifts by the various classes in the Sunday-school for the benefit of the poor. There were thirteen classes to make their presentations, and each took some part in the programme either by music or recitation. Among the features of this part of the exercises was a quartette selection, "Sleep, Baby, Sleep." This was sung by Sydney Titsworth, bass; John Daub; tenor; Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano, and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, contralto. A solo, "Sleep, Little Baby of Mine," by Miss Nancy Randolph, was also well received.

At the conclusion of another Christmas carol by the school, the gifts from the tree were distributed, and the evening's programme ended with refreshments served by the committee composed of Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, Mrs. L. T. Titsworth and Mrs. Ira N. West. This was the committee on general arrangements: Mrs. J. E. Kimball, Dr. Martha Sullivan, Miss Ernestine Smith, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph, Mrs. Nathan Lewis and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard.

CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

SUNDAY-SCHOOL EXERCISES AS ATTRACTIVE AS USUAL.

Unusually attractive was the annual Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school at the Church of the Holy Cross last night. A service in the church preceded the entertainment in the parish house, at which time the school sang its Christmas carols and listened to an appropriate address by Rev. E. M. Hodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church.

At the conclusion of this service, the Sunday-school, congregation, and friends, adjourned to the parish house, where a delightful winter scene was presented. A large chimney, fifteen feet in height, occupied a prominent place in the room, while all around, drifts of snow and imitation icicles made a picturesque appearance. Evergreen trees and decorations added to the beauty of this wintry scene, and added in making the room most attractive.

William Westphal impersonated Santa Claus in a clever and realistic manner and delighted the children with gifts from his pack. The affair was in charge of the officers of the Sunday-school, and was very creditably arranged in every detail.

W. H. Runyon, Worshipful Master.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., at a regular communication held last night, elected these officers for the coming year: Worshipful master, William H Runyon; senior warden, J. T. Sutphen; junior warden, William Taylor; treasurer, Peter A. Runk; past master, Henry T. A. Rogers; chaplain, Rev. Erskine M. Redman; senior deacon, James Dodd; junior deacon, Cecil Pitts; senior master of ceremony, H. E. Wyckoff; junior master of ceremony, M. R. Dayton; senior steward, William W. Warnock; junior steward, William Craig; tyler, Caspar Beisterie, of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 36.

INTER-ACADEMIC LEAGUE

New Jersey Schools Will Contest on the Diamond.

LEALS REPRESENTED

Local School to be Among the Six Who Will Strive for Baseball Honors in the Spring.

The New Jersey Inter-Academic League, which existed during the football season, will be continued in the baseball season among the same schools. These are the institutions which will contest at the bat for the State championship, Leal's School, of this city; Newark Academy, of Newark; Pingry School, of Elizabeth; Montclair Military Academy, of Montclair; Carteret Academy, of Orange.

A meeting of the baseball managers of the schools in this league was held on November 26, at Newark, and the rules governing the league were adopted. Subsequently a meeting was held on December 5, at which time it was decided that the league color should be blue, and that an indoor meet may be held in April. The schedule of games for the baseball teams will be follows:

April 9—Leal's vs. Carteret, at Plainfield; Newark Academy vs. Montclair Military Academy, at Newark.

May 6—Carteret vs. Pingry, at Orange; Montclair Military Academy vs. Leal's at Montclair.

May 13—Carteret vs. Newark Academy, at Orange; Leal's vs. Pingry, at Plainfield.

May 20—Montclair Military Academy vs. Carteret, at Montclair; Pingry vs. Newark Academy, at Elizabeth.

May 27—Newark Academy vs. Leal's, at Newark; Pingry vs. Montclair Military Academy, at Elizabeth.

Edwin M. Daniel, '05, is the captain of the baseball team for the next season, and already he has been looking over his material, and reports that the prospects are bright. There are several new candidates in the school in addition to four or five old standbys. Daniels, who has covered first base and left field, is one of the best, and is a capable manager of the team. Among those who will be out early in the spring for the Leal's School baseball team are Daniel, Strong, Jewett, Glenney, Howard, Chapman, Manning, Lyman, Endicott, Underhill, Smith, Lawrence and Wilcox.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER PASSES AWAY IN ALBANY

NEPHEW OF LATE JOB MALE DIED SUDDENLY ON MONDAY.

Robert A. Male, a former resident of this city, died at his home in Albany, N. Y., on Monday. Mr. Male came to this city sixteen years ago, where he lived for eight years. He was a nephew of the late Job Male, and leaves a nephew and a niece in this city, Robert N. Fenno, and Miss Gertrude M. Fenno, of Watchung avenue.

Mr. Male was born in New York in 1839, and remained for the early years of his life in that city. After leaving Plainfield in 1899, he made his home in Albany. Mr. Male is survived by a wife and two grand children in addition to the relatives residing in this city.

Long Chase After Fox.

After a chase in which four others participated, Walter Burghmiller, of Berkley Heights, captured a large fox near Stirling, Monday. The animal was started up just back of Scotch Plains by Burghmiller, his brother William and Robert and Richard Rogers, all of whom continued on its trail until Reynard was brought to bay. This is the fourth fox that has been caught in that vicinity in the past week.

Wesleyan Clubs Here Monday.

The Wesleyan Glee and Mandolin Clubs started this week on a trip of three weeks through the New England and Middle Atlantic States. They will appear in Plainfield at Vincent chapel Monday evening under the auspices of the First M. E. church and the next date at Armstrong's indicates they will be heard by a large audiance.

Plainfielder Hurt at Elizabeth.

Herbert Willett, of Craig place, is detained at the Elizabeth General Hospital with a fractured leg. He was hurrying to catch a train in Elizabeth on Monday, when he slipped and fell on the ice. An ambulance was summoned and Mr. Willett was removed to the hospital.

EARLY MARRIAGES WRONG.

Governor of Maryland Says 24 Years is the Proper Age for Average Girl to Wed.

Baltimore (Md.) Special.

Gov. Edwin Warfield has caused a stir among femininity by stating that 24 years is the proper age at which a girl should marry. He made the statement in addressing the graduates of the high school at Wilmington, Del., recently, and later followed it up with the following remarks:

"My advice to girls is not to marry too early. I asked the age when girls should marry, I should say from 24 to 26. The latter was the age of Mrs. Warfield when I married her, and I have said to my daughters that I should not give my consent to their marriage until they arrived at that age.

"Marrying for the purpose of settling a daughter in life is as a rule a failure, and an unhappy one. No parent, and especially no true and loving mother, will wish to push her daughter into matrimony before she is fully matured and fitted for the grave responsibilities of married life.

"Girls just out of school are not equipped for the ordinary household duties of wives, and for the cares and trifles of motherhood. They should, after leaving school, spend some time with their parents, giving their companionship, and learning something of the work that will be theirs as wives.

"The girl who marries too early misses many of the pleasures of life. She is doomed to spend her youthful days in the trying and taxing cares of motherhood and household duties with broken health and run-down nerves before she has passed out of her teens.

"Such marriages are unfortunate. They are entered into without due consideration and frequently before the husband has established the business ability that will enable him to provide for the increasing wants of married life. Girls should be taught that there is more in life than getting married; that, when they leave school, they owe some service to their parents, and that they should spend some of their days in making the lives of their fathers and mothers easier and brighter.

"The same advice pertains to young men. I have known cases where young men who, because they married too soon and before they had established themselves in permanent positions, were compelled to give up good opportunities for advancement because the ties and environments kept them down to one locality.

"The realization of the mistake of marrying too early has discouraged many a young man, blasted his future, brought disappointment to himself, and deprivation and suffering to his family. I believe in marriage, and would like to see every man and woman mated in congenial companionship for life, but I am opposed to early and thoughtless marriages.

Count Ignatieff, Leader of Pan-Slavist Party, to Be Russia's Minister of Interior.

London (England) Special.

A special dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Agence Russe says Count Ignatieff will succeed the late M. Von Plehve as minister to the interior.

Nicholas Pauloviteh Ignatieff was born at St. Petersburg in 1832 and entered the guard when 17 years old. Later he was appointed military attache to the Russian embassy in London, and in 1858 was sent on a special mission to Khiva and Bokhara. In 1860 he was appointed Russian ambassador at Pekin and four years later was made ambassador to Turkey. He was appointed minister of the interior under Alexander III., but was dismissed in 1882, though he remained a member of the council of the empire. He has since been conspicuous as a leader of the pan-Slavic party in Russia.

TRADES HIS GIRL FOR DOG

Arthur Fuller Takes Famous Coon Pointer and Lets Brother Marry Pretty Miss Ivy.

Wellington Fuller has married his brother Arthur's girl, and brother Arthur is now owner of Wellington's prize coon dog. Wellington says he has got the best and prettiest girl in Berkshire county, Mass., and brother Arthur says that if there is any dog in the county that can tree more coons than his new dog he'd like to know it.

Wellington and Arthur both became smitten with pretty Miss Ivy White, Walter White's daughter, last fall, and they began "cailin' regular." Arthur is 24 and his brother 26. Soon the big brother began to understand that the little brother was getting more smiles than he was, and the village folk told him he had better be spry. He might have settled it in a fight, but he chose diplomacy.

"I'M GOING TO GIVE YOU SPORT."

"Arthur, did ye ever see a coon dog that could ketch more coons than my Sport?"

Arthur admitted he hadn't.

"Arthur, Miss Ivy is a pretty girl, but I guess as how you have seen some one jest as pretty?"

Arthur thought maybe he had.

"Well, Arthur, there ain't another coon dog like Sport, and there may be another girl like Miss Ivy. I am going to give you Sport. He's your'n."

Arthur was delighted.

"And when you get Sport I want you to forget the way to Miss Ivy's house and let me do all the courting alone," said the big brother.

Arthur thought it over. Sport certainly was a good dog and Miss Ivy certainly was a fine girl—but there wasn't another dog like Sport.

"Being as I am only 24 and pretty young to get married, I guess I will take the coon dog, if ye really mean it," announced Arthur.

To show that he meant it Wellington and Miss Ivy White were married in the village church in New Boston, Mass. Arthur has bought a new gun and is impatient to get after the coons.

SWINDLER MET HIS MATCH

Sham Millionaire Is Victimized by a Cook Who "Had Been There Before."

The classical confidence trick has been neatly played on a would-be swindler by his intended victim. The latter, a cook on a transatlantic liner, had been done himself before, and was too old a bird to be caught again. He struck up an acquaintance with an engaging but obviously sham American millionaire in the train to Paris, confiding to him that he had 40,000 francs in his bag, and meant to amuse himself on the boulevards.

"Well, met, indeed," said the millionaire; "I have also made my pile, and intend seeing the merry side of life is my Paree." They started the evening with an expensive dinner, paid for by the American millionaire. At coffee the latter exclaimed: "Hullo, I have not any cigars; suppose you go and buy some. You can leave your bag here, where it will be quite safe. But, as you might be suspicious, here's my pocketbook. Keep it till you join me again."

As soon as the cook's back was turned the American millionaire of course bolted with the bag, but the latter only contained old newspapers and the cook's card, with the words: "I have been here before; you have met your match this time." In the would-be swindler's pocketbook was a sum of £24 in French notes, which the cook took to the police station, asking the officer to whom he told his tale with understandable relish to give the money to the poor.

New Chief Executive of Porto Rico and His Bride Already Popular in San Juan.

San Juan (P. R.) Special.

The new chief executive of Porto Rico has created a generally favorable impression in the island, especially in a social way, and his young bride of less than a year is equally well liked. Gov. Winthrop was born in New York city. He was graduated from Harvard in 1897 with the degree of A. B. and from Harvard law school in 1900 with the degree of LL. B. In 1899 he was admitted to the bar of New York. In November, 1900, he was appointed private secretary to Gov. Taft of the Philippines and served until July, 1901, when he was made assistant executive secretary of the Philippine islands. He held this office until August, 1903, and during his incumbency was acting executive secretary of the Philippines from October, 1902, to April, 1903, and from November, 1903, to May, 1904, when he was made judge of the court of first instance. A few weeks later President Roosevelt appointed him governor of Porto Rico and he was inaugurated on July 4. His wife was Miss Miles Rigge, of New York.

CHINESE SALVATIONISTS.

Gen. Booth Has Many "Celestial" Soldiers and Lassies in California's Metropolis.

San Francisco (Cal.) Special.

They have a new light turned on the domestic servant question in San Francisco. It is the Salvation Army and many of the "Chinaboys" there have become members and put their religious principles into their housework. The Salvation Army is working in many nationalities in many countries, and is doing good work among the Chinese in Chinatown, San Francisco. There are Chinese women as well as men who belong to the army and the Salvation Army badge is worn over many varieties of costumes. As a rule the regular shield-shaped badge of metal is worn; sometimes a Chinaman will be seen wearing a bright red guernsey with the words: "Salvation Army" in big letters across the front, woven in, or there is a badge of ribbon, the army colors, red, yellow and blue, with the name in Chinese char-

A number of the San Francisco men intended to go, but there was delay in making the necessary arrangements, Sheck Nong was the only one who at the last moment could prove that he was worth $1,000, and was allowed to go with the privilege of returning. He is a first-class servant and only asks for army meeting nights out.

Squirrel Park in Tennessee.

H. P. Kellor, of Ripley, Tenn., is the owner of a 100-acre squirrel park on one of his farms two miles west of Ripley. The trees in the park consist mainly of oak, hickory, beech and a few pecan and chestnut. There are several varieties of squirrels—gray, black, fox and a few white. At almost any hour of the day scores of the little nimble-footed creatures can be seen sporting around the cribs and barnyards on the premises, and seem to be quite gentle. Occasionally a few of them stray off in adjoining woods, but return.

A son weighing but one pound at birth was born to Mr. and Mrs. Beatty, at Steedman, Callaway county, Mo. The child is so small that a finger ring will go over its hand up to the elbow. It is perfectly formed, and its lungs are sound. Attending physicians say the child will live.

Woman's Ways

The Philosophy of Clothes and the Art of Make Believe

"You can tell by the changes in woman's dress the changes in her attitude toward life. Did you ever notice the difference in dress between a married woman and a single one? The single one may be ever so pretty and her clothes ever so chic, but an indescribable change comes over her wardrobe after she becomes "Mrs." The air of assurance, of having "arrived," also imparts itself to her clothes. She may wear white, the simplest of white apparently, and yet it has a different look from the white of former days; it is a berthboned, beautifully corseted white without a sign of uncertainty about its lines."

Only yesterday I was looking over a magazine of the vintage of several years back, when woman's advance was the shrill, compelling battle cry shrieked through every page. There were many examples of the heights to which woman had raised herself from every rank in life. There were women this and women that. A woman had knocked down a tramp on one page and closed the left eye of another member of the stronger sex on the next page. There was even—heaven save the mark!—a woman butcher, and she was enjoying business when last heard from. Ah, yes, my friends, woman was doing great work in those days! Miss Bessie Somebody broke the record for long distance bicycling; picture of Miss Bessie, bones and all, clad in an ultra chic pair of bloomers and hobnailed shoes that would not have disgraced a coal heaver. Another fair exponent of new womanhood in the next paragraph had broken a collar bone and sprained both her wrists, not to speak of a tooth, doing some athletic stunt or other which "no woman had ever done before." Even the newspaper women caught the craze and did rare and desperate stunts for copy. Ah, how we have backslidden! And compare the costume of that day with that of the present. Compare the short, stocky skirt, made almost from horse blanket and as short as the law allowed, with the present idea of a walking skirt, all graceful fullness and tucks and soft material! How the woman's righters must gnash their teeth as they gaze upon this perfidious destroyer of woman's masculinity! And the shoes! But look at the shoes in order to make yourself comprehend the change in the female attitude! Never have so many French heels been worn, and this in place of the boys' footwear of when new womanhood was in nowise. Can heroic athletic deeds be done on French heels? Can the bicycle be bestraddled in full, softly tucked skirts? No; the new woman that was is as extinct as the dodo, and who shall say the fashions do not stand as the sign of her downfall?"

"Bless them, then!" ejaculated the bachelor fervently.

"He doesn't love me any mo-o-o-re!" sobbed the fair Mrs. Newlywed.

"Well?" commented the married woman of several seasons.

"And, honestly, I don't think I love him any more!"

"Well, pretend, then," remarked the older woman.

And as the young bride raised her face from the tear stained handkerchief in wonder she went on: "Nine-tenths of the world, my dear, is make believe. There are more actresses than those who go on the stage. Act in real life, and if you act well you will receive your meed of applause. Pretend that you care, play that you love him, and he must do the same. You may not either of you be any happier, but it will make the outer life so much easier. If one gives up the game, the other must. If both give up, life is a wreck, and while life remains there is hope that it may yet be as it used to be. But no matter how you feel, my dear, pretend, just pretend: fool yourself, if necessary, but pretend that you care. That's the thoroughbred of it, and the thoroughbred always wins out in the long end."

MAUD ROBINSON.

CHIC CONCEITS.

Hats and Furbelows For Up to Date Feminists.

Cording as a trimming is a great deal used on these evening wraps, as also are tucked ruffles. Loose and full the wrap must be, and the favorite length is ten inches from the floor.

What makes a lounge or a wrap of this kind is its style. It may be of the Dolly Varden, directoire or the severe tailor build, but a personal note there must be to give individuality to the whole.

On many of the large hats long ribbon strings are arranged at the back and under the chin. These ribbons when put on with studied carelessness and fastened coquettishly add an indescribable charm to a piquant face.

A pretty hat for morning wear is a high crowned round affair with a cabotier brim trimmed with ruched shaded ribbons and wings.

Very smart is the improved style of toreador hat, turned up abruptly at the side with a bandeau and bird, the crown trimmed with only a thick satin ruche.

Charming frocks for little girls are of white linen, gathered full into a linen yoke embroidered in scarlet or pale blue. These gowns are caught far below the waist with wide white leather or suede belts, below which are a couple of embroidered frills, and the little full sleeves are likewise gathered into bands of embroidered linen. Other little frocks of scarlet linen are fashioned in the same manner, and the same material is used in the construction of the Russian blouses for boys, trimmed with a double row of pearl buttons down the front and completed by a wide white linen collar.

Quite the latest modistic wrinkle is to have a touch of blue somewhere in the ruffle. Whether any lady has a blue rose in her hat, a fine line of blue about her collar and cuffs or a blue girdle or rosette on a pale gray or tan gown, the touch is there just the same.

A stunning hat is of black beaver of the lightest make, with rather a high crown and moderately broad brim. A long white feather passes around the crown and rests on the neck of the wearer. A large strass buckle under the brim lifts the hat slightly at one side in a very becoming line.

The cut shows a beautiful hat from Paris. It is created from black chiffon velvet. White ostrich feathers are arranged in coronet fashion about the crown, and a cloud of white chantilly lace lifts the hat at one side.

The smart petticoat for all occasions is the white muslin one of long ago, but this dainty piece of lingerie must be handmade to be really swell.

The new muslin skirts are all cut circular and fit in an exquisite fashion about the hips. At the bottom they usually have a wide ruffle reaching to the knee, on which is applied the daintiest of hand work.

Very new is a muslin petticoat with its ruffles cut in points at the bottom and buttonhole stitched. Under the points is a ruffle of fine swiss embroidery or coarse lace. Above the buttonholing to the depth of half a foot are embroidered French dots.

Very lovely is a skirt of white muslin with a dust ruffle of muslin edged with cluny lace. On the umbrella upper flounce are insertions of the cluny, headed top and bottom with the tiniest hand run pin tucks.

Medallions of lace elaborately embroidered all round in a dainty design are inset in many of the deep ruffles of the new petticoats.

Charming is the skirt illustrated. It is of white muslin with a dust ruffle trimmed with inch wide valenciennes lace. The upper flounce is buttonholed at the edge with an elaborate scallop. Above this is a dainty floral design done in mercerized cotton. The ruffle is headed with beading, through which wash ribbon is run and tied at intervals in small bows.

CHRISTMAS IDEAS.

Some Holiday Schemes Carried Out by Clever Hostesses.

Although Christmas is in every sense a family holiday, yet in many cases several families combine and have their children's tree together. This sort of Christmas afternoon party for children is becoming quite the vogue.

An original hostess planned a novel substitute for the ordinary tree. Out of excelsior stuffed into unbleached muslin sacking she contrived a figure of Santa Claus. She painted the face after the fashion of a rag doll, and she made the clothes out of cheap red and green flannel. The figure, which was life size, she fastened securely against the dining room wall. Tied to its trusty right rag arm was a little Christmas tree, on which were fixed the smallest gifts, while about the portly person of the good saint and in his pack were concealed the more substantial proofs of his generosity. Spruce boughs and cotton wool snow were disposed around his feet, with a most realistic effect, while the background was draped in green burlap and ornamented with spruce boughs, also covered with cotton wool snow. In fact, it looked as if Santa had just stepped into the dining room. Of course all the lights were out, and the sole decoration of the room consisted of little colored glass bulbs throwing their prismatic glow among ropes of evergreen. As the children crowded around the jovial saint, extracting presents from his pockets, his cap, and even, of all improbable places, his whiskers, the scene was one of uproarious merriment, and very little was left of him but a pile of excelsior when the youngsters had finished their search. Most of the presents bore comic remarks. Some of them were "April fool" gifts. On the whole, the novelty of the thing made it a great success.

At a Christmas week luncheon the piece de resistance appeared to be a huge plum pudding, and while the guests were wondering why this rather indigestible dainty was served at a lunch the hostess pulled a red ribbon tied to the sprig of holly in it, when, behold, the pudding opened in sections, revealing little souvenirs in the shape of Santa Claus bonbon boxes.

A FRENCH DRAWING ROOM.

Simple and Dainty Effects Gained With Little Expenditure.

The picture illustrates a French drawing room done in green and white. The woodwork, of course, is white, the walls being wainscoted and the frieze of green tapestry. The windows are of French design, swinging outward. The small panes are joined by silvered fret work. The tables are of mahogany, and the chairs are covered with green brocade. The outer drapery of the large window is green, and the inner is of white muslin with a pale green figure. The floors are of hardwood polished. From the ceiling hangs an ornate silver lamp with a green silk fringe.

Green and white form an ideal color scheme for a lightly furnished bedroom. Green is being used more and more in interior decoration. Ironwork is even tinted to match. This can easily be done by the amateur, for it only requires a thin wash of turpentine and green paint, which settles in the hollows and gives the artistic effect.

COLD WEATHER GARMENTS.

Some New Hats and the Latest Things in Fur.

Each November, when the New York horse show is over, we know for a certainty what we are to wear, for not until the leaders of style in this country have worn a gown, hat or wrap to this show does it become a fashion. The dressmakers and modistes of all kinds wait in fear and trembling for the verdict. Then the newspapers show the wonderful costumes, and the smaller fry hasten to imitate them more or less closely.

It must be understood that the styles shown in this place are those for handsome afternoon wear and evening attire, and the hats, wraps and gowns worn do not constitute by any means all the things that even a wealthy woman requires. But the shapes are the most important things. Are sleeves to be the hideous leg o' mutton or short or long and bishop as far as the fundamental shape is concerned? Are skirts to be habit backed or Victorian, and will hats be the abominable things of the last year? Those are the questions which have the deepest interest for the ordinary woman who wants to look as well as she can on a very small sum.

Naturally there were many shapes of hats to be seen, but they can be summed up in a short paragraph so far as form goes. The prime favorite is the turban shape. Now, this word turban covers a wide degree of latitude, for some turbans are close and with the brim almost perpendicular, while others have the brim turned but slightly, which gives the hat a wider shape. Some have the brim bent so that the shape becomes a very tricorne. One of this kind which was much admired at the show was of black velvet, the brim being laid in folds of velvet. The crown was outlined by a band of royal sable, with a tall plume of floating marabou, white and snowy and looking much like it. Perhaps I should have called this an aigret, but it is rather too soft and floating to be justly named aigret, which means a standing plume. Many of the turbans are entirely of fur of some becoming kind, with such trimmings as seems fitting to the milliner. One has a bunch of red velvet roses, and another has beautiful and artistic rosettes in natural colors. The soft green of the leaves and stems makes an artistic contrast with the dark fur of the hat, which is in cavalier shape, sharply turned up at the left side. There are many very handsome hats of beaver in many colors and shapes, but the shepherdess form with sweeping plumes seems to be best liked. The turban shapes are the oftenest seen and are more generally becoming. Besides, they may be made to match a gown or a fur neck piece.

And these fur pieces—how shall I give an adequate description of them without being a better scholar in all that pertains to natural history than I am? For it would seem that everything that ever walked on four feet has contributed to the list of furs used—Persian, seal, sable, ermine, mink, skunk, astrakhan, beaver, marten and last, but by no means least, chinchilla. This latter fur is sought for by the smart set, but it is by no means a durable fur. It is very soft and pretty.

There are long coats of seal and of all the other furs, but the great fad just now is to have a unique neck piece. There are very many more varieties of these than I can find place for, but the prevailing mode will be for four-in-hand ties of the close piled furs, edged in some cases by fur of another color or kind. Some have chenille fringes and others have rows of balls covered with the fur. The Victoria is a favorite shape. These Victorias have long stole fronts and are fastened near the collar with some suitable ornament. One very odd shape has a flat scarf hanging down to the waist on both sides, while two more start from the neck and meet, partly crossing at the waist line. This leaves the front open in a very deep vee. Many of the fur garments of this season have high storm collars. Some have none at all.

Long coats for automobiling are by natural selection mentioned here, although none was seen at the show. They are made of thick cloth lined with fur or some of the less expensive varieties, such as red fox and raccoon. Some have the whole outside of the coat of fur, with a storm collar of unreasonable dimensions. The short coats for street are made in several different styles, but the best are those where there is a medium storm collar, with revers (some have only one revers) of the same or a contrasting fur. Some are snug fitting, and others have a reefer front; others, again, are in blouse shapes.

OLIVE HARPER.

SHOT BY HER LOVER.

GIRL AND DYING MAN IN MAD RACE TO CHURCH.

Young Woman Desperately Tries to Save Her Assailant—Riddled by Bullets, She Drives to Far-Away City.

The Minneapolis (Minn.) correspondent of the Chicago American tells this touching story of a young woman's devotion. Driving, he says, madly against time and death, Katie Lubey, with the life blood streaming from three bullet wounds in her face, held the body of her dying sweetheart across her knees while she lashed the horse with swift strokes of the whip, and urged him faster and faster, that she might gain absolution for the man's sins from the priest, six miles away. She traveled over an unfamiliar country road at one o'clock Thursday morning, with the peaceful little community of Golden Valley sleeping behind her and the lights of the slumbering city of Minneapolis too far away to guide her.

The burning flame of religion in a girl, shot and grievously wounded by a rejected suitor, on a lonely country road, was such that, when the man turned the revolver upon himself and fell unconscious beside her, she snatched the reins from his almost lifeless fingers, and, moaning and sobbing with pain, she prayed to God for time and His guidance, that she might reach the priest and the doctors in the city that her sweetheart might have absolution and the kindly offices of a forgiving priest before he died.

The young girl, who is very beautiful, and the young man were both highly respected and belonged to prosperous farming folk near the village in which the two were born, and grew up together. They had been "going together" for five years, and were supposedly engaged.

Both were living in Minneapolis at the time of the attempt to end both their lives in the darkness and loneliness of the Golden Valley road.

Gaffney secured a position in another city, and went out to Golden Valley to bid his parents good-by. Arrived there, he found his sweetheart, and she accepted an invitation to ride back to town with him.

On the way, a declaration of his great love for her was made by the young man, who asked the girl to be his wife, and she refused him, because he was not yet able to support them both.

He drew a revolver and fired.

Three shots entered the cheek of the young girl, and a fourth pierced the temple of James Gaffney, and caused him to sink unconscious against the girl's shoulder.

With wondrous nerve and a heroic resolve, she reached for lines and whip, and, commanding the horse to his utmost speed, drove frantically on and on over the country road.

She knew not where she was going, except in a general way she knew where the city lay.

Her religous faith, firm and unswerving, told her to save her sweetheart's soul. Her former playmate must not die until the church's holy offices had given peace and forgiveness to his departing soul.

The girl was utterly unmindful of her own critical condition. She scarcely realized that the blood was pouring from her wounds and soaking her dress.

She was conscious only of one wild desire, and of a great dread.

When she reached the city limits she passed pedestrians, who turned to gaze in dismay at the panting horse, tearing by, and the voice of a girl form within the buggy sobbing and crying out inarticulately.

It was nearly three o'clock in the morning then, and but few people were on the streets, but those few stopped short, and then hastened after the buggy in an attempt to stop what they supposed was a runaway. But the girl drove on and on, and, continuing the mad pace, she reached the parish house of the priest of the Immaculate Conception church, which both young people had attended when in town.

The girl, when help was at hand, sank unconscious on the doorstep, and as the policeman and priest carried her in the body of James Gaffney, with the life spark nearly extinct, was found in the buggy at the curb.

Death ensue that morning to the young man, and the girl, so wonderfully heroic under the most trying ordeal, lies at the city's hospital unconscious and her death expected. But she won her race.

HUNTING REYNARD

INTERESTING SKETCH OF TRIALS AND DANGERS OF MR. FOX.

New Hampshire Farmers Use Gun and Hounds Against Him, But the Naturalist Finds Him an Interesting Study.

In the vicinity of my home in New Hampshire, foxes are among the commonest of the wild animals. No one ever hopes for their total extermination—the proximity of such a thing is too remote even to excite a hope. For my part, I am pleased that they are here, for I see them often, and I am seldom too busy to watch a fox. Sometimes they may be seen crossing the road at dusk, just moving shadows in the uncertain light, but more often I get a glimpse of one in broad daylight, while he is busy catching grasshoppers in some field.

My neighbors do not seem to enjoy seeing a fox quite so much as I do. They usually get their glimpses of him at night, after being awakened by the squawking of the hens, and often enough they see him leave the premises with one of their choicest broilers in his jaws.

The other day, a neighbor of mine declared his intention of going fox hunting on the following morning, and invited me to go with him. I accepted the invitation, and next day I met him in his yard at daylight. He had a gun himself, and offered to loan me one, but I declined with thanks, as I do not keep chickens, and therefore have no personal quarrel with the foxes. Behind the barn, four foxhounds were chained, and we went round to loose them.

We were scarcely out of the yard when the two old dogs struck out into the wet fields with noses to the ground, and we could see only their backs and tails, as they shot from place to place through the grass. Presently we entered a piece of woodland, and in less than ten minutes we heard the deep "yow-yow" of one of the old hounds as he struck the trail of a fox.

A fox, cunning as he is, has certain habits which frequently favor the hunter. For instance, when running before the hounds he often has a regular route, perhaps some miles in length, over which he leads the dogs over and over again. The hunter, seeing the dogs go by the first time, hot on Reynard's trail, can secrete himself near the path, knowing that there is a fair chance of getting the fox on his next round. To be sure, the crafty little creature is apt to vary his course more or less, but the experienced fox-hunter knows that there are certain points along the trail which are more likely to be visited than others, and of course he chooses one of these points for his "stand." This is just what my companion did. We saw the dogs go past below a ridge of high ground which overlooked a valley, and presently we were crouching behind the stump of a tree, waiting for the coming of the fox. Some 20 yards below us, a rock jutted out of the hillside, and my neighbor assured me that there was every probability that the enemy would come to that rock. He had already shot three foxes there from his present hiding place. The voices of the hounds sounded fainter and fainter, and finally died away in the distance, and the man with the gun said that it might be 20 minutes before we heard them again. At last we again heard the baying of the hounds, which had been almost round the hill, and which were now approaching us as fast as they could travel. I looked in the direction of the sound, and far away, in the field of light-colored, sunburnt grass, I caught a glimpse of red; it was a fox. It disappeared, and then I saw it again, coming straight in our direction. In its path there was a large tree-stump, and upon this it leaped, sat down and looked straight in our direction. I felt sure it did not see us, for neither of us had moved a muscle, and a fox, like most other wild animals, is comparatively indifferent to motionless objects. It did not seem the least uneasy, though it must have heard the dogs plainly enough. At last it turned its head towards them, for the instant and in that instant my companion brought his gun to his shoulder. The little animal was too far away for him to risk a shot at it, but it would be in range presently. It stood up on the stump and peered along under the left hand, down the hillside, pitching its rear so as to present a tuft of goldened a flag and tapered mass of fur.

New York Police Captain Says the Chemical Is More Effective Than a Revolver.

"Every man who is out late should carry a bottle of magnesia water with him," said Police Capt. Burdine to a New York Times reporter the other day. "There is no law against it, and it is far more effective than a pistol It isn't a concealed weapon, and is just as deadly, when it is not used as a medicine.

"Not long ago a young fellow whose business keeps him out late at night was carrying home with him one of these bottles. It was in the pocket of his raincoat. Head down, he was breasting the storm bound for his home port, when a woman rushed out of the darkness toward his right side.

"She begged for his protection. Her arms were extended, and she was coming at him like a football player ready to tackle. The young man was wise. He side-stepped, and thought of the bottle just in time to use it as a burly individual loomed to starboard, a blackjack in his hand.

"There was just time to hurl the bottle into the fellow's face. It exploded with a report that sounded like a bomb. The man, terribly cut and crying from the pain of the acid in his wounds, fled. The woman went with him.

"Later a man in terrible pain staggered into the station house, saying a dynamiter had hit him. It was 'Bill the Brute' We very much wanted him."

CRABS CAUSE A STAMPEDE

Panic Among Women in a Trolley Car When Lively Crustaceans Leave Basket.

A man who said he is a Staten Island official and ex-commodore of a yacht club there was the cause Thursday evening of a mild panic on a trolley car at Spring Lake, N. Y.

The car was crowded with women and children, and was going toward Asbury Park from Spring Lake, when several women suddenly began to scream. They mounted the seats and stood closely holding their skirts as they looked, horrified, at something on the floor.

WOMEN DRIVEN TO SCREAM.

The conductor, not knowing what had happened, signaled the motorman to stop, and when the car was brought to a standstill an investigation was made. The excited woman claimed that there were snakes and small alligators in the car.

The Staten Island man, who by his own admission had much embarrassed explained that when he boarded the car he carried a basket of live crabs he had caught at Shark river. He placed the basket under the seat where he sat, and did not know that the crabs had crawled from the basket until the young women began to scream. The crabs had clung to the iron of one or two of the women after they had climbed on the seats of the car.

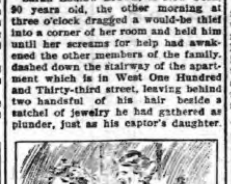
In Italy, 33 persons out of 10,000 die by the assassin's knife. About three-fifths of the male population carry stilettoes.

A WONDERFUL OLD WOMAN

At Age of Ninety She Tackles Big Burglar and Holds Him for Several Minutes.

Sarah Ludlow Brown, of New York, 90 years old, the other morning at three o'clock dragged a would-be thief into a corner of her room and held him until her screams for help had awakened the other members of the family, dashed down the stairway of the apartment which is in West One Hundred and Thirty-third street, leaving behind two handsful of his hair beside a satchel of jewelry he had gathered as plunder, just as his captor's daughter,



GRABBED BURGLAR'S HAIR.

Mrs. C. A. St. John, appeared in the doorway. After he had gone Mrs. Brown collapsed.

"I didn't think that I could do anything like that," she said last night. "Those poor old wrists don't look strong, do they. They have served their day well and I'm glad to have had a chance to show people the fact that merely because a woman is getting on in years doesn't prove she is useless. I awoke from a sound sleep, and saw a figure moving about the room. I knew whoever it was had no right to be there. I got up and grabbed his hair, holding his head down. I led him to a corner and waited for help. My voice is feeble and it was several minutes before any came. If I could only have steered him into a room and turned the key on him, I'd have felt that I'd have completed the task I had undertaken."

JOSEPH'S COAT FOR HORSE

Dyer's Pony in Many Colors Parades and Indignant Residents Protest in Vain.

"The purple cow" has been outdone by "the purple horse" in Glencoe, Ill. Otto Spinoza, proprietor of a dye house, has disturbed the sensibilities of residents by the purple, green, pink and other combinations of dyes with which he has "decorated" his white horse.

When the horse first appeared in a new color residents were amused, but as brilliant colors were added from time to time and the horse became less and less presentable, an attempt was made to have it kept from the streets. The police decided that the horse could appear in whatever tints its owner chose.

The village improvement society appointed a delegation to ask Spinoza to keep his horse less before the public. He refused, arguing that it made no difference whether the horse harmonized with the landscape or not, so long as it did its work faithfully and did not infringe upon the rights of others.

Danger in Tooth Brushes.

At a meeting of the board of guardians near Folkestone, England, one member moved that tooth brushes should be supplied to the children's cottage homes under their care. Tooth brushes, he said, were as necessary as soap and water, but the mayor got up and vigorously opposed the motion, arguing that the stumps of Englishmen was being ruined by such fads. Probably many present in the board room, he said, had not used a tooth brush during the greater part of their lives. The majority of the guardians were of the mayor's opinion, and the children are to continue without tooth brushes.

Hundred Times Around Globe.

Dr. J. Purcell Bribe has traveled a great deal. He is the ship's surgeon on the ocean steamer Cymric, and is on his eight hundred and nineteenth voyage. So far he has traveled something like 2,500,000 miles, equal to 100 times around the globe.

DIED A DEATH OF HORROR

Snake Charmer Thrusts Rattler in His Mouth and Allows Reptile to Bite His Tongue.

Alfred Thurston, a snake charmer, frog and glass eater, who was out of work and despondent, entered the barroom of the New York hotel at Niagara Falls, N. Y., the other day and in sight of a hundred persons placed the head of a diamond back rattlesnake in his mouth and allowed the reptile to bite his tongue. He died some hours afterward in great agony.

Thurston, when he entered the barroom, walked up to a man who had a glass of whisky in his hand.

"They say that is good for snake bites," he said, pointing to the glass. "It isn't good for much else."

"I have got a snake in here," continued Thurston. "Would you like to take your whisky as a medicine"

The great rattler coiled about the man's arm. He held its head near his face, and while the men looked on in horror the serpent struck at him. Thurston caught the snake by the neck. Then he turned to the men in the saloon and, with a bow, thrust the reptile into his mouth. The next instant he fell to the floor with a scream, and the snake, breaking away, writhed across the floor. A man killed it with an ax as Thurston lay screaming in agony. He was removed to the hospital, where he died.

EATS NOTHING BUT GRASS

Spaniard in New York Has Found His Food in Park for Months and Thrives on It.

Senor Eubebio Santos, a Spaniard living in Brooklyn, thrives on a diet of grass alone—just plain, ordinary grass, which he plucks in the park with his own hands. His only drink is water.

His story is corroborated by the people with whom he lives. He himself accentuated his tale by eating about a quart of fresh grass for the "gentlemen of the press" out of a two-quart soup tureen.

"Senor," he said in Spanish, talking a mouthful of what remained in the large tureen, "I am a Spaniard. I went to Cuba from Spain 15 years ago. Before I was long in the island my health gave out.

LIVES ON DIET OF GRASS.

"'Starve yourself,' said my physician. 'Eat potatoes,' said he; 'eat potatoes.' I grew sick of potatoes. Then 'chew grass,' said the doctor; 'nice clean grass, and drink water.'

"So for six months my diet has been nothing but grass. Now I am in perfect physical condition. I never ail, I feel strong, and warm, and fresh, and I have forgotten what it is to have a headache."

Church Built of One Tree.

A Baptist church in Santa Rosa, Cal., capable of seating 200 persons, was built entirely of timber sawed out of a single redwood tree. Timbers, weather boarding and inner sheathing are all of wood, there being no plaster, bricks or mortar about it. The roofing, too, is made of shingles sawed from the same tree, and after it was all finished there were 60,000 shingles left.

Painless Tooth Extraction.

Tooth-pulling is a very simple and painless process in China. The dentist rubs a secret powder on the gum over the affected tooth, and, after about five minutes, the patient is told to sneeze. The tooth then falls out. Many attempts have been made by foreign dentists to ascertain the nature of this powder, but none have ever succeeded in doing so.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

For the second time the national amateur golf championship has been captured by a Chicago golfer, born, bred and reared. In the ten years that the national event has been competed Chicago has divided the championship evenly with representatives of the east, but in the first three years that Chicago won its representatives were not "native sons," but were young men who had learned their earlier golfing lessons on the other side of the Atlantic. In 1903, however, Louis N. James, of the Onwentsia club, brought to that city the first championship gained by a local American born player, and now H. Chandler Egan has repeated the trick by defeating Frederick Herreshoff, the young Vermont champion, in the recent national tournament over the links of the Baltusrol club, at Short Hills, N. J. Chandler Egan's career in golf has been one of the most brilliant of any player in the west. He was 21 years old the day after he won the western championship. In 1901 he played in his first schoolboy match at Exmoor and won it, later taking part in eight different matches and winning six of them. In June of that year he won the preparatory school championship from his cousin, Walter, and later won the president's cup at the club. His second year of golf in 1902 was his busiest and, for a young player, one marked with some surprising successes. Out of 43 matches played in that year he won and halved two. The young Exmoor player first made his appearance in a national tournament in July of 1902 and was defeated by Eben Byers. In 1903 Chandler defeated Byers in one of the 37 matches in which he took part. Out of the 37 he won 28, losing seven and halving two. Among his victories was the championship of Harvard, won May 15. He met with a number of defeats, however, but was not to be heard discouraged. Golfers who have followed the young player declare that the secret of his success lies in his coolness in taking defeat. August 17 he was beaten at Wheaton by Norman F. Hunter, who made the phenomenal score of 71, 4 under par. Later play for a return match at Glen View and defeated Hunter. He again played in the national tournament at Nassau and for the second time was put out. This time Williams, of Philadelphia, defeated him. This year the champion has taken part in 30 matches, winning 24. April 11 he won the cup from Findley Douglas at Lakewood, N. J. July 6 the young star broke the record for the Midlothian course by making the double round in 158 in play against bogey, 13 better than the colonel. July 22 he beat the record for the Onwentsia course in 156. On July 25 he reduced the same record to 153 and won the qualifying round, tieing the Ravisloe and Onwentsia cups at the close of the tournament. Then he won the western championship from his cousin Walter with a record of 79 for 18 holes and 146 for the 36, and next captured the national championship.

It is generally admitted that Frank Selee, manager of the Chicago National league team, and formerly with the Boston club, is one of the shrewdest traders in the baseball business. The best trade he ever made was when he got rid of "Billy" Nash to the Philadelphia club, getting "Billy" Hamilton instead. The Boston club was badly in need of a good batsman to lead off and an outfielder. Hamilton was the man wanted. How to get him was the thing. Selee had a pet hunting dog, Cap, Nash cared for the good work of the Boston champions. "You must have a great leader to win the championship and have him on the field," Selee would say, until the Quaker papers were continually quoting Selee on that subject, and selling Nash a heap of credit. The Quakers had a fine string of players, but no leader. Selee had discovered that "Jimmie" Collins could play third base and decided to play him there the next season, so a bet was proposed that the Quakers might make a deal for the great captain. This was what Selee was playing for, and it didn't take long for him to consider a trade, and finally make a deal, Nash for Hamilton. This was the first piece of work on Selee's part I ever heard of, as it developed a championship team. The following year Hamilton proved a success, leading off, being a hitter, a waiter and king of baserunners, while Selee got rid of the replaced Nash at third, electrified the country with his brilliant all-round playing.

Frank G. Selee.

Discussion of the pitching records made by Gus Weyhing and others, has brought to light a remarkable story, which gives "Old Hoss" Radbourne the call over all the twirlers. Business Manager Frank C. Bancroft, of Cincinnati, was manager of the old Providence National League club in 1884, when it won the pennant. Shortly before the end of the season the late Charlie Sweeney, pitcher, while intoxicated, abused Bancroft and was suspended. The team, besides being in a rut, was sixth in team batting. Sweeney pleaded to die-fore I was long in the island my health gave out. Bancroft and Sweeney's boss, I will pay you both salaries," said Bancroft to Radbourne. "I'll try it. If I throw my arm out!" he declared. Radbourne then pitched 29 straight games in about five weeks, 18 of which he won.

BABY BOY IN SEWER.

MOTHER CONSIDERS RESCUE DIRECT WORK OF GOD.

Fell Through Inlet Into the Mud and Stayed There All Night—Head Not Covered—Found 19 Hours Later.

Carl, the two years and three months old child of Fred Natzke disappeared from its home, No. 461 Division street, Chicago, at 7:30 p. m. on Thursday, and was lost to view until the following afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, when Henry Schuette and Alexander Crowe rescued it from its 19 hours' imprisonment in a sewer inlet on Winchester avenue, near West Division street.

"Folled down, mamma. Folled down, mamma," was all little Carl could say when brought home, yet his quick cuddling to his mother's breast and his trembling as he uttered the words, told eloquently his terrible experience.

Through all the dark Thursday night and through the long rainy hours of Friday the baby had lain two feet beneath the street level, imprisoned in a hole 18 by 12 inches. His legs and most of his body had been in mud and slime for all that time. He was semiconscious when found, and his feeble cries were what attracted Schuette's attention. After a vigorous rubbing, administration of restoratives and a meal of bread and milk, the little fellow was physically scarcely the worse for his exposure, although nervous and distressed. Mrs. Natzke, who is declared to be profoundly religious, insisted that the recovery of her baby was a miracle.

"This is the direct work of God," she said, as she tenderly bent over the child. "It is as plain a miracle as ever has been worked, for—so baby who was not watched directly over by God could have lived where Carl was found. My husband and I prayed all Thursday night, even while we searched, and our baby was given back to us in answer to that prayer."

"Mamma, mamma," suddenly cried Carl, hiding his face against his mother's arm and sobbing.

"He is utterly unstrung, and his nervous system quite out of order as a result of the experience," explained Mrs. Natzke. She soothed the baby with kisses and a few words of lullaby, and he grew quiet again.

"While I called in a doctor when I got Carl back," she went on, "I only did it because the neighbors insisted. For six years there has not been a doctor in the house; we believe that God will care for us and our little ones in sickness; I am not a Christian scientist; I am simply a Christian. If God would keep my baby safe for 19 hours He certainly would see that no ill-effects came to him. My faith is deep and is wonderfully rewarded."

While Carl is too young to give any account whatever of his accident his mother explains that he must have wandered out of the back gate Thursday evening just after supper. Half a block down the lane is Winchester avenue, and the young rover headed for the open street. On reaching it he must have gone toward Division street. Thirty feet from the lane exit, close beside the curb, is the opening of the sewer, and into this the baby fell feet first. He slipped down until his head was well out of sight, and there he stuck.

"We must have passed over his head three or four times while searching for him," said Mrs. Natzke.

When Schuette passed the inlet Friday he heard a noise which he thought was caused by a cat. He leaned down to investigate, and almost at once saw the head of the baby. He called for help, and Crowe responded. With a crowbar the latter pried off the cover of the manhole, while the inlet and a few seconds the small, mud-stained form had been lifted to the street.

Fish Story from Delaware.

From Seaford, Delaware, comes a story which rivals to a pike swallowing many fish, so many pikes persons may swallow the yarn. While cleaning a large pike Mrs. John Harris, a resident of the town, was surprised to find when she cut it open another pike of ordinary size in its stomach. After finishing cleaning and salting the first pike, she then started to clean the second, and was still further amazed when she discovered another pike in the second one's stomach. She then proceeded to cut open the third one, and was still more astonished to find a minnow in its stomach with a small hook in its mouth. She called her husband to look at the four fish, and he declared he had never seen or heard of so many fish being in the stomach of one fish. The pike was caught in Hearn's mill pond, near here, a place noted for large pike.

Manager Woolston Opposes Joining the N. J. League.

WANTS HOME GAMES

Not Prepared As Yet to Announce Probable Lineup—Cregan a Likely Player.

Manager Charles Woolston, of the Plainfield A. C., does not favor the idea of forming a baseball league for teams in North New Jersey and having Plainfield represented. He says that local cranks want Saturday games here and any attempt to play away on that day would meet with general disapproval. During the summer months nearly all of the local shops closed at noon, giving the employes an opportunity to attend the ball games. This patronage is of too much consequence to ignore according to Mr. Woolston and if he has his way there will be games every Saturday in Plainfield. The Northern Jersey League is about formed, there being seven of the desired eight teams in the organization. The promoters are now looking for another aggregation and Plainfield was considered favorable. However, there does not seem to be a disposition to have the city represented.

Regarding the makeup of the local team, Mr. Woolston has nothing to say as yet. About the first of the year he hopes to make it public. He guarantees to have a first-class nine and is now working toward that end. Beisel, who was signed by Hoboken ownard the end of last season as a pitcher, and who gave some good exhibitions, is now training at the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

There is good reason to believe that "Pete" Cregan, the last season favorite, will again be seen wearing a Plainfield A. C. uniform next year.

MILITARY BILL'S DEFEAT DEPLORED BY GOVERNOR

MR. MURPHY POINTS OUT LOSS TO NEW JERSEY.

Adjutant General S. Heber Brienstall, in submitting his annual report to Gov. Murphy takes occasion to complain of the fate of the military bill of last winter which was so bitterly attacked in the House of Assembly by Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, and others, and so riddled that when it came to a vote it was completely routed.

The measure was to place the troops of New Jersey in line with the Dick law of the United States Government by which Federal aid is gotten for State troops. Its provisions to make the National Guard similar in equipment, armament and discipline to that of the regular army. The failure of the bill to pass at the sessions of the last Legislature was a great surprise to General Breinstall, and he takes occasion to say that a new code is being prepared for submission to the coming Legislature and he hopes that the measure will go through.

Complimenting the officers of the Guard, and stating that they serve the State well and often at a personal sacrifice, General Breinstall declares that many good officers drop out of the Guard owing to the continual expense of purchasing officers uniforms and he repeats his last year's recommendation that the State pay at least a portion of the cost of uniforms now paid entirely by officers.

General Breinstall concludes his report by paying a tribute to the pleasant relations existing between him and Governor Murphy.

Accompanying the report of Adjutant General Breinstall are the reports of the various departments of the National Guard and the State Naval Reserve.

Lieut. Colonel Charles W. Parker, Assistant Adjutant General, shows in his report on enrollment and drafting, that there are 3,154 line officers and enlisted men, and 44 staff officers in the active militia service of the State. As to the possibility of draft there are 472,082 able bodied men capable of doing military duty in the State.

Surgeon General J. D. McGill reports everything doing well in his department, and Inspector General Joseph W. Congdon declares that there has been a notable improvement in the morale of the State troops.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. VanDyke, of East Fifth street, spent Sunday at the home of their daughter, Mrs. W. D. Bauer, of Somerville.

NOGI IN HOSPITAL.

Japanese Commander at Port Arthur Hors de Combat.

GREAT NAVAL FIGHT IS IMMINENT.

Rojestvensky's Fleet Approaching Sumdraga Is Being Watched For by Kamimura With Strong Cruiser Squadron.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—It is evident that Port Arthur is near to its fall, as Pigeon mountain, in whose base the besiegers have penetrated, is directly over the city itself, the environs nestling on its eastern base and the dockyard, where the Russian fleet was sunk, being on its western base. It is in the rear of the great Etseshan fortshan, Wangtai, Ehrlung, Sungshu and Keekwan forts, that have so long held the besiegers at bay.

If the Japanese are able to hold this new position and bring up reenforcements they can drive home their wedge immediately and take all the forts in the rear. As it is they now hold new positions that place the whole Russian line in peril.

A special from Japanese headquarters at Port Arthur says that General Nogi was severely wounded by rifle bullets in the arm and leg while directing operations at Two Hundred and Three Meter Hill.

Every cable from the far east is expected to bring news of the great sea fight which is imminent between the great Baltic fleet, under Admiral Rojestvensky, and the Japanese fleet, under Vice Admiral Kamimura. The Russian fleet rounded South Africa more than a week ago and was steaming north when Kamimura, in command of a strong fleet of cruisers and torpedo boats, sailed out from Port Arthur to give battle.

On the same day twenty Russian ships which went by way of the Suez canal under Rear Admiral Von Folkersham were reported above Jibutil, off the western coast of Africa.

Off the coast of China a report comes from Peking that Admiral Togo, in command of the main Japanese fleet, is waiting for the Russians. Should Kamimura meet and defeat one of the Russian fleets he will sail on to meet the second. Should he be defeated by the first of the enemy's ships he will retreat to Togo, and the united Japanese fleet will rush out to give battle.

Two places are suggested for the meeting between the Russians and Japanese—one at Minicoy, off the Indian coast, and the other at Sunda strait, off the coast of Sumatra.

The route the Russians expected to take, so it is said, is through the strait of Sunda.

The belief here is general that the meeting of the formidable fleets will mean the destruction of one or the other.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says that the Emperor Nicholas will leave on Thursday for Minsk and the Don Cossacks, returning on Jan. 5.

Antiwar Speeches at St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 28.—At the Decembrist banquet here numerous antiwar speeches were made, and a motion was carried by acclamation advocating an immediate cessation of the war. Writing For Dr. Chadwick.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Sheriff Hogan of Cuyahoga county has arrived here last night with the affidavit necessary to expect the requisition of Governor Herrick of Ohio for a warrant authorizing him to take Dr. Leroy S. Chadwick out of this state to Cleveland to answer the charge of complicity in forging the name of Andrew Carnegie to the note for $5,000,000 alleged to have been used as security by his wife, Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick. Tomorrow or Friday morning he will arrest Dr. Chadwick on arrival of the Pretoria, on which the Cleveland medico is a passenger.

Mrs. Kurz Released.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 28.—After investigating the death of Anton Mayer, aged forty, a baker, who lived in the village of East River, near Guilford, Coroner Mix decided that there was not sufficient evidence to indicate foul play. Mrs. Kurz, who had been housekeeper for Mayer and who had been held as a witness in the case, was ordered released from custody. Mayer died last Wednesday of a bullet wound in the head. It is now believed that he was despondent and committed suicide.

WAR ON THE TRUSTS

Attorney General Opens on Paper Combination.

NEWSPAPER MEN MADE COMPLAINT

Injunction Sought in Minnesota Courts Against General Paper Company, Charging Monopolies In Restraint of Trade.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 28.—Attorney General Moody for the United States, through United States District Attorney Haupt and Frank B. Kellogg and James M. Beck, special assistant attorneys general of the United States, late yesterday filed a petition in the United States district court, in which he makes the General Paper company the principal defendant and twenty-five other paper companies throughout the states of Wisconsin and Michigan party defendants in a suit to enjoin them and restrain them from doing business though the General Paper company in the sales agent in violation of the provisions of sections one and two of the act of congress approved July 2, entitled "an act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

The petition alleges that the defendants entered into an agreement to combine and control the sale of the product of the different companies through the General Paper company in that the General Paper company registered prices, sales and shipments and territory for the sale of the same and after deducting operating expenses of the General Paper company divided the surplus among the members of the corporation.

The petition recites that the General Paper company was organized under the laws of Wisconsin, May 26, 1900, with a capital stock of $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares, which were distributed among and are now held by certain of the defendants named and that under Rear Admiral Von Folkersham were reported above Jibutil, off the western coast of Africa.

CLOSING UP THE YEAR

City Council Transacted Routine Matters Last Night.

NUMEROUS REPORTS

Commissioners of Assessment Resign to Avoid Technicalities—Final Session Next Friday.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company gave notice at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last Friday, that the several new hydrants ordered by the city have been located. Townsend Rushmore, James F. Buckle and Robert A. Mastin, commissioners of assessments, offered their resignations and asked that the city accept the same immediately. This action is taken to avoid any technicalities that might arise by their continuing in office until next year. New commissioners will be appointed.

The Public Service Corporation gave notice that the light ordered for East Second street, near Washington, had been located. The bonds of Constables John Conroy and Peter V. Weaver were received and after approval will be filed. Street Commissioner Garven reported that from November 28 to December 19 the sewer permits were granted. It was reported by Corporation Counsel Marsh that the city tax deed had been recorded in the office of the county Registrar of Deeds and on Mr. Daniel's motion the papers were also filed with the City Clerk.

Regarding the claim of John Ross, through his counsel, C. J. McNabb, Esq., for $55, the cost of a pane of glass which he alleges was broken in his building corner of North and Watchung avenues by a city employe, Mr. Daniel said that the committee had been unable to find proof of the claim and he recommended that the bill be not paid and that the petitioner be notified to that effect.

Mr. Daniel offered a resolution calling for an appropriation of $75 to purchase a "strong box" which has been placed in the safe in the collector's office. This resolution was adopted as was also another providing for an appropriation of $38.88 to make certain alterations in plumbing in the city offices and one for $39.65 to paint the crematory, recently purchased by the city on DeKalb avenue. Still another resolution offered by Mr. Daniel provided for the city borrowing $4,000 in anticipance of the collection of taxes, the same to be transferred to the fire fund. In connection with this resolution another one offered by the same member resulted in the transfer of $4,000 from the general fund to the fire fund to meet certain extra expenses incurred during the year. These resolutions were adopted.

Frank DeW. Randolph, chairman of the police committee, stated that an American flag had been purchased at an expense of $30 and that under the supervision of the police it would be displayed every day on the city flag pole.

Mr. Gleak asked that the petition in the hands of the street committee which have not been reported upon, be referred to the street committee for 1905. This was done.

Mr. Murphy reported on the matter concerning the action of the Public Service Corporation in not allowing the city free gas after January 1, and stated that unofficially he had reasonable assurances from Mr. Causebrook, agent for the corporation, that he free gas might be continued at the fire engine houses for the purpose of heating water for the firemen. Mr. Murphy also moved that the electric light petitioned for on Charlotte road, between Woodland and Belvidere avenues, be granted, and the other members concurred.

After the bills were paid and the petition of the Plainfield Water Supply Company was referred to the next Common Council, an adjournment was taken to Friday night, December 30, when the reports for the year will be presented.

In response to the petition of residents on East Front street in the vicinity of Watchung avenue, an arc light is to be located at that corner. This action was taken at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night on a motion offered by Mr. Murphy. The Public Service Corporation offered the light for $100 a year. The petition was granted. Mr. Murphy stated that the location of an arc light would do away with a number of incandescent lights in the vicinity of that corner, saving the city $62, thus making the arc light cost but $38 additional. The new arc light will be put in position within a few days.

Clerks Surprise Mr. Randolph.

As a mark of appreciation and esteem, the clerks in L. W. Randolph's pharmacy on West Front street, presented him with a beautiful lamp as a Christmas present. The presentation was made Saturday night as the close of the day's work, and Mr. Randolph heartily thanked each one for the useful gift.

Half a Million For Cornell.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The commission sent six weeks ago to Florence, Italy, for the signatures of witnesses to the will of the late Professor Willard Fiske, who left Cornell university $500,000, has returned. Proof of the will is to be taken immediately. All indications of a contest have disappeared.

Special Committee Makes Adverse Report to Council.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Randolph Road Site Not Suitable—Advocates Permanent Park Commission.

The special Park Committee, appointed by Mayor Otis L. Jenkins, in its report Friday declared that the Randolph road site is not suitable, and further that it would be inadvisable at this time to make any purchase for the purpose. The report in full is as follows:

"To the Honorable The Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

"Gentlemen: The committee, consisting of certain members of the Council and other citizens, appointed for the purpose of considering the Mayor's suggestion of a public park, or of public parks, in the City of Plainfield, and to consider, in particular, the acquisition by the city of certain property in the neighborhood of Randolph road, concerning which certain statements and estimates were submitted, now report to your Honorable Body that they have quite fully and deliberately considered the whole subject; and, after giving due attention to the undoubted advantages which would be afforded to our citizens by a liberal public-park system, they have reached the following conclusions:

"First. Your committee are of the opinion that at the present time it is not wise to incur the expense attending the purchase and care of property or properties suitable for park purposes. They find that the only way in which a park scheme could be carried out liberally would be by making a considerable addition to the public indebtedness of the city; and this step they do not see the way to recommend at the present time.

"Second. In respect of the particular property in the neighborhood of Randolph road, your committee concur that it is not sufficiently well adapted to the purpose for which it was recommended; and, moreover, in case it were acquired for park purposes, as proposed, a very large sum would have to be expended in order to develop and utilize it. It is conceded that it would be of great advantage to health and property in this neighborhood if the swamp lands could be drained and converted into a small park, and if the party, or parties, owning this land could be persuaded to donate it to the city, on condition that the city should do away with the swamp and lay out a public park within a reasonable time, the committee would commend such action to the serious consideration of the Common Council.

"Third. The Mayor-elect, who is a member of your committee, has brought to our attention the fact that in the Southwest portion of our boundaries the city owns approximately fifty acres of land that in the course of time could be more or less availed of for park purposes. Your committee would not favor any large expenditure at the present time on this street, but would respectfully suggest that, with an eye toward future improvements, it might now be well to expend some small sum—perhaps a few hundreds of dollars—in grading, enclosing and planting. Trees and shrubs of an interesting character at no great cost might be set out in a judicious way, and the basis laid for future improvements of a more important character. The small park on Eighth street, near Park avenue, might also be made more sightly by a little more attention and a trifling increase in the amount annually appropriated for its care.

"Fourth. Your committee also realize that in the long future the city may be able to afford and maintain parks at two or three points, and in different sections of the city. It appears to be a subject which should be considered, in various aspects, well in advance of any definite action to be taken. In adopting any positive policy, legal and financial conditions should be fully understood; the location of the park or parks should be well chosen; and any steps taken should have the general approval of citizens and tax-payers.

"With a view to all this, it might not be amiss that the city should have the benefit of a continuous committee in the character of a Park Commission to consider the general subject and to report on suitable occasions to the Mayor and Common Council. This commission should not, however, have the power to involve the city in any considerable expense, nor to commit it to the purchase of any particular properties. The expenditures of the commission, if it should be carefully limited, and its functions should consist chiefly of planning such things in relation to park improvement as would promise benefit to the public, and in submitting its ascertainments and recommendations to the constituted authorities.

"By order of the Committee,

"A. Gilbert."

FRENCH COURT FREES MASSE AND MORANNE

WERE CONVICTED OF PERJURY IN THE FAIR WILL CASE.

A cable from Paris states that the Court of Criminal Appeals has reversed the lower court's decision condemning Masse and Moranne to three years' imprisonment for perjury in the Fair will case. The Appellate Court sustains the prisoners' pleas, as the Fair case was compromised without trial in the United States, their alleged false testimony was not used in the American courts, and therefore worked no injury.

Masse and Moranne were the bicyclists who were soaring at the time of the automobile accident which resulted in the death of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, of San Francisco. The men said they saw the Fairs thrown out, but other testimony showed that they were not there when the accident happened, but so represented in the hope of getting a free trip to America. They were brought to New York by Chandler & Bloteman, the irw firm retained by the Neisser, of New Market.

—During the rendition of the Christmas music at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning the organ went wrong and it was necessary to send for a workman to repair the difficulty.

THE DAY IN THE CHURCHES

Local Congregations Observe the Saviour's Nativity.

THE PROGRAMMES

Sunday-School Carols and Recitations	Departments Sing and Reader Appropriate Exercises.

Christmas Day was one of gladness in the churches of Plainfield and North Plainfield, the congregations observing the nativity with programmes of sacred songs and appropriate services. Large attendances were everywhere apparent and the edifices were made still more in keeping with the occasion by the use of holly, greens and other decorations. The Sunday-school departments held separate exercises in the afternoon at which the members sang carols and recited.

In addition to the special musical service in the morning, and the regular Sunday-school session in the afternoon, the annual Sunday-school Christmas exercises at Trinity church Sunday evening made the celebration of Christ's nativity at that church as attractive and an interesting one. At the morning service the regular chorus choir was assisted in the rendition of several Christmas anthems by Arthur Smith, bass; W. C. Leek and T. R. VanZandt, tenors, while Kenneth Stuart accompanied on the violin. In the evening an orchestra furnished the music. The members of the orchestra were Kenneth Stuart, violin; Elmer Wheeler, flute; Miss Hazel Martin, piano; Mr. Gaston, violin; E. D. Young, cornet; Mr. Binninger, violin.

In accordance with the annual custom, the evening service was in charge of the Sunday-school, and the children celebrated the occasion by appropriate carols and recitations. Members of both the junior and primary departments took part in the interesting service. This was the programme of recitations and songs, which in addition to a number of Christmas carols, comprised the programme Sunday evening: Recitation, "Welcome to Christmas," Beatrice Tier; recitation, "Merry Christmas," Helen Leitheusser; recitation, "The Christmas Child," Helen Woolley; song by primary department, "Little Child of Love;" recitation, "Little Stockings," Elsie Tier; exercise, "Christmas Chimes," Ella Van Arsdale, Nellie McAfee, Ella Porter, Margaret Hope, Madeline Blair and Helen Saffren; recitation, "Signs of Christmas," Ralph Martin; song by beginners' department, "Jesus is His Name;" recitation, "What I Can Do," Gretchen VanZandt; recitation, "Just For a Day.'," Milford McAfee; exercise, "The Infant Jesus," Mildred Breimer, Anna Vail, Lulu Trewis, Maud McAfee and Adelaide Cole; song by primary department, "The Christmas Tree;" song, "Alaska. Christmas Carolers," Harold Dunham; solo, "While I Lay Asleeping," Helen Roberts. In addition to this programme, which was rendered by the primary departments, there was a song by the members of the junior department, and three recitations. Those who spoke were Ella Case, Gertrude Schlief and Gertrude Enander. The exercises by these departments were in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier and Mrs. L. B. Soefield.

The church was artistically decorated for the occasion in red and green. Hopes of evergreen were festooned from the chandeliers through the entire length of the church, while palms and potted plants were banked on the platform. From the center of each chandelier was hung a red paper bell, which combined with other decorations in red, added to the color and brilliancy of the scene. Harry C. VanEmburgh was in charge of the decorations, assisted by a committee.

Exercises appropriate to the Christmas season characterized the regular session of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church Sunday afternoon. A special programme of Christmas carols was rendered by the scholars, and an address by the pastor, Rev. D. L. Goodrich, added much to the interest of the exercises. Mr. Goodrich took for his subject the golden text 3 "His Name Shall Be Called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." He took for his illustration a star which was set in a background of greens over the pulpit, likening the top point to Jesus and the other five to the titles mentioned in the golden text. In addition to the anthems, Mr. Shubert rendered two 'cello selections, and ten children of the primary department gave an exercise entitled "The Christmas Story." There was a solo by J. H. Barnes.

The exercises at Hope chapel were in charge of Superintendent Henry G. Squires and Assistant Superintendent I. W. Travell. The singing was in charge of William N. Runyon and the following members of the school gave recitations: Ruth Kenny, Agnes McIntis, Mary Loudon, Jessie Dunean, Jean Muir, Margaret Harris, Alice Rimmer, William Richmond, Ida Lenden, Helen Bockfollow, Helen Taylor, Lydia Nelson, Arthur Dawe, Lillie Shirley, Mabel Hunter, Anna Warnock, Laura Dawe, Jude Snyder, Harriet March, Helen Smith, Ruben Edmonds, Charles Kregar, Eva Geneva, Margaret Overland, Clara Weber, Daisy Cowley, Russel Coe, Grace Taylor, Marcus Bradford and Agnes Vetter. An address was given by Leander M. Lovell and a special collection was taken for the benefit of Indian missions. The chapel was appropriately decorated with Christmas greens.

In the Monroe Avenue church the decorations were elaborate, Christmas trees and roping being used with good effect. Superintendent Walter McGee was in charge and the following programme, in addition to the singing of carols, was rendered: Solos, Miss Mae Brower, Miss Avis Aldrich, Miss Weston and Otto Moore; recitations, Sadie Brower, Florence Brower, Mary Stafford, Marion Praed, of the junior department; Helen Davenport, Alfred Cornwall, Marion Harris, Harold Wyckoff, Minnie Ayers, of the primary department. In the kindergarten department an address of welcome was given by Alfred Martin and recitations were given by Marion Stine, Eloise Brown, Dorothy Theirs, Dorothy Manning, Margery Theirs and Lena Cornwall.

The feature of the programme at Warren chapel Sunday-school's exercises were four addresses given by Ernest R. Ackerman, Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Superintendents F. H. Andrews on the following subjects: "Bethlehem," "The Manger Christ," "The Babe" and "The Heavenly Host." Exercises were given by the primary department in charge of Mrs. Elizabeth Ulrich. At the morning and evening services Pastor McKelvey delivered Christmas sermons and special music was rendered which will be repeated next Sunday.

The Christmas celebration in St. Mary's church began with a mass in the convent at midnight, while others took place in the church hourly between 5:30 and 10:30 in the morning. The 5:30 and 10:30 masses were solemn high and were largely attended. Rev. Father Charles Boone, of Washington, D. C., former Plainfielder, was the celebrant at the 5:30 with Rev. Father Delehanty, deacon, and Father Frederici, sub-deacon. Father Delehanty celebrated at the 10:30 with Father Boone, deacon, and Father Frederict, sub-deacon. The Christmas sermon was preached by Rev. Father Egan and the decorations and music were enjoyable features.

The midnight mass was observed by the members of St. Joseph's church, with Rev. Father Miller as celebrant. Others were held hourly from 5:30 until 10:30 during the morning. The special choir rendered a musical programme with Mrs. A. E. LaPorte as the organ.

"The Prince of Peace," a Christmas mission service, was the feature of the Christmas celebration at the First Presbyterian Sunday-school Sunday afternoon. Anthems appropriate to the Christmas season, several responsive readings comprised the programme, which was in full as follows: Responsive reading; invocation; hymn, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear;" responsive reading; hymn, "Ring the Bells, the Christmas Bells;" The Apostles' Creed; hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun;" address by the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring; offering; prayer. Appropriate to the subject of the service Mr. Herring's address was on the topic, "The Prince of Peace," and was a particularly interesting and instructive talk. Following the prayer, the foreign mission calendars were distributed, and in addition six books were presented to the library by Miss Josephine Petrie, a former member of the school, now a home missionary worker.

Special services held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday morning included Christmas selections by the choir under the leadership of Richard Randolph and Miss Hattie Mitchell, organist, and a sermon by the pastor, Rev. E. N. Jackson.

The services at the First Baptist church Sunday morning included a quintuble organ and violin, Howard Case and Miss Florence C. Wohlfers; anthem, "Break Forth Into Joy," Matthews, by the choir; invocation, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss; hymn, congregation; psalm, responsively; anthem, "Hark What Mean Those Holy Voices," Stroh, by the choir; Scripture lesson; anthem, "The Night Song of Bethlehem," Dudley Buck, by the choir; Scripture lesson; prayer, by the choir; Dr. J. A. Chambliss; sentence, "Holy Night," Barnby, by the choir; sermon by the pastor; offertory, "Immanuel," Thayer, by the choir; hymn, choir and congregation; benediction, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes; organ postlude, "Toccata," Bach. The church was decorated with greens and flowers with a large illuminated star over the organ.

The Sunday school service in the afternoon at the First Baptist church was in accordance with the programme previously published. There were exercises by the choir and the solo work was by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; George W. Smith, tenor; William Holmes, baritone. There was no evening service at this church.

Special selections by the quartette choir at the First M. E. church Sunday morning included "Zion Awake," and four selections from "The First Christmas," by Barnby. In the evening "Rejoice in the Lord," by Hollins, and "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," by Mivis, were rendered. The choir comprised Mrs. Thomas Mac Donald, soprano; Mrs. Wentworth, contralto; Charles L. Lewis, bass, and H. D. Harrison, tenor. Miss Utter was at the organ. At both services the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, delivered appropriate sermons. The pulpit platform was attractively decorated with greens and potted plants.

It was planned to have the Sunday-school exercises at Mt. Olive Baptist church in the evening, but on account of the storm this programme was postponed to Thursday night, when the annual festival will be held. Pastor Jackson preached in the evening on the "Significance of Christmas Day."

Christmas was celebrated at the Holy Cross church Sunday morning and evening by special music by the regular church choir. The music was in charge of J. Edmund Skiff, the organist and choirmaster.

"The Divine Mission of Childhood" was the subject of Rev. A. C. Nicker son's address at the morning service at All Souls' church Sunday. In the afternoon appropriate services were held at which time carols and anthems were sung, and the Christmas story was taught to the Sunday-school.

A special chorus choir of mixed voices was the Christmas attraction at the Y. M. C. A. morning Sunday afternoon. A Christmas programme was rendered in a pleasing manner to a large audience. Frank MacDonald, of Chester, Pa., was the speaker of the afternoon, and his address on an appropriate topic was an interesting one.

Rev. G. M. Shost, of Scotch Plains, formerly pastor of the Baptist church there, filled the pulpit at the Rescue Mission, Sunday morning, and conducted the special services appropriate to the Christmas season.

In the afternoon in the Vincent chapel the First M. E. church Sunday-school held special services, including the singing of carols by the main school and primary department. James B. Joy, superintendent, was in charge.

Early Christmas services were held at the Swedish Pilgrim church Sunday morning at 5:45, there being a large attendance of members of the church and congregation. The edifice was beautified with greens and a Christmas tree. Several special selections were rendered by the choir. The sermon on "The Birth of Christ," was delivered by the pastor, Rev. L. T. Lindholm. During the rest of the day the regular services were held as usual.

The services at Faith chapel Sunday morning and evening were appropriate to Christmastide and included some special anthems by the choir under the direction of William A. Conger, organist. Two interesting sermons were preached by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Mason. There were no services at the chapel in the afternoon, the Sunday-school uniting with the First Baptist church school in a special service.

Special Christmas services were held at the Calvary Baptist church Sunday night, with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. Jesse Wallace. The offerings given to the pastor's step-son, George H. Jones; who has been partially blind for two years.

Christmas carols and appropriate exercises characterized the Sunday-school celebration at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Singing was the main feature, several anthems being well rendered. All were accompanied by an orchestra led by G. W. V. May. Those who took part were Mary Hale, G. E. Hall, Arline Brown, while in addition there were two elaborate exercises and seven carols. The committee in charge of the exercises consisted of Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Elmira Runyon, Miss Mary Clark, Miss F. G. Hawkins, Joseph M. Hawkins, Aaron Thompson, Jr., and G. E. Hall.

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mont., recommends Ely's Cream Balm. He says: "I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. church, Helena, Mont.

After using Ely's Cream Balm six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh.—Joseph Stewart, Grand Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Balm does not irritate or cause sneezing. Sold by druggists at 50 cents or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York.

Chase Postponed.

Owing to the heavy snow drifts yesterday, the Christmas chase of the Watchung Hunt Club was necessarily postponed. The riders intend to hold a chase on Saturday, which promises to be largely attended.

Henry Daboll, of East Sixth street, will leave early in January for South Carolina, where he will remain during the rest of the winter.

BOROUGH POLICEMEN BATTLE WITH NEGROES

Marshals Flack and Klein Badly Cut and Stabbed in Early Morning Encounter.

FOUR PRISONERS TAKEN

CROWD IN ANGRY MOOD FOLLOWS THEM TO THE JAIL.

Trouble Narrowly Averted Yesterday When the Assailants Are Removed to Somerville—Victims Said to be Resting Easily.

Two policemen badly cut and slashed, a third suffering from kicks on the head and body and four colored men in the Somerville jail, is the aftermath of a battle which took place on Somerset street shortly before 1 o'clock Sunday morning between Chief George Weiss, Marshals Joseph Flack and Walter Smalley and Special Marshal J. William Klein on one side, and three partially intoxicated Plainfield negroes on the other. Klein is in Muhlenberg Hospital badly slashed about the face, arms and body, Flack is at his home on Codington avenue with an ugly stab wound in the back below the shoulder and Smalley was temporarily disabled by the beating he received. The condition of the first two was looked upon as serious all day Sunday but Tuesday they were reported as doing nicely and with excellent chances for recovery unless blood poisoning developed.

The colored men in custody are Whit Tunstall, twenty-three years old, of 603 South Second street, who has been employed at Regetti's brick yard at Dunellen; James Tems, twenty-five years old, of 214 Muhlenberg place, until one week ago employed as a molder at Pond's; Samuel Hunt, twenty-three years old, of 334 East Third street, a molder at Pond's and Thomas Henderson, a barber, of 214 Plainfield avenue. Henderson is being held as a witness as he had nothing to do with the battle in which the policemen were hurt, although he had been one hour previous to it. The trio was landed in jail after an immense crowd had followed them up Somerset street and yelled and heeted all the way. A conference held Monday afternoon between Prosecutor Griggs and Mayor Newton B. Smalley resulted in papers being made out for their removal to Somerville, together with Henderen, who was captured on the city side of the brook by Patrolman Peter Hamilton as he was running away from the scene of the trouble.

Surrounded by a cordon of borough officials, the prisoners were taken up Somerset street, through Park and North avenues, to the Central station for the 3:31 train to Somerville. Continued reports that both Klein and Flack were dead had caused intense feeling against the negroes and by the time the group reached Front street, an immense throng was in the rear giving vents to shouts of "String them up," "lynch them" and similar cries. Chief Kiely was notified and with a number of his patrolmen re-inforce the North Plainfield police, while he himself hurried to the station and cleared one part of the waiting room in which to hold the men until train time.

When the crowd reached the platform it had grown to nearly 1,000 men, women and children and ills between whites and blacks were frequent. The prisoners were taken into the building and policemen were stationed at the doors with orders to allow no one to get in. When the train drew up, the pushing, yelling crowd was cleared back by patrolmen and the colored men were huddled to seats in a forward car. The yelling then became worse than ever and the excitement for the time being was at a high pitch.

The trouble which led to the fight began late on Christmas eve when gangs of white and colored men were roaming up Somerset street singing and yelling. The particular crowd was first noticed pounding on the door of Boice's Hotel, the place being closed, and Marshal Flack was given orders by Chief Weiss to drive them away. He did so but when the crowd got a short distance away, they yelled back all manner of taunts at him and then hurried on toward the city line. At Somerset street and Craig place they encountered Smalley and transferred their yelling to him with the added challenge that "the policemen didn't live who could arrest them." Smalley held of Hunt but was sent down with a terrific kick in the groin and Hunt, Tems and Tunstall started dancing on his face. Klein, who was in citizen's clothes and was on duty, was in the vicinity and went to Smalley's aid. Tems and Tunstall now razors and razors and wielding the weapons sprang upon him and he was blinded by blood spurting from gashes in his face. In the meantime, Smalley managed to blow his whistle for help and Flack responding sprang into the affray with a rush that made it a three round event, the negroes fighting with the desperation of maniacs.

The crowd which kept gathering about offered no helping hand, being frightened by the display of sharp blades, but Flack blew his whistle for assistance and Chief Weiss joined the policemen. Tems was finally overpowered and Flack and Smalley were putting handcuffs on him when Tunstall stole up behind and drove a long bladed knife into Flack's back. He made another jab at Weiss but the chief ducked through a shouted warning and escaped. He in turn struck Tunstall on the head with the butt of his revolver, knocking him to the dazed heap. Tems was rendered partially conscious and was turned over to Lieutenant Campbell, of the fire department, who had been summoned by telephone. Tunstall was then overpowered and Hunt was the last to give in, swinging his fists around until a blow from a club knocked him down.

Klein was removed to fire headquarters and Flack to police headquarters, Dr. Hughes attending them at first. Klein was sent to Muhlenberg Hospital in the ambulance and Flack was taken to his home on Codington avenue. Both lost a great amount of blood and were in a greatly weakened state. The knife thrust Flack received was in a danger spot and the fact that he had on a heavy overcoat and underclothing is all that saved his life.

It is said that the colored men went over into North Plainfield with the express intention of "cleaning out the borough cops." They were on Park avenue until the local saloons closed and were spoken to by Patrolman Hamilton because of their boisterousness. They were in Somerset street saloons until they closed and it was in the effort to get more liquor that led to the disturbance about Boice's Hotel.

EIGHTY BOYS GIVEN CHRISTMAS DINNER

Y. M. C. A. BOYS' DEPARTMENT PROVIDED REPAST FOR POOR BOYS.

Eighty poor boys, with eager, expectant faces sat down to a Christmas dinner at the Y. M. C. A. Monday which was provided by the members of the boys' department. It was in every way a successful affair and one which contrary to other years, was conducted entirely by the boys' department independently of the Women's Auxiliary.

Under the direction of the boys' work committee, composed of O. S. Rogers, Dr. N. H. Prebasco, Phillip Suffern, Lindsay Best and Dr. Charles Davis, the boys' cabinet, and a specially appointed committee provided a dinner which touched the right spot in the hearts of the young urchins. Those who waited and assisted in providing the dinner were Walter Caldwell, Russell Morris, Harold Robins, Stanley Robins, Arthur Humble, Stricker Hoagland, Fred Armstrong and William Nicolwitz.

This was the menu which was served to eighty deserving boys, chosen by the Organized Aid Society: Soup, turkey, celery, vegetables, cranberries, bread and butter, ice cream, cake and coffee.

It Was a Jolly Party.

An enjoyable family gathering on Christmas was that of A. L. Force and family at the home of his sister, Mrs. L. K. Prescott, of VanBuren street, Brooklyn, where gifts were exchanged and a bountiful Christmas dinner served. Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Hardy as host and hostess made the visit a very pleasant and a long to be remembered one. Mr. Hardy, as an entertainer, is certainly "a rare old bird."

CONSTABLES IN A WRANGLE

Argument Over Writ of Attachment Holds Up Trucks.

CASE COMPLICATED

Goods of Persian Wall Paper Co. Make Trouble for Officials, But Amuse a Crowd.

While Constables Peter Weaver and John Manley argued for three hours in front of the Persian Wall Paper Company Saturday afternoon over a five dollar writ of attachment, two moving vans stood out in the cold waiting for the word to start for Bloomfield with goods sold to Herman & Wise, of that city, by the local concern. Whenever the truckmen attempted to start at the word from Weaver, Manley put himself at the horses' heads and interferred with their progress. When finally William Newcorn, who represented the A. Schaffi Molding Company, of New York, advan ced the sum of five dollars, the trucks were allowed to proceed and the large crowd which had gathered to view the dispute, dispersed

Herman & Wise, of Bloomfield, recently purchased from Morris Viener and Bro. damaged goods of the Persian Wall Paper Company, but not paid, after a levy had been made by Constable Weaver for the Schaffi Molding Company, on an execution issued from Justice Huff's court. It was decided to wait until the levy was removed Saturdy, to settle the case. The trucks, two four-horse affairs, were sent out Saturday to deliver the goods to the purchasers, and when the amounts of the levies, which incided $35 for Miss Lottie Hepner, an employe of the Wall Paper Company, and several other small amounts, were collected, there was still plenty of goods left in the store, and the trucks were as liberty to proceed to their destination.

At this stage of the game, Constable Manley arrived with a writ of attachment for the amount of five dollars and a few odd cents for Henry Werenga. He insisted upon levying on the goods packed in the vans, and though he was assured that the amount on the store was valuable, he was immovable, and it was only when William Newcorn advanced the payment in cash that the constable was satisfied, and the vans started for Bloomfield. Francis J. Blats represented Miss Hepner in the case and William G. DeMeza was the attorney for Henry Wierenga.

WHITTIER PUPILS MAKE HIT IN ENTERTAINMENT

KORONATION OF KRIS KRINGLE WENT OFF WITHOUT A HITCH FRIDAY.

"The Koronation of King Kris Kringle," which was given Friday at Franklin Hall by the pupils of the Whittier School, was indeed the crowning success of Whittier School entertainments. Elaborate and varied in xytle, the short musical sketch was carried through without a hitch, and all took their parts in a highly creditable manner.

The story of the play led up to the koronation of Santa Claus in a delightful way, combining interesting solos, choruses and recitations in the simple, though complete plot. There were in all nineteen solos by members of the school, in addition to four choruses and a number of recitations and dialogues. The climax of the entertainment was when representatives of all nationalities entered and proclaimed Kris Kringle, king. The words were spoken distinctly, and the costumes were features of the production.

Miss Irene Dunham, gotten up as a colored mamie, made a great hit in a humorous song. The two sailor lads, Herbert Grant and Charles Leisenaux, were also good. The Fairy Queen, Miss Marion Mann, was decidedly queenly, gowned in a glittering costume, and waving a shining wand. The part of Kris Kringle was well taken by Roy Woodhull. Others who took part in the entertainment were Monroe Staats, Russel Abbott, William P. Westphal, LeRoy Woodhull, Charles Leisenaux, Herbert Grant, Guten Fountain, Earl Oakley, John Yoos, Elmer Botan, John Rittenhouse, Harold Miller, John Hopewell, and the Misses Ella Case, Marion Mann, Beatrice Alpaugh, Vera Dunham, Ethel VanWinkle, Helen Rogers, Lillian Crumkite, Frances Rittenhouse and Florence Dickerson.

Great credit is due to the teachers who instructed in the programme, and to Miss Addie Parker Jackson and Charles L. Lewis, who had charge of the training in elocution and in music.

Miss Isabel Scarborough, of Adams, Mass., is spending the holidays with her sister, Mrs. George E. Wann, of 417 West Fourth street.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EXERCISES

Christmas Programmes in the Various Grades.

MUSIC A FEATURE

Interesting Exercises in the Plainfield High School—Attractions in Other Departments.

Characterized by the usual merry-making and festivities appropriate to the occasion, the Christmas exercises at the public schools on Friday were at once significant of the Christmas spirit, and decidedly interesting from the spectator's point of view. In all departments, the surroundings were brightened by appropriate decorations, while good will was in evidence everywhere. Throughout all the buildings in the city, red and green decorations were prevalent, and the Christmas atmosphere made itself felt in many ways. In some of the departments presents were exchanged, while in the Plainfield High School, the customary humorous rivalry between the seniors and juniors existed.

During part of the morning in all of the schools exercises appropriate to Christmas were held, either at assembly, in the form of a regular programme, or in the class rooms. The programme at the Plainfield High School was an elaborate one, and was well rendered in every detail. The singing, in which the pupils had been trained by Charles L. Lewis, was characterized by the usual excellence which marks High School performances, and the programme was arranged with care and taste. The following was the programme in full:

Ira W. Travell.
Principal of P. H. S.

Selection by the High School and Mandolin Club.

Presentation of prizes to the winners of events in the annual fall meeting for track athletics.

Presentation of prizes to the winners of the girls' Tennis tournament.

Anthem by the school—"Prepare ye the Way of the Lord."

Recitation—Milton's "Hymn on the Nativity".....Lillian Snodgrass.

Recitation—Phoebe's Cary's narrative poem, "The Christmas Sheaf".....

Recitation—"A Christmas Hymn," written by Alfred Domett.....

.....Rosanna B. Love

Recitation—"The Annunciation," an extract from "Ben Hur," written by Lew Wallace....Emily L. Winant

Anthem by school—"Christians, Awake! Salute the Happy Morn," by Schneckr.

Presentation of a large photograph of the Capitol at Washington, given by the students of the school, presentation by Martin R. Stutsman; acceptance by Gertrude L. Hunter.

Presentation of the two large colored photographs, (a) St. Mark's Cathedral, Venice; (b) Cathedral at Milan, presentation by Chester H. Briggs; acceptance by Edith L. Jarvis.

Anthem by the school—"The First Christmas," Barnaby.

Address—Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass.

School song—"The Plainfield High School."

At the conclusion of this programme, the platform was given up to the senior class and the usual good natured bits at the juniors took up the time until 1:30, when the class of '06 retaliated by inviting the seniors to a bountiful repast in one of the class rooms. The class of 1905 presented their gifts to the juniors in a novel and interesting manner. In accordance with the old precedent, the gifts were applicable to the various characteristics of the receivers and were accompanied by short verses of poetry.

Howard H. Gratz, costumed to resemble as near as possible a snow ball, had charge of the ceremonies, and in a suit of white cotton made a picturesque snow man. He rolled up on the platform, what appeared to be a large snow ball, and from within this mass of coldness, were drawn one by one the presents for the juniors. Each was gotten up like a small snow ball. The bits were clever and gave rise to much merriment. The teachers were not remembered with presents this year as on former occasions, but a large school banner was presented from the class to the school and intrusted to the teachers. An appropriate poem, significant of this presentation, was written and read by Miss Lillian Snodgrass.

At the Franklin School the exercises were held in the assembly hall, and were for the most part musical. Christmas anthems, all of which were sung in a delightful manner, combined with appropriate Scripture reading and the services impressive as well as interesting. This was the programme in full:

Processional—"Hail, All Hail the King."

Hymn—"While Shepherds Watched".....School

Scripture—The Christmas Story.

Though the limited space at the Bryant School building prevented a large attendance, the programme at that school was one of the best in the city, and was rendered in a style remarkable when the age of the pupils is considered. Music and recitations composed the programme which displayed great taste on the part of those who had charge of the training in the singing and speaking. This was the programme:

Processional—"Hail, All Hail the King."

Carol—"Christ Our King."

School repeat Luke 2:8-14.

Carol—"Glad Praises Sing."

by Schuyler Line as Santa Claus, and ten pupils from second and third grades.

Carol—"The Wintry Days Have Come Again."

Song—"It was the Eve of Christmas."

Carol—"Beautiful Star of Faith and Love."

Carol—"Ring On, Ye Merry, Merry Bells."

A large number of friends and relatives of the pupils attended the exercises at the Irving School Friday, which consisted largely of music. There were several recitations in addition to the carols, which were rendered in a pleasing manner. This was the programme:

Opening Carol—"Glad Praises Sing".....School

In consideration of the fact that there is no assembly hall at the Lincoln School, the pupils did not have any regular programme in celebration of Christmas. The exercises were brief and were confined to the various class rooms. The Christmas story was told and the significance of the day explained. In the kindergarten the children had a Christmas tree, from which a great deal of pleasure was derived.

Carrier Purchases Mail Wagon.

Nelson Peterson, the recently appointed letter-carrier for the new rural free delivery route, has placed his order for a mail wagon with a firm in Indiana. This firm makes one the best wagons for the mail business and it has the approval of the postal authorities. A similar wagon is used by Carrier Lambert on another out of the free delivery routes here. Mr. Peterson will secure a horse in a few days so that everything will be in readiness on Monday, January 16, the fixed for starting this route.

Pretty Love Story in Which Venerable Democratic Nominee for Vice President Plays the Role of Star.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

News comes from Shepherdstown, W. Va., that ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, the democratic vice presidential candidate, will in the fall marry Mrs. Katherine Reynolds, widow of Dr. John Reynolds, of Shepherdstown.

Mrs. Reynolds is 70 years old, while ex-Senator Davis is 80.

There is an interesting story back of the approaching wedding. Many years ago, when Henry G. Davis was a brakeman on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, he became a suitor for the hand of Miss Katherine Cushwa, whose family was one of the most prominent in Washington county, Md.

Miss Cushwa was a pronounced beauty and was the acknowledged belle in the section in which she lived.

Mrs. Reynolds and young Davis met for the first time at a dance at a country house, and frequently thereafter he became her escort.

The friendship thus begun speedily ripened into love. Davis proposed and the young woman was willing, but her parents could not reconcile themselves to the idea of their beautiful and accomplished daughter marrying a poor railroad brakeman, and the young man was sent on his way with a broken heart.

Young Davis disappeared, to rise rapidly in the railroad service, until he became the richest and most powerful citizen in his state, while Miss Cushwa became the bride of Dr. John Reynolds, a prominent physician of Shepherdstown, her former "flame" also in the course of time taking unto himself a life partner in a distant part of the state.

It was not until many years afterward that the two old sweethearts came together again, one as a widower and the other as a widow. The old spark rekindled, with the result that there will be a notable wedding at the quaint old town of Shepherdstown some time in the month of October, so the gossips say.

Mrs. Reynolds is remarkably well preserved, and for a half century or more has been social leader of Shepherdstown. She is the mother of two grown-up children, and the grandmother of a bald dozen interesting boys and girls. She lives in a beautiful old-fashioned house, within a stone's throw of the Potomac, and many distinguished men and women have enjoyed her hospitality.

Henry G. Davis does not look his 80 years. To the casual observer he would appear to be not more than 65. He is more than six feet tall, erect and straight as in the days of his youth. His shoulders are square. He is well muscled. He has a springy heel and toe walk. There is not the slightest evidence of any loss of mental or bodily vigor in this choice of the democrats for vice president.

His face features are regular and bold. His nose is aquiline. His eyes gray and sharply penetrating, but withal kindly in expression and set wide apart. His face is not deeply furrowed, though fine wrinkles appear about the eyes. His beard and mustache of snowy whiteness are features that do much to denote advanced age than any other.

The whole bearing of the man denotes an alert, vigorous interest in life and the matters that appeal to him for action. He is not a dreamer, if his looks and conversation prove anything. But he is of a kind disposition. He laughs easily. He is the soul of good nature, and he is essentially democratic.

But before closing this story it is only fair to say that Mr. Davis emphatically denies that he is going to wed Mrs. Reynolds and states, moreover, that the publication of the foregoing romance has caused him intense pain.

The Queer Folks of Albany.

In Morse's American geography, published in 1805, a copy of which may be seen at the St. Louis exposition, appears the following unique description: "Albany is situated on the west bank of the Hudson river. This city, in 1797, contained 1,363 buildings and 6,021 inhabitants, many of whom are in the Gothic style, with their gable ends toward the street."

The longest continuous stairway in the world is that which leads to the tower of the Philadelphia city hall. It has 598 steps.

FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY

Chapter of English History Relating to the Title of the Prince of Wales.

Why is the heir presumptive to the British throne called the Prince of Wales? A long chapter of English history is epitomized in the title, says the New York Tribune.

Wales was nominally a principality of the kingdom when Edward I., also called Edward the Crusader, returned from the Holy Land, but it had its own line of princes and was practically independent. The Norman rulers of England had several times invaded the country, but the sturdy Welshmen had not been subdued. Edward's chief ambition after his experience in foreign wars was the subjugation of Wales and Scotland. In pursuing that ambition he began with Wales.

Llewellyn, the contemporary prince, had been captive in his youth in the hands of Edward's father, Henry III. Later he was a supporter of Simon de Montfort, who was the real ruler of England for several years during the latter part of Henry's reign, and was overthrown and slain by Edward at the battle of Eyesham. After that battle, however, Llewellyn promised fealthy to Henry, before Edward set out on his crusade. Edward summoned him as a vassal to his coronation in August, 1274, but he refused to attend because not guaranteed safe conduct. Several other summonses were treated in like manner, but Edward, who was crafty, instead of at once making war, resorted to strategy.

Llewellyn was betrothed to Eleanora, the young daughter of De Montfort, a first cousin of the king. Eleanora's mother died on the continent in 1275, and in the following year she sailed for Wales with her brother Almeric. Edward intercepted the vessel off the Scilly islands and carried his two cousins to London. Llewllyn was served with another summons, but he again refused to obey, though he boldly demanded the release of his promised bride. Edward then declared his lands forfeited and within a year led an army into Wales. He overran the country, secured the support of Llewellyn's brother David, who had a grievance about his patrimony, and stripped Llewellyn of everything but his title and the limited sovereignty of Snowden and the Isle of Anglesey. Under penalty of a greater tribute than he could hope to pay, Eleanora was surrendered to him, and they were married before Edward and his court at Worcester in 1278.

Five years later, however, Llewellyn was again in revolt. Edward led a large army into Wales, but was not conspicuously successful until Llewellyn was killed in a skirmish. His head was sent to Edward, who placed it on the walls of the tower of London, crowned with an ivy wreath, in mockery of a prediction of Merlin that when the English money should become circular, the prince of Wales should be crowned in London."

Edward soon reduced the country after Llewellyn's death, and he established his residence for a time at Caernarvon castle to personally conduct the pacification of the country. He had his wife with him, the heroic woman who had saved his life in Palestine by sucking a wound inflicted by the poisoned dagger of an assassin. At Caernarvon on April 25, 1284, was born his son and heir, Edward of Caernarvon, eventually the weak and contemptible Edward II. With a view to knocking the last prop from under the foundations of the native line of princes, the king commanded that the infant Edward should have the title of Prince of Wales. And so, after all, was fulfilled the prophecy of Merlin, the seer.

A Turtle with a History.

At Fillmore, a hamlet near Bellefonte, Pa., Clyde Gallup, a farmer, while walking over his farm accidentally stumbled over a large land turtle. On examining it he found on its shell artistically carved the names of Cale H. Kepheart and Ellis H. Williams, with the date of 1850. The turtle was then put on its pins as the day it was put on, more than half a century ago, when the now old gentlemen were young men together. All these years the turtle has presumably been slowly crawling around in that vicinity, Mr. Kepheart, although almost eighty years of age, is still well and hearty and is able to do a fair day's work on his large farm, which is one of the best in the county. The finding of the turtle has brought to his mind many interesting historical events. Ellas H. Williams, whose name also appears on the hard shell of the turtle, left Centre county years ago and is now one of the oldest conductors on a Pullman palace car train running between Chicago and Denver.

Tale of a Millionaire.

Some years ago a very wealthy man in England got it into his head that he had lost all his money. To pacify him his son and heir said they had saved the remnants of the estate and were able to offer him employment as a clerk. At $7.50 a week he worked as happy as a prince for the last 20 years of his life. When he died his estate amounted to nearly $15,000,000.

Seagull a Weatherwise Bird.

The seagull makes a splendid living barometer. If a convoy of seagulls fly seaward early in the morning sailors and fishermen know that the day will be fine and the wind fair, but if the birds keep inland—though there be no haze hanging out toward the sea to denote unpleasant weather—interested folk know that the elements will be unfavorable.—Lahore Tribune.

Contemplates Erection of $80,000 Structure on West Front Street.

L. L. Manning, of West Front street, is contemplating the erection of a $80,000 building at West Front street and Central avenue. If the building is put up the first floor will be used for stores and the upper floors for flats. Mr. Manning is getting estimates on the work and if he decides to build the structure will be one of the finest in the city and an ornament to that part of the town. The building would occupy almost the entire corner on Front street and Central avenue.

EXERCISES IN SCHOOLS

Borough Pupils Observe the Christmas Festival.

GIFT FOR PRINCIPAL

Programme in High School and Lower Grades Interesting Alike to Teachers and Pupils.

Exercises appropriate to Christmastide were observed by both the senior and primary departments of the North Plainfield High School Thursday. The former took place at noon and were in charge of Superintendent Wightman.

Carols were sung by the entire gathering and the following pupils gave recitations: Mary Neal, Frank Webster, Marion Overton and Otto Meeck. A number that was not scheduled was the presentation of a brass desk set to Superintendent Wightman by Miss Margaret Hallock in behalf of the High School pupils. Mr. Sanders, of the manual training school, presented a gift to the High School department in behalf of his pupils. At the conclusion of the programme the seniors held their Christmas tree exercises at which a great deal of good-natured jollity was exchanged.

The pupils of Miss Carpenter's class presented her with an ornamental clock as a token of their esteem while the various classes were exchanging greeting.

The exercises of the primary department were conducted this afternoon with the following pupils giving recitations: Harry Steiner, Georgs Haurand, Wm. Risberg, Paul James, Lillian Risberg, Roy Love, Jean Dumont, Elsa Haffner, Edson Day, Annie James, Herbert Reynolds, Horace Schmeyer, Elmer Johnson and Ella Miller. An exercise was given by the girls of Grade 2 A and carols were sung.

GROUPS OF ATHLETES TO CONTEST FOR PRIZE

Y. M. C. A. JUNIORS WILL COMPETE IN ATHLETICS AND GYMNASTICS.

The group contests in athletics and gymnastics at the Y. M. C. A. junior department will begin on Saturday morning, January 9, and will be continued every week for three or four months. This form of contest was one of the original ideas which Physical Director Henckel introduced, and it will undoubtedly prove a successful event.

The members of the gymnasium squad are divided into groups under the direction of a captain. There will be four of these groups in the junior department, and the contests will include athletics, gymnastics and games. The record of points will be kept from week to week, and at the end of the contests, the winning group will be presented with an appropriate prize. Among the events which will be included in the contest will be apparatus work, potato races, twenty-yard dash, high jump, broad jump, ten-lap run, basketball game, battle-ball game, Indian club races, rope climb and others.

At the head of the four groups in the junior department, will be the following members of the class: Walter Caldwell, Percy Woodruff, Charles Line and Norman Loughrin. The same sort of contest will be held in the senior department, though the plans have not yet been definitely considered. The affair will probably be postponed until after the "costume entertainment" which will be given by the seniors in February.

JERSEY CENTRAL AFTER CKET SCALPERS"

OFFICIALS CLAIM THAT THE ROAD HAS LOST MUCH BY THE PRACTICE.

Jersey Central officials are on the alert to prevent the abuse of monthly commutation tickets and it is said that a man and a woman who have been endeavoring to do business with several persons who are alleged to make a business of hiring out these tickets really are in the employ of the company, but this cannot be confirmed. Strict watch is being kept and a number of tickets presented by others than the owners have been lifted by conductors and brakemen.

The company claims that it has lost thousands of dollars by the practice, which is not carried on today on the scale that it was a few years ago. To stop the abuse is is reported that the New Jersey Central has in view a new form of monthly ticket. The commutation ticket is hired out for fifty cents by speculators, which is one half the price of an excursion ticket to New York.

PHYSICAL ORGANIZATION

Y.M.C.A.Men Form Directors' Society of Northern N. J.

PLANS FOR CONTESTS

Annual Gymnastic Event to Take Place in This City in April—Athletics at Newark.

For the first time in the history of the New Jersey Y. M. C. A. physical departments, the physical directors met Wednesday afternoon at Newark and effected the organization of the Physical Directors' Society of Northern New Jersey. There were eight representatives at the meeting which marked the beginning of the society, whose object is the promotion of athletic and gymnastic competition between the physical departments of the northern part of the State.

George Henckel, physical director of the Montclair association and brother of Fred A. Henckel, of the local department, was elected president of the society. Physical Director Roth, of Passaic, was appointed vice president and Physical Director Borden, of New Brunswick, was chosen secretary and treasurer.

Though the associations of northern New Jersey have met for many years in athletic and gymnastic championship contests, there has been the need of some organized management, and the meeting yesterday was one of utmost importance to Y. M. C. A. athletic history. These are the associations which will be represented in the organization: Montclair, Orange, Passaic, New Brunswick, Morristown, Hudson City, Jersey City, Summit, Rahway, Newark, Central Branch, of Jersey City, and Plainfield.

In addition to the initial steps in the organization of the society, the plans were entered into for the annual athletic and gymnastic inter-association contests. It was decided to hold the former at Newark in February, though the exact date has not been yet settled upon. The events in this contest which will be open to all the above named associations will be these: Shot put, high jump, one mile relay, fence vault for height, high dive and fifteen yard dash.

On behalf of the local association, Physical Director Henckel, of this city, invited the associations of the northern part of the State to compete in the local gymnasium in the annual gymnastic contest in April. The invitation was accepted and Mr. Henckel will have entire charge of this feature of the physical work of the State.

AMUSEMENTS.

Ethel Barrymore has scored the triumph of her career in "Sunday," the new play in which she is now appearing at the Hudson Theatre, New York. She has surpassed all her previous records for New York business, and she has succeeded also in making the heroine of the picturesque melodrama, whose love story is so charmingly and convincingly told, take place by the side of the most popular of her previous stage creations. "Sunday," as portrayed by Miss Barrymore appeals in the strongest way to her audiences, being a very human and winsome girl of the far Western type; breezy, slangy, courageous and ready for every emergency that arises, but with all as sweet and wholesome a young creature as ever stepped out of a border romance. Miss Barrymore employs her exquisite art most effectively in presenting this character and she deserves the great triumph she is achieving in it.

LITERARY.

The Harrison Fisher Picture "Will He Dare?" which adorns the front cover of Madame for December, will excite universal admiration because of the beauty of design and exquisite of harmony of colors. It is the handsomest of the art covers used on Madame during the year.

Case Dismissed.

The Northeastern Telephone case, which has been in the courts for some time, has been concluded finally, and was dismissed by Justice Huff Wednesday afternoon. William McMahon and Loughy McDonald, employes of the Northeastern Telephone Company, were the defendants and Mrs Theodore Glaser, though illness prevented her from appearing at the trial yesterday, was the plaintiff. She was represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., while H. C. Runyon appeared for the defendants.

Deacon Conway Denies a Report.

"Deacon" Spencer Conway asks that the report in circulation that he is going to be married this winter be denied. He says that he would not think of marrying within a year and six months of the time of the death of his first wife, and he has several months yet before that time expires.

Coachmen's Ball Well Attended.

The annual ball of the Coachman's Association was given in Saengerbund Hall, Thursday, with one of the largest crowds of the season in attendance. The financial results are to be given to Edward Ryan, a member of the organization who has been ill for a long time.

Bitten by a Dog.

George Pope, of 124 Manning avenue, was attacked and bitten by a dog while walking along West Seventh street, Thursday. The animal fastened its teeth in his knee and inflicted a wound that had to be cauterised by Dr. Mattison. The police were informed of the occurrence and are looking up the owner of the canine.

Cough Mixture Nearly Fatal.

The thoughtless act of Mrs. Giovana, of 430 Washington avenue, in giving her seven-months-old son an overdose of patent cough medicine, nearly resulted in the death of the child last week. Only the prompt action of Dr. Gesswein saved the child's life and he is now out of danger.

Entertainment Postponed.

Because of Judge William N. Runyon's incapacitation, the production of "Trial by Justice" by members of Perseverance lodge, has been indefinitely postponed.

Jan. 1: Our Goals For 1906.—Phil. iii, 12-16.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

No other man in all the Christian ages could give with better grace the exhortation with which this lesson closes, for none has made a better record than he in this way of life.

The Christian has a definite aim and should never forget it. His goal is not the same as that of the multitudes around him. So he cannot do as the common run of men do. He must do some things that others cannot, and some things they do he must never perform. God has given us in Jesus a call to a peculiar and privileged life. The goal of all earthly effort for us is to attain to the full development of the Christian life within and without. God is working in us by His spirit continually the things of His kingdom. He gives new ideas and thrills us with high and holy desires and energizes us with a strength for doing otherwise unknown. As He works within us, we are to work out in practical life all we see and feel of the truth and beauty of holiness and righteousness. We are to grow until we attain the measure of the stature of the full grown manhood of sons of God.

The encouraging feature of this development lies in the fact that we have a trainer who has made success. The model is known and has promised us His help in every way possible. In fact, all His business is to bring us to His measure. We have capacity for such development. Our surroundings are well adapted to such effort on our part. Every consideration of well being urges to effort on our part to reach the standard set before us.

Paul says that he has not yet attained all there is for him to have, but he presses on that he may lay hold on that for which he was laid hold on by Christ. No advancement is possible unless we recognize that we have not got as far as we can go. When we see this clearly we will need to guard ourselves from discouragement on account of our lack of progress. This would cut the nerve of all effort.

Then we come to the next item in character training, determined pressing forward in spite of all the failures and mistakes of the past. There is much strenuous forgetting as well as strenuous exertion to get ahead. Some spend so much time bragging of their past triumphs that they have no time to gain new victories and end by being driven from all that they had gained. Forget some things; especially forget that you ever were great in any way. Humble yourself under the mighty hand of God, and He will do all the lifting up you need.

"That I may know Him!" There is nothing else in life to be compared to this in worth. Whoever or whatever else we may know or not know, let us know Him. The fellowship of His sufferings and of the power of His resurrection. The goal this year is set before us. Shall we not run with patience the race that we may obtain the crown of everlasting life?

Let us lay aside every weight and sin, and look with fixed on Jesus, who is the beginning and the ending of the race for life, and let us run with patience and steadiness. Then shall we be able to say when we have finished our course, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, and henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of rejoicing which Christ shall give to me at his appearing."

The Spirit of Love.

The spirit of love, wherever it is, is its own blessing and happiness, because it is the truth and reality of God in the soul, and therefore it is the same joy of life and is the same good to itself everywhere and on every occasion. The spirit of love does not want to be rewarded or honored or esteemed. Its only desire is to propagate itself and become the blessing and happiness of everything that we are in it, for the wrath of an enemy, the treachery of a friend and every other evil only helps the spirit of love to be more triumphant, to live its own life and find all its own blessings in a higher degree.—William Law.

Pleasures Not Lost.

The pleasures of companionship are not lost when one becomes a Christian; neither is the joy of following one's own inclinations. The difference is that both desires and companionships are changed in character. As these are made better our real happiness is increased, and we are the gainers.—United Presbyterian.

A Morning Thought.

What if, some morning, when the stars were falling,
And the dawn whitened, and the east was clear,
Strangely, peace and rest fell on me from the presence
Of a benignant spirit standing near!

And I should tell him, as he stood beside me:
"This is our earth—most friendly earth and fair.
Daily its sun and shore through sun and shadow
Faithful it turns, robed in its azure air.

"There is blest living there, loving and serving,
And quest of truth and serene friendships dear.
But one dark spirit! Earth has one destroyer—
His name is Death. Flee, lest he find thee here!"

And what if then, while the still morning brightened,
And freshened in the elm the summer's shade,
Should gravely smile on me the gentle angel
And take my hand and say, "My name is Death"?

—Christian Work and Evangelist.

WHY PEOPLE OF ITALY HATE GABRIELLE D' ANNUNZIO.

He Is the Greatest Living Writer of His Nationality, But Does Not Represent Its Genuine Characteristics.

Boston (Mass.) Special.

No one is a prophet in his own country, they say, and this saying never fitted any man better than Gabrielle d' Annunzio, whose books and tragedies are known all over the world. "I am quite positive, though, that there is no man in any country who is more despised and hated than d'Annunzio in his own country," says Carlo de Fornaro, writing in the Critic. Many will not even admit his genius, his literary talent; they believe that he is a passing fad, not to be compared with the pagan poet, Carducci, or the idealistic novelist, Fogazzaro. His poetry is too pompous, too erudite, too affected, they say. A very cultured Florentine patrician voiced the feeling of many when he said to me: "My dear friend, only d'Annunzio can understand d' Annunzio's poetry." Outside of a little clique of friends and admirers, there is nobody who has a good word for him, and the choicest, the most expressive, and likewise the most insulting, epithets are used in describing the man in private and public life.

One of the ablest critics in Italy has called him a parvenu and a poseur: "A parvenu in private life and a poseur in literature." His extravagantly extensive wardrobe is always a proof of this assertion, "very much like the foppery and ostentatious sartorial caricature of Mascagni in the early days of his financial success, with the actor's inborn love for display and love of admiration." Mr. de Fornaro believes, moreover, that Italians are bitter toward d'Annunzio because the rest of the world takes him as the standard of Italian morality, as the world takes Zola for that of France.

Italians are, as a rule, not prudish or Puritanical, but they are not as licentious as the French; they are simpler and very democratic. They are charitable, and not at all cruel and vindictive, as foreigners would pretend. The best proof of this assertion is that Italy, excepting Switzerland and a few states in North America, is the only country without a death penalty. The average Italian is charitable toward the criminal, and if he can find an excuse to palliate his sins he will readily do it. It seems, though, that d'Annunzio has been too much even for their indulgence; and one reason for this bitterness toward him is that they believe that, owing to his popularity abroad, foreigners take him as a standard of Italian morality or immorality. This feeling of antagonism is so strong that at the first nights of his plays there is always a great deal of hissing, shouting and boisterous cat-calls, often resulting in the ringing down of the curtain before the second act is over.

It is a noteworthy fact, says this writer, that d'Annunzio's fame as a novelist is greater in France, Germany, England, and even the United States, than in Italy. The translations of his books in those countries are a source of income never attained in Italy even by the most popular novelist there. Yet he is not a patriot in the true sense of the word.

Has Male Heart a Value?

Ought a girl to pay for the fun of breaking a man's heart? This is a poser not only for Cupid, but for a Pennsylvania Judge who will have to decide. Elmer Oliver, of Pittsburg, Pa., has sued Elizabeth Alspaugh for $5,000 because she jilted him. When he asked her why, she tossed her head and said: "O, because." Young men all over the country will watch this case with anxiety. If the judge decides that Elmer's heart is worth $5,000 or $3,000, or even $100, a great sigh of relief will go up from all over the land. Few young women will care to pay over $100 for the fun of crushing a male heart. Let one best young man's heart and making it look like a smashed beet. But if the court decides that a male heart cannot be dented more than 88 cents' worth, there may be a fearful smashing of engagements every leap year.

What the Electrograph Does.

The electrograph is a new and ingenious invention. It receives a telephone message and writes it down on a record to be used in the phonograph. This will prevent all danger of misunderstanding, and, if your telephone clerk is absent, the electrograph will take the message for him. When you return to your office, you can read off all the messages that arrived while your office was closed.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 1.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Our goals for 1905.—Phil. iii, 13-16. (Consecration meeting.)

It is quite a common thing in these days for Christian people to have daily Bible texts to guide and lead them for the day. If such a text be wanted for the first day of the year, no better can be found than these inspired words of Paul to the Philippians. Nor need we stop here with them, but can take them for a yearly text, to be applied each day of the year, or even a life text, for they would apply to the Christian's life from the start to the finish. Every Christian Endeavorer, therefore, could do nothing better than to commit them on the first day of 1905, if they are not already known, and then refer to them each day of the year as an inspiration to renewed energy both in his personal life and in his life of service in connection with the church and the society.

A goal marks the end of an achievement. The athletes in the Grecian games pressed toward the goal or mark. When they reached it, they no longer strove. There was nothing then to strive for. Hence if we seek goals for 1905 it is a confession that the ends we strive for have not been attained. Paul made this confession before he had placed his goal before him: "Not as though I had already attained or were already perfect, but I follow after." Paul knew nothing of the doctrine of perfection, nor should we be deceived by thinking that we have attained in this life. Since Adam's fall the only perfect man who has ever lived was our Lord, and we will not become perfect in this life; hence the need of selecting goals of inspiration toward which by the grace of God we shall constantly advance.

The one goal toward which the apostle declares that he presses is "the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." No more important goal could be placed before us. It includes all other worthy goals. He who strives for the highest goal in life necessarily wins the lesser ones. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." The prize is eternal life in Jesus Christ. God on high calls us to it. Let us therefore press earnestly and constantly toward the goal—where such a prize is the reward. Beside it the paltry worldly goals sink into insignificance, and none so exalted as God calls us on to success and victory. Under His leadership we cannot fail. "Let us therefore run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

"Tis God's all saving love we prize,
That calls thee from on high;
'Tis His own hand presents the prize
To thine aspiring eye.

Blessed Saviour, introduced by thee,
Have I my race begun,
And, crowned with victory, at Thy feet
I'll lay my laurels down.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xiv, 10-16; Isa. xlv, 22; Matt. v, 48; vi, 33; xxii, 36-40; Rom. xii, 1, 2; I Cor. x, 31; xv, 58; Heb. xii, 1, 2; Rev. ii, 10.

A Southland Leader.

Rev. Arthur J. Smith, D. D., the evangelist who is now making his home in New York state, was one of the very early friends of Christian Endeavor in the south. He served as state secretary for one of the southern states and made a reputation as a leader of ability and executive skill. He not infrequently addresses state and other large Christian Endeavor conventions and is always heard with acceptance and profit.

REV. A. J. SMITH, D. D.

New Jersey Cheer.

Two hundred and forty Young People's societies succeeded in making a gain in membership the past year of 10 per cent or over, while 115 Juniors made the same gain. The Sixth Baptist Young People's society of Paterson led the state, its record being a gain of 300 per cent. Seven other Young People's societies gained 100 per cent or more.

The Westminster Presbyterian of Jersey City led the junior societies with a gain of 280 per cent. Seventeen other Junior societies also succeeded in gaining 100 per cent or more. Thus Christian Endeavor moves forward, as Dr. Clark puts it, "by leaps and by bounds."

How a Committee Won a Tramp.

The chairman of the good literature committee for the Epworth Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is the wife of the station agent. For years she has at her own expense supplied the waiting room with gospel leaflets. One day a tramp, stopping there, read one of them, and as a result he gave up tramping, returned home and is now living a Christian life. —Mary L. Nichols in Christian Endeavor World.

Our Best.

We must not be content with a half alive society. Away with the idea that anything is good enough if only it is labeled Christian work. The best is none too good for Christ. He gave us His all. Nothing less on our part is a worthy recognition of His blessed sacrifice.—Rev. Dr. Edwin Forrest Hallenback in Empire State Notes.

RECORD REALTY DEAL

Highest Price Per Foot Paid for Dunlap Building.

SCHWEDS' PURCHASE

Property at the Corner of Front and Somerset Streets—Newspaper to Remove.

Paying the highest price per foot front in the history of Plainfield realty deals, Schwed Brothers have bought the Dunlap building at the corner of Somerset and Front streets. The building is now occupied by the Courier-News and a number of lawyers and real estate men. Abraham B. Dunlap, of East Front street, the owner, placed the property in the hands of Elston M. French & Company on Monday and the concern disposed of it to the highest bidder after many bidders made offers to buy it. The price per foot cannot be learned.

It is not known what use Schwed Brothers will make of the property but it is quite likely that they will make it an addition to their present store. The newspaper plant will be removed before February 1, to the Marsh building, corner of Park avenue and Second street.

P. M. French, father of E. M. French, originally owned the tract and he sold it to Webster & Marsh, who built a store in 1853 and conducted a dry goods business. Mr. Dunlap bought the building in 1879.

MYSTERIOUS CREATURE ALARMS MOUNTAIN COLONY

FIRST KILLS WATCH DOG AND THEN PARTIALLY DEVOURS IT.

The small colony of residents at the foot of the mountains just off Clinton avenue on the way to Washington's Rock are greatly stirred up over the invasion of a mysterious four-footed creature in their midst. Nobody has seen it as yet but there are rumors that it is a ferocious animal and some of the more timid declare it to be a wild cat that has somehow or other made its way along the Watchung range from Pennsylvania.

For some time the dogs kept by the residents whimpered and gave cries of fear during the night and day, George Perrine, who is engineer at the Manganese Safe plant, made a discovery that convinced him and his neighbors that they had better be on the alert. His faithful watch dog which was supposed to be without fear had been killed in some manner before its kennel and had been half eaten, to all appearances by an animal with very sharp claws. Perrine or none of his family had heard any struggle and they are at a loss to account for the canine's allowing anything to get so near to it without making an outcry. An attempt was made to track the mysterious visitor but so far it has eluded the parties that started out. In the meantime all manner of traps are being set and the number of watch dogs have almost been doubled.

CONSCIENCE STRICKEN, RETURNS STOLEN GOODS

SHOPLIFTER LEAVES A BUNDLE IN FRONT OF LOCAL STORE.

Conscience stricken for having picked up a number of articles in Woodbull & Martin's store on East Front street, a Plainfield woman employed a novel method of returning the goods. Thursday morning an ordinary package was left in front of the store. It was allowed to remain there during the greater part of the morning, no one claiming it. In the meantime, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, manager of the housefurnishing goods department at the store, noticed the package and took it inside.

Later when no one called for it, Mr. Vanderhoef opened the package and was surprised to find a note informing the firm that the writer had taken the articles from the store and being very sorry for her act, took this method of returning the goods, the total value of which amounted to about $15. The woman did not disclose her name.

Used Five Substitutes.

There were five substitute letter-carriers and clerks at the local post-office—Frank Bailey, Daniel Shea, Robert Goldsack, William Callahan and Elmer Squires. Owing to the holiday rush they were all used.

Mayor Huckle's Message.

Mayor-elect James F. Huckle's message to the Common Council for 1906 will not be read until the first adjourned meeting in January. The first meeting will be solely for organization and announcement of committees.

KRIS VISITS THE ELKS

Distributes Presents to Members of Plainfield Lodge.

GIFT TO EXALTED RULER

Made the Recipient of An Emblematic Charm, Studded With Six Diamonds.

Benevolent old Kris Kringle paid his first local visit at the meeting of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., last evening, and distributed gifts with a lavishness that startled even his oldest acquaintances. One hundred and fifty members of the organization were in attendance and every one was remembered, not only with presents but also a card containing a jingling rhyme that made known his frailties or hobbies to the assemblage. Kris wore his travelling suit of furs but his voice and actions were suspicious-ly like those of George O. Stevens, explaining why the Elks were kept laughing from the time that he came in until he went out.

The hall was a mass of Christmas wreaths and greens in honor of the visit and to facilitate Kris' distributions, a large tree beautifully decorated and lighted with tiny electric globes borne innumerable small packages. As they were taken down, the verse on the card attached was read, revealing that fact, that during his four days' detention at home by illness a certain member of the lodge had been thinking busily.

With the conclusion of Kris' part of the programme, the feature of the gift making came when former Senator Charles A. Reed stepped forward and presented Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon with a magnificent elk's tooth in the form of a charm set with six brilliant diamonds. In making the presentation he spoke of the phenomenal growth of the lodge under the present officers and attributed no small degree of its success to the exalted ruler. Before its establishment in Plainfield, the Senator said, Elkdom had not been properly regarded in the city but through No. 885 its high ideals and lofty principles had been disseminated and it now has the confidence of the people. The presentation was a complete surprise to the exalted ruler and though taken back for the moment he quickly gained his composure and thanked the donors, at the same time replying to Senator Reed's remarks.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to a period of sociability, during which an informal programme of songs and addresses was given. The committee which arranged and had charge of the celebration consisted of Samuel P. T. Wilbur, George Johnston, H. C. VanEmburgh, Charles A. Reed, William N. Runyon and W. F. Williams.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS FRAMED FOR NEW YEAR

"SHERIFF" CARNEY SETS FORTH SOME WHOLESOME RULES.

David J. Carney, the Democratic leader of North Plainfield, has gotten together a set of "Good Resolutions for 1906," which he recommends to all, irrespective of "race, color or previous condition of servitude." Among the number are these:

That I will live within my income —even if I have to get trusted to do it.

That I will be polite to everybody—except to people I don't like.

That I won't give anybody advice—until I know the kind of advice they are anxious to follow.

That no man shall beat me in politeness—not as long as politeness continues to be as cheap as it now is.

That if lovely women smacks me on one cheek—I will turn to her the other also.

That if a man call me a fool—I won't ask him to prove it.

That I will lead a moral life—even if I lose a good deal of fun by it.

That if my friend loses on a horse race I will weep with him—while inwardly rejoicing that I missed being "stpped."

That it is just as natural to be born rich as poor—but seldom so convenient.

That I won't run after happiness—but if I see any lying around loose, I will close in on it.

Getting Ready to Build.

Civil Engineer Frank J. Hubbard has been engaged during the past few days surveying the property on Leland and South avenues, recently purchased by the Rogers' Silver Corporation and upon which it is planned to erect a large modern factory in the spring. The property purchased is the same vicinity by the New York Vacuum Cleaning Company will also be surveyed within a short time. Work on a factory for this company will be started in the spring.

MRS. H. K. WRIGHT DEAD

Wife of Missionary Dies at Their Post in China.

NEWS BY CABLE

Major W. D. W. Miller's Daughter Married to Rev. Mr. Wright Two Years Ago.

News of the death of Mrs. Harrison King Wright at Ningpo, China, on Wednesday, was received by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William DeWitt Miller, of East Seventh street, by cable Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Wright's maiden name was Maude Howe Miller. She was twenty-nine years old and graduated from the Plainfield High School in 1894. The remains will be interred at Ningpo.

Mrs. Wright, with her husband, Rev. Harrison King Wright, prepared for the mission work in China, and both were under the direction of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, he being sent to China by the Rutgers Memorial Presbyterian church, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were married in this city in May, 1903, and soon afterward prepared for their journey to the Orient. They were located on the coast about 120 miles south of Shanghai.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK INCREASES INTEREST RATE

DIRECTORS ANNOUNCE IT WILL BE FOUR PER CENT. AFTER JANUARY 1.

The directors of the First National Bank announced today that they have advanced the rate of interest on savings accounts from three to four per cent., the same to go into effect January 1. This is the largest rate paid by any banking institution in the city and equals that maintained by many of the large banking houses in New York.

Simultaneously with this announcement, the directors of the same bank declared a semi-annual dividend of four per cent. from the earnings of the past six months, payable to stockholders on and after January 3, 1905, making the eighty-first dividend. The bank has been enjoying a prosperous year and the increase in the interest rate has been the natural result.

A COTILLION.

Given by Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank in Daughter's Honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Simeon A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, gave a cotillion last Thursday for their daughter, Miss Helen Moore Cruikshank, the affair being attended by sixty of the younger society folks.

The cotillion was led by Frank Patterson, of Metuchen. Following the dance supper was served. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Patterson, of Metuchen; John Dunlap and Miss Agnes Dunlap, of Philadelphia; Miss Ann Sloane, of St. Paul, and Harry Hoffstot, of Montclair.

Christmas Tree for Poor Children.

The Christmas tree and entertainment given by the Elks and the Organized Aid Society at Reform Hall Saturday afternoon was in every way a success and a source of pleasure to many poor children. Professor Henderson delighted the children with tricks and magic, and each was presented with a gift from the tree. The affair was in charge of a committee from the Organized Aid Society.

Walpole Loses $40.

When Lyons Walpole closed his hotel at Scotch Plains Saturday night he left a colored man asleep in the bar-room. Later he discovered that $40, which he had placed behind the bar, had disappeared, and the colored man could not be found. The man had been employed about the place for some time. Mr. Walpole suspects that the negro took the money.

Will Reside in Mexico.

Miss Lydia M. Thorp, a resident of the borough, was married Thursday afternoon at El Paso, Texas, to J. H Kuhlman, of El Oro, Mexico. They will make their home at El Oro, where the groom is in business. Mrs. Kuhlman is a sister of Mrs. Maurice Andeler and Miss Georgianna Thorp, of Westervelt avenue.

Approaching Wedding.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of George R. Quintell and Miss Jennie McCleery, both of Denver, Col., on Wednesday, January 18. The prospective groom is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith, of Grandview avenue.

Offering for Faith Chapel.

The offering at the First Baptist church on Sunday was for Faith chapel, a statement in behalf of that mission being made at the morning service by O. W. McCutchen.

OSHKOSH VISITORS DUE HERE JAN. 20 AND 21

FUN MAKERS TO BE LET LOOSE IN PLAINFIELD.

Fifty students of Oshkosh here are now hard at work preparing for their appearance on the nights of January 20 and 21 next. Rehearsals are being held three nights weekly and a splendid entertainment is promised. The many improvements which Charles J. Fisk has so kindly made to the Casino, preparatory to this event are now about completed. The stage has been thrown back twenty feet and widened considerably and it now offers about as much floor space as many of the New York theatres. This has necessitated entirely new stage setting and special scenery, for it can truely be said that the whole Oshkosh creation is practically original, embodying many novel ideas and songs. The seating capacity of the Casino has been somewhat changed and three new boxes have been placed on the Arlington avenue side.

So many requests have been made for tickets that it has been decided to place them on sale, and reserved seats may now be obtained at Armstrong's. The music, most of which is original, will be handled by nine pieces under the same director as last year.

"Oshkosh at Home" offers many chances for much fun, original music, songs and dances. It may be well to add full advantage has been taken of these opportunities. "Oshkosh" will be presented by entirely local amateur talent which, incidently, would be difficult to improve upon. It is safe to say a thoroughly good performance will be given and it is the intention to turn over whatever may be possible to local interests.

SAENGERBUND CHILDREN ENJOY A CHRISTMAS TREE

EACH ONE RECEIVES A GIFT INCLUDING CANDY AND ORANGES.

The usual Christmas tree celebration took place in Saengerbund Hall Sunday afternoon, for the benefit of the children of Gesang and Turn Verein members. The young people marched around a large tree and each one was presented with some gift and candy and oranges by Mrs. Rummell, Mrs. Meiser, Mrs. Meyer and Mrs. Beiter. Miss Edith Meyer rendered music for the marching and afterward an entertainment took place to which the following boys and girls contributed: Ernest Barre, Lillie Stemmenberger, Anna Waegler, Frederick Haurand, Willie Stemmenberger and George Haurand.

The affair was arranged by a committee from the society comprised as follows: Joseph Haurand, August Wolf, William Gardner, Henry Bruober, Mrs. August Melcher, Mrs. William Beiter, Mrs. John Reiser and Mrs. Henry Rummell.

Captain Martin Won Turkey.

Captain Martin won the turkey at the competition rifle shoot given under the auspices of Company K at the armory Saturday night. His score was 47 out of a possible 50, and was the result of a hot competition between Martin, Littell and Vosseller. In the first shoot each made a 46, and in the final shoot he decided the winner. Captain Martin took a 47 and the other two kept their former score. The shoot was begun on Thursday, when Sergeant Littell's score of 44 was the highest. In all about twenty-five competed for the prize, and among that number many good scores were made. The shoot was in charge of George Agger and was well conducted.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH VISITS PLAINFIELD

CONFIRMATION AT ST. STEPHEN'S AND AT CHURCH OF THE HEAVENLY REST.

Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey, confirmed the largest class in the history of St. Stephen's church, at the Christmas services Sunday morning. The programme as published was rendered entire. The class comprised sixteen persons, one being detained at home by illness and the Bishop confirmed her there prior to the service. The principal service was at 11 o'clock when there was high celebration with holy communion. In addition to the sermon by the Bishop he also made an address to the confirmation class. There was also one baptism by the rector, Rev. Mr. Peck. The musical service was well rendered under the direction of Charles Suhr, organist, and the church was filled to overflowing with worshippers. It was one of the red letter days in the history of this parish and one long to be remembered.

The only other visitation made by Bishop Scarborough on Sunday was in the afternoon at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, where he confirmed a class.

Those who were confirmed by Bishop Scarborough were Miss Mary Lodgate, Frank Bailes, Margaret Hulick, Agnes VanNorden and Charles Ludgate.

Despite the stormy weather there was a large attendance at the reception given the Bishop by Rev. Arthur Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church, at the rectory, in East Sixth street, Saturday night. The young men of the parish decorated the home of the rector with greens and wreaths.

Those who received with the Bishop were Rev. Arthur Peck and his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Peck; senior warden, Dr. Dupuy and Mrs. Dupuy and other women of the parish. Those who presided and assisted at the table in the dining room were Miss Edith Mattox, Miss Florence Mattox, Miss Mary Tygard, Miss Edith Lacey, Miss Helen Crook, Miss Helen Borrup, Miss Edith Bramble and Miss Myers.

AT THE HOSPITAL.

Patients Treated to a Christmas Tree and Entertainment.

The Christmas festivities at Muhlenberg Hospital Monday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock were greatly enjoyed by the patients, as well as the large number of visitors and those who assisted in the programme. There was a Christmas tree in each ward, well filled with gifts. The choir from Grace P. E. church was present and under the direction of Mrs. Freeman, organist, sang carols. During the exercises Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie made short addresses. He first spoke in the women's ward and then in the men's ward. His remarks were brief.

The hospital was well remembered with good things, there being an abundance of fruit, vegetables, turkey, chickens and 3 many other things. Those of the patients who were able to, enjoyed a Christmas dinner, and in other ways the day was made very pleasant for them.

Woodhull & Martin to Enlarge.

The firm of Woodhull & Martin has acquired the Hetfield property adjoining its building on East Front street, which is now occupied by Charles Kelderling and Ephraim Compton, and adjoins the property of Powlison & Jones. It is eventually the purpose of the firm to erect a brick and stone building on the property, undoubtedly using the upper part for flats and the ground floor for a store.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas MacNair, of Codington avenue, entertained their son from Catskill, N. Y., on Christmas.

FIERCE STORM RAGES

Efforts to Save Drumelzier Barred by Heavy Surf.

CAPTAIN AND CREW MAY PERISH.

Fog So Thick and Seas So Heavy That Rescue Work Is Almost Impossible, as It Stops Communication With Wrecked Vessel.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Efforts to earn whether Captain Nicholson and the crew of the British tramp steamer Drumelzier are still aboard the vessel, which is aground on the bar at Fire Island, have been unsuccessful, and last night the life savers were still watching from the beach in the hope of communicating with the ship.

Hidden in a black fog and pounded by fierce seas rolling from the southeast the steamer is in imminent danger of going to pieces. If her captain and crew of thirty-two men are still in the ship they face an almost certain death in the heavy surf breaking over the sandy beach.

The captain would not let the life savers take off his crew yesterday when the seas were not running so high, and it is now too late to help them. No lifeboat in the world could be launched in the teeth of the southeast gale that lashed up great waves and crashed them down on the shore.

The fog was so thick that the stranded vessel could not be seen from the shore, 200 yards away. Out on the mud bar, where the big vessel was last seen rocking in the waves, there was nothing to be seen but a black haze, so dense that not even signal rockets could be seen from shore.

Two rescuing tugs were by the vessel last night, but no report has been received from them, and it is thought they may have left to escape the wrath of the rising storm.

The crews of both the Fire Island and Oak Island life saving stations are on the beach opposite the Drumelzier, but they were helpless. They could barely see one another's faces as they stood huddled over the fire they had built on the beach for warmth and as a beacon light to the shipwrecked sailors.

The wind freshened from the southeast, and the waves came in so fierce and heavy that the men on the beach thought it best to keep a black lookout on board the Drumelzier. The only hope was that the wrecking tugs had rescued the crew in the darkness.

The surf was too high for a lifeboat to be launched, and it was impossible to get in communication with the Drumelzier. Should the weather clear an effort will be made to shoot a line to the Drumelzier, but it was feared that the ship would go to pieces before that is possible.

The Drumelzier belongs to the Astral Shipping company of Liverpool, England, but is under charter to Barber & Co. Until recently she was used between Baltimore and Daiquiri, Cuba, and her last two trips were very exciting. She encountered a hurricane that stove in all her boats and put a hole in her side. Three days overdue, she bobbled into Havana. Her crew consists of thirty-two men with Captain Nicholson, First Officer Hutchinson, Second Mate Smith, Third Mate Richardson and Chief Engineer Wood.

FOG CAUSED COLLISIONS.

Panic When Ferryboats Came Together In North River.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—While a dense fog hung over the river and harbor the ferryboats Bergen and Musconetcong of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western line crashed into each other near the Hoboken ferry slips, and for a few minutes there was a wild panic on both boats.

The Bergen struck the Musconetcong on the starboard quarter only a few feet abaft the paddle box.

The engines were reversed almost immediately on the Musconetcong, but the headway was such that the impact tore away about twenty-five feet of the cabin timbers on the men's side of the Bergen and all of the starboard railing.

As the two ferryboats came together there was a wild rush on the part of the men on the Bergen into the cabin. The shock was such that it threw twenty or more of the men off their feet.

In the women's cabin the panic was greater, as the passengers there had received no warning of the impending crash.

The ferryboat Chicago of the Pennsylvania ferry, loaded down with commuters, was also into by the New Haven railroad's big steam transport Maryland in the North river just off the Cortlandt street slip of the Pennsylvania ferry. The transport crashed into the rear of the ferryboat and tore away a large part of the deckwork over the stern.

Among the crowd of passengers on the Chicago were many women, and a panic ensued when the accident occurred.

High Wind Freaks In Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 28.—High winds prevailed yesterday throughout Indiana. Much damage was done to wires. At Elkinsville a schoolhouse was unroofed, and several children were injured. Barns were blown down and several head of stock killed. In Vincennes the wind unroofed the Blackford glass plant and blew down a portion of the walls, causing a loss of $15,000 on building and stock.

Drought Over at Port Edward.

FORT EDWARD, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Twelve hours of steady rainfall has relieved to a considerable extent the drought of the past three weeks. Paper mills along the Hudson river, employing thousands, which were on the point of shutting down on account of scarcity of water, will not be interrupted. Though the rain was heartily welcomed, it interfered seriously with the operation of railroads and telegraph lines by freezing as it fell. No schedule was maintained during the greater part of the day on electric roads, and one telegraph company was completely tied up.

Storm In the West.

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—One of the most severe storms of recent years has raged through the territory lying between the Rocky mountains and the great lakes since early yesterday and has caused much trouble to street car companies, railroads and telegraph companies. The latter were the greatest sufferers, for the blizzard which swept through the west and northwest during the last twenty-four hours was preceded by a heavy fog and drizzling rain which made the wires almost unworkable.

Ship Lying on Her Side.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The captain of the Fire Island life saving station reported last night that the schooner Frank W. McCullough, from Georgetown, S. C., which went ashore Dec. 23 on Fire Island bar, is afloat and lying on her side. He has sent for assistance and will make an effort to save the vessel.

Fear of Water Famine Past.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Nearly twenty-four hours of continuous rain throughout western New York has broken the drought which threatened a water famine and has been a great relief to this district.

WAS CECILIA MOSS.

Girl Who Jumped From Three Story Room In New York Identified.

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 28.—The young woman calling herself Cecil Hall, who was killed by plunging from the third story window of a lodging house in West Forty-sixth street, New York, has been identified as Cecilia Moss, aged twenty-three years, of this city. Her mother, Mrs. Thomas Moss, residing at 319 West Marion street, received the following telegram:

"Sorry to tell you your daughter has committed suicide. What shall I do with body?"

The telegram was signed Mrs. M. Webb, New York. Mrs. Moss telegraphed back that the body should be sent to this city.

Mrs. Moss is unable to give much information as to her daughter's recent career. About a year ago the girl went to Washington. Later she wrote to her mother that on Sept. 6 she had married Clinton Frazer of that city, whom she said was a clerk in the employ of the government. Some weeks ago she wrote that she and her husband would spend Christmas here with Mrs. Moss, but a letter received a few days since announced she would go to New York.

TO EXPLOIT HERCULANEUM.

Professor Waldstein Wishes to Invoke Roosevelt's Aid.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Professor Charles Waldstein, professor of fine arts in Kings college, Cambridge, England, who came here on the invitation of Secretary Hay as the latter's guest, was entertained at luncheon by President Roosevelt today. Hay accompanied him. Professor Waldstein gave the president an earnest invitation to join in an international movement to accomplish the thorough excavation of Herculaneum. The plan, it was explained, does not involve governmental aid.

Professor Waldstein gave a lecture before the Washington Society of the Archaeological Institute of America. He explained that Herculaneum never had been so thoroughly explored as Pompeii, and his idea now was, through international co-operation, to accomplish that result. The movement, it was explained, already has begun in different countries of the world, the emperor of Germany, Queen Margherita and the kings of Italy and Great Britain having expressed their interest and hearty support.

Not Yet Perfected.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 28.—Owing to a broken motor which could not be easily repaired the Baldwin airship, California Arrow, was unable to make the return flight to the city from the place where it landed after trial, several miles south of the city. The car was allowed to escape from the bag, and the machine was hauled into the city in a wagon. Baldwin will continue his experiments here after the motor of his machine has been repaired.

Charged With Election Frauds.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 28.—An information equivalent to an indictment was returned by Assistant Circuit Attorney Hancock today in the office of the clerk of the court of criminal corrections charging John L. Gillespie, former partner of "Lord" Barrington, under sentence of death for the murder of James P. McCann, and later partner of John L. Sullivan in the saloon business, with aiding and abetting in the fraudulent registration of 101 names.

Valencia a Total Wreck.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Dec. 28.—The German third class cruiser Bremen, which returned here from Port au Prince, Haiti, reports that the Atlas line steamer Valencia is ashore in a bad position at that place and that she is likely to be a total wreck. The vessel is lying on her side in the mud, and her decks are being washed by the sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The sixth annual tournament of the triangular college chess league, consisting of the universities of Brown, Cornell and Pennsylvania, between two students from each of these colleges, opened this morning. Following are the names of the players: W. W. Burton and P. V. Van Arsdale, Brown; J. R. Mitchell and J. F. Darling, Cornell, and E. H. Miller and M. B. Kirkpatrick, Pennsylvania.

New Shell For Wisconsin University.

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Coach Andrew M. O'Dea of the University of Wisconsin crew has purchased here an eight oar shell of the same pattern as the boats used by the Cornell crews. Mr. O'Dea says he will use the new boat in the intercollegiate races next spring and that he expects to put into it the best crew Wisconsin has ever turned out.

Mud Upset Calculations.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28.—Overnight rains caused a mud bath and upset all calculations. Topic and Gregor K. were the only winning favorites.

Royal White a Winner.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28.—Royal White, at 30 to 1, brought woe to the talent at Oakland.

Fatal Explosion at Braddock.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 28.—John Guy, foreman of bricklayers, was burned to death and five others seriously injured in an explosion in Furnace J of the Edgar Thomson plant of the Carnegie Steel company at Braddock. Of the injured, who were all foreigners, Michael Pasnick will die. The furnace had been blown out for repairs and the men were at work relining it when gas which accumulated and ignited from the heat, causing the explosion.

Big Hotel For Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 28.—A modern hotel containing 400 rooms and costing more than a million dollars is to be erected on the site of the Pike Opera House building, which burned to the ground two years ago after a memorable history beginning before the civil war. Mr. E. Ingalls, president of the Big Four railway, is credited with the success of the present plan.

Gas Explosion Wrecked Hotel.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Dec. 28.—A gas machine used for lighting the Columbia hotel here exploded and wrecked the building. A porter who was in the room with the machine was picked up fifty feet away unconscious and probably fatally hurt. James Ham, a clerk, and Mary Flinn, a waitress, were seriously injured. They will recover.

Lacrosse In Blizzard's Grip.

LACROSSE, Wis., Dec. 28.—Lacrosse and the surrounding country is in the grip of the worst blizzard that has visited the section in years. Street car service is blockaded, and it is with difficulty that the railroads are getting passenger trains through. Telegraph and telephone communication in all directions out of this city is badly interrupted. The storm has reached a depth of from twelve to fifteen inches on the level.

Pensacola Citizen Murdered.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Dec. 28.—Travis Johnson, a well known citizen, was murdered in rooms at the Arlington club, his head being nearly severed from the body by either a knife or a hatchet. John Griffith, a marine engineer, was arrested almost immediately and charged with the crime. The motive was robbery.

Life Sentence Convict Free.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 28.—The court of pardons has paroled James J. Titus, who was serving a life term in the state prison for the killing of Tillie Smith. Titus' crime was committed at the Hackettstown Young Ladies' school in 1885.

PLAINFIELD COUNTRY CLUB

Title of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is Changed.

DUES ARE INCREASED

Membership Limit Is Increased to 400—Initiation Fee Is to Be Raised.

A thoroughly representative attendance of members marked the meeting of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, at the Casino, Thursday, called for the purpose of adopting an entirely new constitution and by-laws and changing the name of the club. It was unanimously voted to change the name and hereafter the organization will be known as The Plainfield Country Club.

Among the most important features in the new constitution is that the dues are increased as follows: Active, $30 to $35; associate, $8 to $12; junior associate, $4 to $6. The initiation fee will remain at $15, as at present, until April 30, 1905, when it will be increased to $25. The present membership of the club is 325, the limit, and this was increased to 400. There are now many applications from those wishing to join the club. The increased revenue to be received by reason of raising the dues will be used toward improving the course and engaging a clerk at the clubhouse.

The new constitution has been very carefully prepared. After the meeting, the Board of Trustees, met and adopted a new set of by-laws. In the spring a new club book will be issued. This will contain the names of members, the constitution and by-laws and other information.

George P. Mellick, president of the club, presided at the meeting and Leighton Calkins acted in his capacity as secretary.

CONGREGATIONALISTS IN CHARMING CANTATA

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT SCORED DECIDED SUCCESS.

"The Charmed Garden," an attractive Christmas cantata, formed the leading feature in the annual entertainment of the Congregational church Sunday-school Friday. The church was tastefully festooned in green garlands, and a huge Christmas tree added much to the general effect.

In the center of the platform was an imitation garden wall, composed of boxes of candy in the form of bricks. As the conclusion of the cantata three roses bloomed up from behind the wall, and at the wave of the fairy's wand turned into three maidens who distributed the candy bricks. These human roses wereMisses Hazel Harris, Emma VanAlstyne and Elizabeth Harper. Harold Miller took the part of the sand-man, while Gansie VanAlstyne and Walter Foud were shepherds and Kashline Phillips fairy queen. The attendants were the Misses Nellie Steiner, Katherine Day, Amy Wynant, Marguerite Fisher.

In addition to the cantata, Miss Marie Murray, of Brooklyn, and Willard Wadsworth rendered a duet entitled "Calm Is the Night."

CHRISTMAS RUSH AT POSTOFFICE BREAKS RECORD

LOCAL CARRIERS ACQUIT THEMSELVES CREDITABLY IN DELIVERIES.

The Christmas holiday rush at the postoffice was probably the greatest in its history, yet before 5 o'clock Monday afternoon every letter, as well as the thousands of packages and parcels of every description were delivered. At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the office looked like a big department store. Sleighs, as well as wagons of every description, were used by the carriers to deliver the mail matter and these were lined up on the Madison avenue side of the office awaiting turns. It practically took every carrier his prescribed eight hours to make one delivery yesterday and it was under difficulty that they made the rounds in the snow and slush.

Postmaster Bird is much gratified with the work of his staff and the carriers. Everyone worked faithfully throughout the rush and Mr. Bird says that he does not believe that the service in any office was better than that of Plainfield's.

Highly Appreciated.

The owner and editor of The Daily Press on Saturday evening was presented with a handsome leather dress suit case by the nineteen employes of the office. The gift is highly appreciated by Mr. Force.

—The rector of Grace Church will be at his home to his parishoners and friends, at 809 Quilago place on Monday, January 2, from 3 to 7 o'clock.
